Senate Whips United to Force Money Bill Through and Give Wider Powers to Morgenthau

M'CooeyDies; Long Leader Of Brooklyn Democrats

End Comes as Power of Curry Ally Wanes Rapidly.

LaGuardia Victory Shook His Prestige

Speculation Rife as to Successor; Leaders Express Sorrow.

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—John H. McCooey, for 24 years the boss of Brooklyn Democrats and chief ally of Tammany Hall, died today.

The rotund, white-haired political leader of New York's heaviest-voting borough was 69 years old. He had been confined to his home for a week and expired of heart disease.

McCooey's death came as his power waned.

Only by fullest exertion of his strength did he stave off a sweep of his district leaders to Joseph V. McKee, the Independent Democrat, backed by James A. Farley in last November's mayoralty race, and hold the bulk of his organization in line for John P. O'Brien, the Tammany candidate for reelection.

In the landslide for Fiorello H. LaGuardia, the McCooey forces also lost heavily.

Dissatisfaction spread against his leadership and that of his closest associate, Tammany Leader John F. Curry.

Speculate on Successor.

Even as he lay on his deathbed, speculation ran rife as to his successor. McCooey also was Democratic National committeeman from New York.

Curry is vacationing in Miami. He notified Raymond O'Sullivan, secretary of Tammany Hall, that he would return for the funeral, to be held Wednesday in the Church of Our Lady of Victory. Burial will be in the Holy Cross Cemetery.

"It was a great shock," Curry messaged. "I had expected Mr. McCooey to join me here for a vacation."

With Curry facing a severe fight for retention of his Tammany leadership, the death of McCooey deprives him of valuable counsel.

News of the death spread quickly and steady lines of visitors called at the McCooey home.

Smith's Comment.

Comment came quickly from political leaders.

"I have known him for many years and was very close and friendly with him," said Alfred E. Smith.

With Tammany, McCooey held out to the last vote for the former governor and 1928 Presidential candidate in the 1932 Chicago convention that nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Makeshift peace with the Roosevelt forces soon resulted and McCooey joined the campaign's "board of strategy."

He was among President Roosevelt's guests at a White House reception early this month.

The Brooklyn boss tried hard to bring Smith into the last mayoralty campaign on the side of O'Brien and Tammany, but to no avail.

McCooey was one of the early sponsors of James J. Walker and joined Tammany in nominating him in 1925 to succeed John F. Hylan as mayor. The friendship between the leader and Walker held fast throughout the Seabury investigation that

Policeman's Error Drives Him Mad

Hunting Fugitives in France He Kills Wrong Man.

Mulhouse, France, Jan. 21 (AP).—This peaceful valley, near the Swiss frontier, was excited today by a manhunt for two Germans suspected of implication in a bank robbery at Basel, December 5.

A civilian mistaken for one of the fugitives was reported to have been killed by a policeman. The latter, the report said, became insane when he learned of his error.

Two policemen were shot in a Basel rooming house and two others wounded when the bank robbers were cornered near Laufon.

Dutch Ship Sinks In Panama Canal

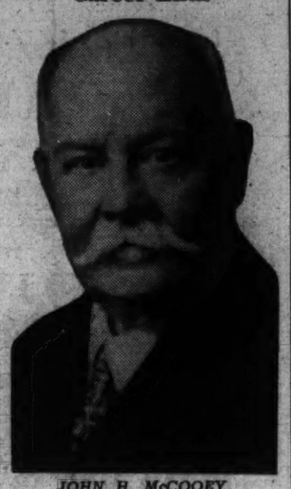

First to Founder in Zone; 23 Aboard Rescued.

Colon, C. Z., Jan. 21 (AP).—The Royal Netherland freighter Brion sank today in Gatun Lake, half a mile south of the lock, the first vessel ever to founder in Canal Zone waters.

Capt. W. H. Rohling and a crew of 22 were rescued by Panama Canal launches.

The foundering followed unsuccessful attempts to beach the vessel after she developed a dangerous list. With her bow touching the bank she gradually submerged.

Nye Charges Leak in NRA To Monopolies

Prices Held "Suspiciously Uniform" to Detriment of Independents.

There are "stool pigeons" in the National Recovery Administration who tip off big business when "little fellows" complain against unfair trade practices, Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, charged yesterday.

"Experience has shown," declared the Republican Progressive, who is openly at war with Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, "that though a complainant has been assured by a compliance board that he would not be compromised in any way, it has been only a matter of hours before his competitor knew the nature of the complaint and who made it. Life has been made that much more miserable for the independent business man."

The Senator's charge was made during the course of an interview with The Post following the President's order of Saturday, which transferred adjudication of NRA complaints to the Federal Trade Commission or the Department of Justice. The order stated, however, that they first must go through the Recovery Administration.

Fears for Confidence.

"I fear independents are not going to have such confidence as will permit some of them to file complaints with compliance boards of the NRA," declared the North Dakotan.

Senator Nye made it clear that he is not through with the fight which blazed up last week when National Recovery Administrator Johnson went to New York and delivered a decidedly pungent address on NRA critics, including Senator Nye and Borah. That there will be developments aplenty this week is certain. Gen. Johnson, whose dislike for the Federal Trade Commission is well known, is not likely to take lying down the President's order of Saturday, though Senator Nye does not think it is drastic enough. The Senator pointed out that independent electric manufacturers complained about monopolistic features of their code last September, but full hearings on the matter have not yet been held.

Several weeks ago, The Post learned, the Federal Trade Commission submitted a confidential report to Administrator Johnson, which

Japanese Seized At Soviet Embassy

Tokyo Police Balk Attempt at Demonstration.

Tokyo, Jan. 21 (AP).—Police today arrested nine Japanese reactionaries attempting a demonstration at the Soviet Embassy.

The incident followed a mass meeting of the patriotic Kenkokukai Society, at which a resolution was adopted demanding that Russia withdraw troops from the Manchukuo border.

A delegation was named to present the resolution to Soviet Ambassador Yurenev. Police forcibly prevented the delegation from reaching the embassy and seized the leaders.

Wide Fraud On Pershing Bust Bared

Noted Americans Bilked for Memorial, U. S. Attorney Says.

Solicitor Obtained Cash Fraudulently, Postal Check Charges.

Scores of eminent Americans have been swindled of various sums aggregating $11,000 in a Nation-wide "racket" originating in Washington and operated under the guise of a project to present the Nation with a bust of Gen. John J. Pershing, according to revelations made yesterday by District Attorney Leo A. Rover.

Disclosure of the enterprise followed the arrest of Alfred Millard Layton, 35, at his apartment at the Kennedy-Warren Apartments, 3133 Connecticut avenue northwest. Investigators for Mr. Rover declared Layton was author of the scheme.

Layton was charged at police headquarters with using the mails to defraud. More than 15,000 letters are sai dto have been sent out to prominent Americans.

Former Vice President Dawes, W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; Andrew W. Mellon, Ogden L. Mills, Alfred P. Sloan, Adolph Ochs, and Charles M. Schwab were among the scores of distinguished men who had already sent in "contributions."

A bust of Gen. Pershing, executed by the late Moses W.Dykaar, internationally known sculptor, was the one which represented as being sought as a gift to the Nation. Dykaar was killed last March 10 in a plunge beneath the wheels of a New York subway tratin.

Mr. Rover said the alleged "racket" evidently began when Dykaar is said to have approached Layton to act as an agent in securing contributions to pay for the bust.

Layton sought out Maj. Gen. George O. Squier, U. S. A., retired, a close friend of Pershing's, Mr. Rover continued, and asked his opinion of the plan. Gen. Squier is said to hav renw. eghtl eieldp is said to have replied that he thought it would be fitting and proper to pay the sculptor for the bust and then presetn it to the Federal Government.

It was decided, Mr. Rover said, for Layton to circularize a group of about 50 friends of the wartime military commander and ask their aid. The sum of $5,000 wats deemed sufficiently to carry out the plan.

Instead, Mr. Rover said Layton obtained more than 30,000 sheets of expensive stationery, embossed with the heading: "General John J. Pershing Portrait Bust Committee, General George O. Squier, Chairman." General Squier charges that he did not give permission for use of his name, nor did he authorize printing of stationery, Mr. Rover said. The name of General Squier had been appended to the communications sent out.

Used Squier's Signature

General Squier told Mr. Rover that not only had Layton attached his signature without authority, but that he had received mail addressed to him (General Squier) and opened an account in a local bank, in which, he understood, Layton had accumulated a considerable sum of money upon which Layton had imposed the restriction that only he could draw checks.

Layton, it was charged, had all his mail addressed to a fashionable uptown hotel and then forwarded to his home address here. At no time, said Mr. Rover, did Layton

Mrs. Van Rensselaer, Writer, Dead at 82

New York, Jan. 21. (AP)—Mrs. Mariana Griswold Van Rensselaer, 82, writer, critic and widow of Schuyler Van Rensselaer, died at her home yesterday. She had suffered from heart disease several years.

Mrs. Van Rensselaer, a native of New York, was awarded the gold medal of the American Academy of Arts and Letters in 1923 for "distinction in literature."

Spaniards Break Amnesty Pledge to Jail 4 Americans

Madrid, Jan. 21 (AP).—The jailing of four convicted Americans, despite official assurance to the United States Ambassador Saturday that they could not be taken into custody until decision of the supreme court had ben officially announced, caused consternation in American circles today.

The four, including a woman, were convicted of attacking a civil guard in Mallorca, and were awaiting a formal pardon, which they had been assured the government was attempting to obtain for them following their conviction in the military courts.

The assurance given United States Ambassador Claude G. Bowers was in addition to a promise to speed the granting of the pardon, probably tomorrow.

Ambassador Bowers, as soon as he was informed from Mallorca of the imprisonment, communicated with the Spanish Foreign Minister, who promised an immediate investigation.

It was learned the Americans were again jailed because "somebody in Palma, Mallorca, wired the court they were about to escape."

Information here was that the four Americans, Mrs. Clinton B. Lockwood, of West Springfield, Mass.; her husband; Roger F. Mead, of New York, and Edmund A. Blodgett of Stamford, Conn., made no statements regarding the case.

U. S. Agents Join Search For Bremer

Anonymous Note Starts Hunt for Body in Country Snow.

Keenan Fears Banker Is Dead; His Father Seriously Ill.

St. Paul Minn., Jan. 21 (AP).—Possibility that Edward G. Bremer, kidnaped St. Paul banker, had been slain resulted in the dispatch of a squad of Federal agents to Anoka County today to assist local authorities in an intensive search of the area.

The postmaster of Anoka yesterday received an anonymous note informing him Bremer had been "bumped off" in that vicinity, but local police were at first inclined to discount the "tip."

Whether fresh information had been obtained leading to reversal of their opinion was not disclosed. Anoka is 20 miles from Minneapolis.

The note was penned in ink on stationery of the Union City Mission in Minneapolis.

Federal Agents Help.

The theory that the wealthy 37-year-old head of the Commercial State Bank, held for $200,000 ransom, might have been killed, was voiced by Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General in Washington.

Keenan declared "in the Bremer case we may have the misfortune of experiencing another Lindbergh situation."

Explaining the Justice Department is exerting every effort to cooperate with the elder Bremer's request for law enforcement agencies to desist in their attempts to apprehend the kidnapers until his son was safely returned, he added:

"Meanwhile we are attempting to keep negotiations secret." He appealed to newspapers to suppress certain details until the victim has been freed.

The family fought against waning confidence as the fourth day passed since Bremer was seized. The usual second note signed by the victim has not been received since the blood-stained Bremer automobile was found.

Secluded at his home, the elder Bremer was in a serious nervous condition.

A well authenticated source yesterday said contact was expected to be established Sunday.

Walter Magee, wealthy St. Paul contractor friend of the missing man, and named as contact man, was ready to turn over the $200,000 ransom. It was Magee who received an anonymous telephone message shortly after 10 a. m. last Wednesday when Bremer disappeared, after leaving his 8-year-old daughter, Betty, at school.

Pontiff Blesses Lambs, Ancient Rite at Vatican

Vatican City, Jan. 21 (U.P.)—The traditional ceremony of the blessing of two white lambs took place at the Vatican today, with Pope Pius XI participating.

The lambs were blessed first in a ritual at the tomb of St. Agnes, the Roman virgin who was martyred under Diocletian. The lambs are especially reared by the nuns of the St. Agnes convent each year. The wool is used to make the sacred "palliums," a small stole worn by popes, patriarchs and archbishops.

After the ceremony at St. Agnes' Church, the lambs, adorned with pale blue ribbon, were taken to the Vatican and presented to the Pope. He patted and blessed them. Then they were taken to the monastery of St. Cecilia and placed in the care of nuns.

London, Jan. 21. (U.P.)—On the grounds that sterilization of human beings is contrary to Christian principles, numerous clergymen throughout Britain today attacked it from their pulpits.

Library Denied to Half of City's Children; Branches Too Few

Main Building and Its Staff Always Taxed to Capacity.

(This is the first of a series of eight articles telling how Washington's public libraries serve the community and how this service should be expanded.)

By Felix Bruner.

A bus pulled up in front of the main public library and about 30 children, accompanied by a teacher, scrambled out. They were young children, evidently in a lower grade in elementary school. They had come to see a public library. The teacher explained that it was the first visit any of them had ever made to a library.

These children came from one of the better neighborhoods of Northwest Washington. They were only a few of the thousands of children living in that section. Yet they had never seen a library, because the only way they had of visiting one was to go by bus. There is no library branch in their neighborhood or even within walking distance of their neighborhood.

Washington has an excellent public library—so far as it goes. But, as compared with other cities, Washington's public library facilities are sadly inadequate. Considerably less than half the grade and high school children of Washington have access to any kind of library. Only by coming downtown or taking long trips to such branch libraries as there are, can a large majority of Washington residents have access to library service. When they do come downtown, they find the main library crowded to capacity.

Washington's lack of adequate

Bill Extending RFC Is Signed By Roosevelt

Treasury Withdrawals Are Ordered Limited to Half-Billion.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt yesterday signed the bill to continue the life of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation until February 1, 1935.

The bill authorizes total lending by the corporation up to $850,000,000. The President, however, in a letter to Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the corporation, said it was his understanding "that the extension of the life of the corporation automatically makes available to it the amount of any repayments received during the period of such extension."

The President, in approving the bill, attached to it the reservation made for expenditures by each governmental department, fixing a maximum amount beyond which an executive order would be necessary for withdrawal from the Treasury. In the case of the RFC Mr. Roosevelt fixed $500,000,000.

The text of the President's letter to Jones:

Repayments Available.

"I have approved the bill, S. 2125, Seventy-third Congress, second session, 'to continue the functions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, to provide additional funds for the corporation, and for other purposes.'

"It is my understanding that the bill does not confine the total lending authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the sum of $850,000,000 specified therein, but that the extension of the life of the corporation automatically makes available to it the amount of any repayments received during the period of such extension and that you may make commitments and expenditures under hte indeznite provisions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act.

"It is noted that the bill does not confine the payments on account of commitments and agreements entered into by the corporation to the period ending February 1, 1935, but provides for payments over a period of one year after the date of such commitments and agreements.

Limit to $500,000,000.

"In order to confine all additional expenditures required to be made in 1935, which were not expressly provided for in the budget, to the amount indicated in my budget message, I find it necessary to ad-

Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 21 (AP).—Abandoning last-minute threats to openly defy the Sunday closing order of Mayor Eddie McCloskey, a majority of Johnstown's business houses did not operate today.

As a result most of the 68,000 citizens within the town proper:

Dr. Wynekoop Again Sinks

Mistrial Predicted for Aged Physician in Murder Trial.

Chicago, Jan. 21 (AP).—Dr. Alice Wynekoop suffered another relapse today, giving further weight to the prediction of a mistrial when her trial for the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta, is resumed tomorrow.

Another night of restless tossing in her cell cot in the jail caused an emergency call for Dr. Constantine Theodore, county physician, early this morning.

"She is a very sick woman," he reported after an examination. "Unless there is marked improvement in her condition tomorrow, I don't see how she can possibly be able even to make the trip to the courtroom."

The aged physician's condition throughout the night had remained unsatisfactory and her labored breathing caused concern to police matrons who kept watch at her cell.

The outcome may be decided tomorrow after Judge Joseph B. David hears testimony of physicians who examined the defendant immediately after the trial recessed last Friday because of her collapse.

Hull Confers With Roosevelt On Cuban Rule

Back From South America, Secretary Enthuses Over Amity There.

(United Press.)

Back from the Pan-American Conference with the conviction that the United States today enjoys good will of Latin-American republics "unlike anything that has existed in generations," Secretary of State Cordell Hull conferred with President Roosevelt last night regarding the Cuban situation and possible recognition of the Mendieta government.

Hull brought to the White House an oral report on his conversations at Key West, Fla., with Jefferson Caffery, President Roosevelt's personal representative in Havana, who, it is understood, is favorably impressed with the new government.

Unless something unexpected should develop, it is expected the United States soon will extend formal recognition to the Mendieta government.

The Secretary of State was enthusiastic over the change in the attitude of Latin America toward the United States.

Sees Amity Bearing Fruit.

"Our own enlightened attitude toward these neighboring nations, as expressed in the 'good neighbor' policy of this Administration, is unquestionably a large factor in this metamorphosis," Hull said last night.

At Montevideo, said Hull, "there was undoubtedly developed an affinity of spirit and sentiment, based on the common interests of the 21 American republics, unlike anything that has existed in generations.

"This intangible but all important gain for all of our nations remains the potential basis of a whole-

Africans Make Kelly King— Now They'd Like to Crown Him

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—The "Curse of the Swahilis" has descended on the Central Park hot dog vender, who would not be king.

A letter from far-off Nairobi, British East Africa, has confirmed the fears of John Kelly, who politely but firmly refused to give up his hot dog business to become the head man of a tribe of elephant trackers.

"It's the curse of the Swahilis," he said today. "That's why business has gone sour.

"Look—" he exhibited the letter—"are those guys sore because I wouldn't be their king! Look what they say:"

The letter began: "Salanu Sana Na Baada ya Salamu Naku Arifu Habari Yangu Mimi Mzima Na Mimi Nasaiuya——"

"Now I can't translate that word for word for you," said Kelly, "but you can see they mean business. Martin Johnson, the explorer, sent the letter on. He says, 'if you don't write an answer, you will probably

Committee Action Remains in Doubt

McAdooBelieved to Hold Decisive Vote; Stand Is Undisclosed.

(Associated Press.)

The Administration's Senate lieutenants yesterday solidified their forces to defend the House-approved dollar-devaluation bill against a vigorous conservative effort to attach amendments sharply limiting the broad powers the measure would confer upon the Secretary of the Treasury.

The President wants the bill enacted exactly as it was sent to Capitol Hill and Democratic leaders are determined and confident he shall have his way. They hope to send the measure to the White House by Saturday, but concede another week-end may intervene.

Even though the opposition should be successful in obtaining Senate approval of one or more of the changes it wants, Administration spokesmen are counting on the House to uphold the Chief Executive. That branch beat off all efforts to amend the bill Saturday and then passed it by the lop-sided vote of 360 to 40.

President's Wishes Rule.

The words of Chairman Somers of the Coinage Committee, in charge of the bill, that "the President wants the bill just as it is" were enough to swing the huge Democratic majority into a massive cordon which the would-be amenders could not penetrate.

The bill has four primary purposes: It would authorize clipping a minimum of 40 per cent from the 23.22 grains of gold which by legal definition are now the equivalent of one dollar; it would vest in the Treasury title to every ounce of the Nation's monetary gold, including that now held by the Federal Reserve Banks; it would establish a $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund to be used in regulating the foreign value of the dollar; and it would free the Treasury of many present restrictions upon its authority to issue Government securities and thus simplify the big borrowing operations that lie ahead.

The measue is now in the hands of the Senate Finance Committee, which intends to complete its hearings today. The committee will take up the measure tomorrow in executive session and as soon as a vote is reached it will be reported and brought up on the Senate floor.

Warren to be Heard.

Among others, the committee will hear Prof. George F. Warren, of Sornell University, one of the President's foremost monetary advisors and an author of the program which the measure is intended to forward.

The committee vote, both sides say, probably will be close. While the opposition is counting upon a maximum of 27 votes against the bill in the Senate as a whole, at least nine of those who will cast them are on the 20-member committee. Three Democrats, Glass, of Vriginia; Gore, of Oklahoma, and Adams, of Colorado, are expected to vote against the bill, while two Republicans, Norbeck, of South

Dread "Black Fog" Blankets London

Penetrates Albert Hall as Galli-Curci Sings.

London, Jan. 21 (AP).—A dreaded "black fog" settled on London this afternoon so densely that it penetrated the Great Albert Hall, where Mme. Galli-Curci sang to an audience which could see her only through a haze.

Her white figure upon the platform seemed to the audience like an ethereal being, and her bell-like voice served to heighten the illusion.

The fog caused a number of accidents, including collisions between two passenger buses and between a bus and an automobile in which four persons were injured.

Forced Meals End Kidnapers' Hunger Strike

Leavenworth, Kans., Jan. 21 (AP).—Harvey Bailey and Albert Bates, convicted Urschel kidnapers, struggled in vain at the Federal penitentiary today to carry on a hunger strike in the face of forcible feeding of milk.

"Death or freedom from solitary," is the announced purpose of the desperadoes' refusal to eat.

But prison authorities have other plans. For one thing, about $100,000 of the $200,000 paid for the release of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma City oil man, has never been recovered. Department of Justice authorities believe they know its whereabouts.

Scheduled for Alcatraz.

For another, the two life termers and George Kelly, who was convicted with them, are scheduled to be sent later to the Federal Government's new prison for desperate convicts on Alcatraz Island, and it is proposed to deliver them in good shape.

Both Bailey and Bates, under violent protest, are being fed almost a gallon of milk daily.

Every four or five hours the prison physician, two guards and two convict witnesses—the latter to forestall possible charges of the prisoners that they are abused—visit the cells.

The guards hold down the patient. The physician inserts a rubber hose with two outlets into his nostrils and pours down a pint of milk. There is some bad language.

"We tried at first to be nice to them and insert the hose through the mouth," a guard explained, "but they soon learned they could shut off the milk by clamping down the teeth."

Grapevine Carries News.

Apparently the "grapevine" carried the news to Bailey after Bates went on his hunger strike January 7. Bailey, who is cut off by prison regulations from all contact with his friend, ceased eating January 15.

Forcible feeding of Bates was begun January 19. Then Bailey also was put under the treatment. Physicians said the latter was in better condition than Bates because he continued drinking water.

Tempting meals failed to shake the convicts' defiance of officers. They shunned a dinner today which included roast beef, gravy, potatoes, spinach and carrots.

The Once Over.

By H. I. Phillips.

Elmer Twitchell Has An Idea.

Dear Secretary Morgenthau:

I have read of your plan to send out house to house canvassers to get a more complete collection of income taxes, acquaint the people with its purposes and check up on evaders, and I have two suggestions to make, which seem to fit in with the idea. First, why not some sort of a tag or symbol to hang on all homes where the people know all about the income tax and pay it?

* * * *

You could select a Red Canary or a Purple Titmouse or something, following the idea of the Blue Eagle, and then the folks would know that the occupants of a house which did not display the bird were not income tax payers. Of course you would want some kind of a slogan inscribed on the symbol like, "We Come Across," "We Pay Uncle Sam," or something like that.

* * * *

All the neighbors would have a lot of fun looking around to see who had paid their taxes and who had not, and the scheme would bring no end of inside dope, general gossip, &c.

* * * *

Second, I would propose that the agents going from door to door to stir up interest in the income tax be authorized to solicit and display testimonials from taxpayers who have found the income tax has done them good, as who has not?

* * * *

For example, a few testimonials like these would stimulate interest:

To Whom it May Concern:

For years I lacked interest in life. I could not work up any concern over the condition of Government affairs. Nothing that went on in Washington could arouse me. Then a friend recommended the income tax. I began taking it and you would never know me now. If you want to have your whole viewpoint, your whole nature, your very character changed, become an income tax payer.

JABEZ P. OATFIELD.

* * * *

To My Friends:

I can not speak too warmly for the income tax. Up to a few years ago I had never heard of it. I was unhappy. I was worried by money matters. All I could think of was business. I heard about the income tax and wrote to Washington for two bottles. I am a new man. I have no money to worry about any more and my business is so small I can not detect it with the naked eye. What the income tax has done for me it will do for you.

FELIX POTTERBLOTT.

Mr. Secretary, I think I am giving you a couple of swell ideas. You would be surprised how many people do not know about the income tax, and it is through such methods as yours and mine that the country will be saved.

Yours truly,
ELMER TWITCHELL.

Taken by Death

Maj. Shufeldt, Soldier, Writer, Dies Here, 83

Career of Fighting Began on Gunboat During Civil War.

Maj. Robert W. Shufeldt, 83, died yesterday morning at his home in the Dupont Circle apartments, concluding a career of fighting and authorship. His battles began when he was a boy on a gunboat during the Civil War and reached a climax in combats with Indians.

Distinguished as a writer on wild life, Maj. Shufeldt also was an army surgeon, having studied medicine at the Columbian University Medical School, now George Washington University. He served for several years as honorary curator of comparative anatomy of the Smithsonian Institution, and was in charge of the section of comparative anatomy in the Army Medical Museum.

Father Was a Rear Admiral.

Born in New York City in 1850 Maj. Shufeldt was the son of Rear Admiral Robert W. Shufeldt. In the Civil War he served as a captain's clerk and signal officer aboard the U. S. gunboat Proteus, commanded by his father.

Prior to studying medicine, he attended private and public schools in this country and Havana, and studied at Cornell from 1871 to 1874. He received his medical degree in 1876. A few months later he passed the Army examining board and was commissioned assistant surgeon. He was detailed first to Fort McHenry, Baltimore, and then went to the frontier to see service against the Sioux Indians.

Five Years on Frontier

During five years on the frontier, he began the study of fauna and flora and wrote his first papers upon birds. He illustrated these writings with his own drawings.

In 1881 Maj. Shufeldt came to Washington and served at the Army Medical College and Smithsonian Institution. He was then assigned as post surgeon at Fort Wingate, N. Mex., where he did his most important natural history work. He was retired in 1891 and promoted to the rank of major in 1896.

Married Twice

Until 1925, when his health began to fail, Maj. Shufeldt devoted his time to the study of art, anthropology, forensic medicine and biology, and published several books. During the World War, he was detailed to the Army Medical Museum.

Maj. Shufledt was a charter member of the Cosmos Club and a founder of the American Ornithologists Union. He was married twice. His first wife was Miss Catherine Babacock. In 1898, he married Miss Alfhild Lowum, of Christiana, Norway, who survives him. He had four children by his first marriage, two of whom survive.

U. S. Dispensary Aids Roman Needy

Destitute Mothers and Babies Given Clothing.

Vatican City, Jan. 21 (AP).—Needy Roman mothers and babies received gifts of clothing from the American dispensary, Santa Mata, today.

The ceremonies were presided over by Cardinal Donato Sbarretti, protector of various charity sisterhoods, including those at Leavenworth, Kans.; Galveston, Tex.; Nazareth, Ky.; Peoria, Ill., and Halifax, N. S.

The dispensary committee is headed by Mrs. John Drake, of New York and Paris. It furnishes milk to babies throughout the year.

Cubans Cheer A. B. A. Leader, New President

Dr. Martinez Saenz Back in Insular Affairs Following Exile.

Havana, Jan. 21 (AP).—A closer bond between the A. B. C. and the government of Carlos Mendieta was seen today as more than 5,000 members of the society greeted their returned leader, Dr. Joaquin Martinez Saenz, as he arrived by plane from Miami.

Fellow members of the A. B. C. directorate led an impromptu parade through crowded downtown streets to the palace, where he was greeted by President Mendieta.

A noisy demonstration was staged as the crowds roared approval when Mendieta appeared at a balcony embracing Saenz.

The A. B. C. leader, who is to take up his duties as secretary of the treasury, where he left off at the time of the fall of De Cespedes, exhorted the A. B. C. to lend wholehearted support to Mendieta and help stabilize the country.

Medical Strike Continues.

Meanwhile several serious problems still confronted the President as the medical federation strike continued. With physicians and pharmacists idle there was much suffering throughout the city. Patients were unable to obtain medical attention or medicines.

The opinion prevailed in official circles that a definite announcement on the cabinet would be followed by United States recognition.

Meanwhile, Havana was nearly normal today for the first time in many months.

A small bomb exploded this morning at the home of Dr. Cosme De La Torriente, newly appointed secretary of state.

Army Officers Freed

The secretary of the interior ordered the release today of 50 former army and navy officers from military fortresses, and said "we will liberate all officers who are charged only with political offences."

Several thousand persons attended the funeral of Dr. Jose Borges, killed yesterday during riots attending the medical strike.

An afternoon newspaper said Col. Fulgencio Batista had been officially appointed secretary of war in the Mendieta cabinet, but unimpeachable sources in the presidential palace denied this.

Native Curse Falls Upon 'King Kelly'

have the whole Swahili tribe put a curse on you, and your frankfurters will go bad and your ice cream will melt.'"

Two years ago Kelly befriended two natives, Manual and Hussaini, who were brought to New York by the Martin Johnsons to take care of a shipment of baby gorillas.

Kelly introduced them to such mysterious delights as ice-cream cones, peppermint candy and hot dogs.

When the two natives returned to Africa they got busy and had Kelly elected king of their tribe. The first Kelly knew about it was when he received in the mail last fall a pair of beaded belts.

Kelly went around to the zoo in Central Park, listened to the lions roar, and decided to mind his hot dogs.

"Hussaini went to a lot of trouble making those belts for you," Johnson wrote. "He watches every mail for an answer from his bwana (king) Kelly. You can see by his letter that he's prety sore."

"I don't know what to do," sighed Kelly. "I don't want to cause any international complications, but I can't take that job. No, sir! I haven't had any experience at that sort of thing. I think I'd better send the boys some nice presents and get that curse lifted."

Fort to Discuss Crime For Republican Women

Mr. Fort will discuss crime prevention and correction.

Beltsville Man Faces Collision Charge Today

Fred Hartley, of Beltsville, Md., was summoned to appear in Beltsville police court this morning to face charges of reckless driving and collision growing out of an accident Saturday night.

Hartley sustained two broken ribs when his auto and a street car collided at Beltsville. His two small children also were injured slightly.

Indians Blame British Fliers For Quake That Killed 15,000

New Delphi, India, Jan. 21 (AP). From the mysterious Himalayan kingdom of Nepal today came a new explanation of the earthquake which a week ago shook all India, causing deaths unofficially estimated at 15,000.

From the tiger-shooting camp of a former Maharajah of Nepal, 350 miles west of Katmandu, the capital, came word that followers of the Maharajah blamed the recent successful flight of three British aviators over Mount Everest for the catastrophe.

They were reported to declare that the gods of the world's highest mountain, previously unconquered by man, had by the earthquake visitation wreaked vengeance upon humanity for invading their precincts.

They pointed out, it was said, that the axis of the severest shocks closely followed the line of flight taken by the aviators, the Marquis of Clydesdale, Col. L. V. Stewart Blacker and Flight Lieut. E. F. McIntyre, who crossed Everest's peak, 29,000 feet high, last April.

Couriers from the Maharajah's camp brought word of heavy loss of life at Katmandu, the Nepal capital. The Maharajah was reported hurrying back to Katmandu.

The two planes in the Marquis of Clydesdale's expedition climbed to 35,000 feet before crossing Everest.

Nine men have lost their lives attempting to scale Everest on foot, and no man has yet stood upon the topmost level.

Democratic Senate Leaders Unite to Save Money Plan

Dakota and Couzens, of Michigan will be for it.

On this basis, the committee decision apparently rests with the vote of Senator McAdoo, of California, who has given no indication of how he will vote other than his action in moving that the committee request an opinion from Attorney General Cummings on the constitutionality of seizing the Federal Reserve Banks' gold. With McAdoo's favorable vote the result would be 11 to 9 for the measure. With him voting against it the result would be a 10-to-10 tie, which under Senate rules means committee disapproval.

Vast Powers Tonight.

Virtually all the adverse testimony the committee has received has been directed first of all against the wide variety of powers the measure would give to Secretary Morgenthau in administering the stabilization fund. It would empower him to deal in any type of commercial paper he might deem necessary for the general purpose of stabilizing the currency.

This, Senator Glass and others have criticized as authorizing the Treasury to do a general banking business. The critics claim that with the Treasury's alliance with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation this would mean to all intents and purposes the establishment of a central bank, with a consequent curtailment of the functions of the Federal Reserve System.

The bill would give Morgenthau unlimited authority in administering the fund. The opponents are considering and expect to offer an amendment to place the fund in the hands of the board. This proposal received more support in the House Saturday than any other suggested change, but even so was defeated 170 to 133.

"Profit" Fund Also Target.

Obtaining money for the fund from the extra dollars that could be issued against the gold stocks, after reduction of the gold equivalent of the dollar, also has been the target of much criticism in testimony given the committee. Witnesses have asserted that all expenditures through the fund would automatically increase member bank balances with the Reserve Banks by however much is thus expended.

The argument of these critics is that this increase would be highly dangerous since it would represent a potential credit expansion of ten times that much, which might be impossible to control and result in a wild speculative boom exceeding even that of 1928-29 and ending in a disastrous crash. Member bank reserve balances are now about $900,000,000 and one witness, Governor Roy Young, of the Boston Reserve Bank, told the committee that at this figure they already were unwieldly."

Illegal, Says Glass.

The project of seizing the reserve banks' gold has been criticized as "unconstitutional" by Senator Glass, who was unconvinced by the Cummings opinion holding otherwise. Governor Black, of the Reserve Board, told the committee his colleagues were willing to surrender the gold devaluation profit to the Government, but thought the wiser course would be for the Reserve System to keep the remainder.

The President's proposal that the dollar be devalued, has received in itself little opposition, although some have asserted the 60 per cent "upper limit of devaluation," asked by the President, was too low. They have suggested 63 to 65 per cent, which they said was closer to the present gold value of the dollar as measured in terms of foreign exchange.

U. S. Chamber Urges Defense Strengthened

Unrest Over World Cited in Warning of Need to Protect Peace.

(United Press.)

The United States Chamber of Commerce warned member organizations last night that "an increasing turbulence has manifested itself in the world political situation" and urged adoption of recommendations favoring adequate national defense forces.

A series of recommendations prepared by a committee of the Chamber will be submitted to member organizations soon for a referendum vote, it was announced.

An organization statement said: "As the World War, in point of time, has become farther removed from the present, the immediate post-war impetus to peace has slackened. An increasing turbulence has manifested itself in the world political situation. While the United States is not now involved in any political situation threatening its security, your committee considers it timely that emphasis should be given again to peace as a prime essential to world economic well being and to adequate defense as the best guarantor of peace."

The committee recommended that the Chamber of Commerce of the United States reaffirm its postion in favor of renunciation of war as an instrument of National policy and in favor of the general principles of limitation of armaments.

Other recommendations included a Navy built to treaty strength, a systematic program for naval construction and naval modernization, development of the merchant marine as a naval auxiliary, modernization of the Army and a systematic program of building and maintaining air services in the Army and Navy "of such strengths as are adequate to attain the objectives of the National defense laws."

Nye Charges NRA Leak to Monopolies

read, in part: "The price-fixing provision of Article X necessarily results in depriving independent manufacturer or small enterprise of whatever economic advantage it enjoys by reason of its efficiency in operation, low overhead, including low executive salaries, &c. To the extent that this occurs, there is a resultant increase toward monopoly. There are several provisions of the code for the electrical industry, which in practice may tend to eliminate or oppress small enterprises, discriminate against them and thus promote monopolies, all of which results the National industrial recovery act expressly prohibits."

This, contends Senator Nye, is a typical example of what is taking place under NRA. The big companies played the major part in drawing the codes, he declares, and they are now running the compliance boards and code authorities which enforce them.

Prices "Suspiciously Uniform."

There has been another attack from within the Recovery Administration itself by Leon Henderson, newly attached to the Consumers Advisory Board, who charges that there was a "suspicious uniformity" in the prices established by woolen mills for their products. He wants a halt on open-price agreements in the 92 codes in which they have been written, until the practice is more carefully examined.

NRA critics also pointed gleefully to an article by E. R. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Co., in the latest issue of Scribner's Magazine. In the article, Mr. Grace praises NRA because it permits public price-fixing and thereby eliminates "chiseling" and "cut-throat competition."

Critics declare the steel industry already was a trust before the recovery law was drawn and that the suffering it endures from cut-throat competition is almost invisible. The steel code, they charge, merely has permitted it to fix prices openly.

Senators From West To Fight for Silver

A powerful group of Western Senators has decided to fight for further rehabilitation of silver at this session of Congress by presenting a "rider" to the Administration's gold bill when it reaches the Senate floor, the United Press learned last night.

The House passed the gold bill Saturday.

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee is expected to conclude hearings on the measure today after receiving testimony by Owen D. Young, financier, and Prof. George Warren, proponent of the "commodity dollars" and one of President Roosevelt's chief monetary advisers. J. H. Rand, jr., chairman of the Committee for the Nation.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, author of a bill proposing remonetization of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 with gold, said he would introduce the "rider" to the gold bill unless President Roosevelt gave assurance he would expand his program to include wider use of silver in currency.

Rover Bares Fraud In Memorial Funds

maintain a room at the hotel where the mail was first received.

Even President Roosevelt was said to have been indirectly approached as to the project and was quoted as heartily endorsing it. He is said to have declared procurement of the bust as a fitting manner in which to perpetuate the memory of America's wartime commander.

Gen. Pershing was consulted by the investigators when rumors of the irregularities began to come in. He gave hearty consent to proceed with any investigation deemed necessary, it was said, in spite of any embarrassment it might cause him.

First inklings of the "racket," developed out of the bust project, came to Gen. Squier while he was at the Century of Urgoress in Chicago, of which he was a director.

Many Persons Bilked.

On his return here Gen. Squier sought out Layton and after the interview his suspicions were aroused.

Postal inspectors and Detective Sergeant Earl P. Hartmann, assigned to Mr. Rover's office, began an investigation immediately. The ensuing inquiry developed the scope the scheme had taken.

Among prominent Americans allegedly bilked in the enterprise were S. Parker Gilbert, internationalyl known businessman; William Randolph Hearst, newspaper publisher; Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury; Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times; E. L. Cord, Le Roy W. Baldwin, Alfred E. Smith, Charles M. Schwab, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., Ogden L. Mills, George Gordon Battle, George W. Wickersham, Harry Harkness Flagler, Nathan L. Miller, James W. Wadsworth, jr., John N. Willys, James T. Loree, Roger W. Straus and Adloph Lewisohn

The bust executed by Dykaar is now in the National Gallery of Art on exhibition. Dykaar had modeled the late Presidents Harding and Coolidge, former Vice President Charles Curtis, the late Speaker Nicholas Longworth and Alice Roosevelt Longworth. The Coolidge bust was purchased by Congress for the Capitol in 1927 and Dykaar was assigned a studio in the National Museum.

Mr. Rover, under whose direction the investigation was conducted, retires from oce today.

Liquor-Control Compromise Stated Likely

Peery's List of New Taxes Blocked by Finance Chairman.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 21.—A compromise liquor control bill may be agreed on by the General Assembly Chairman W. A. Garrett, Senate Finance Committee, Ridgeway, declared tonight.

At the same time Garrett announced he opposed a long list of new taxes recommended by Gov. George C. Peery as a means of increasing school funds. The finance chairman said he would refuse to introduce the Peery measures.

Mr. Garrett said he still was undecided on the Eggleston bill calling for liquor sales in State-operated dispensarise of the Wickham private licensing measure under which hotels and restaurants would have whiskey privileges.

Hearings Resumed.

"We may have to draft a new bill combining the best features of the others," Mr. Garrett declared.

In any event, joint liquor hearings will be resumed tomorrow night by the House and Senate Finance Committees, with Mr. Garrett presiding.

The committees probably will give special attention to penalty clauses of the Eggleston bill, including a provision intended to jail customers of bootleggers. Drys were charged with sponsoring the widely criticized section which reads:

"If any person shall buy alcoholic beverages from any person other than a Government store or some person authorized under the provisions of this act to sell the same, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

Another clause would make all liquor misdemeanors punishable by fines not exceeding $500 and jail sentences of up to 12 months. In addition, courts would require posting of $1,000 bonds against further violations or six-month jail sentences on failure to make bond.

Many Misdemeanors Listed.

About half of the 82-page measure listed violations to be punished as misdemeanors. Included would be unlicensed manufacturers of any alcoholic beverage; persons selling, possessing or transporting liquor in violation of the bill; individuals selling whisky to any interdicted person, any person under 18, to any one intoxicated or to any state hospital patient, any person mixing deleterious substance with alcoholic beverages, or any one illegally selling, using or forging tax stamps.

Persons convicted of driving any vehicle while intoxicated or otherwise considered "an improper person to be allowed to purchase alcoholic beverages," could by an order of interdiction, issued by any court, be prohibited from buying liquor.

Any bootlegger possessing a firearm while violating the bill would be guilty of a felony and upon conviction would be subjected to one to three years' imprisonment.

Localities Fail To Take PWA's $11,579,000

29 Allotments Revoked; Fairfax County Unable to Accept $50,000.

Revocation of 29 public works allotments, totaling $11,579,000, because of inability of counties and municipalities to take them out was disclosed by the Works Administration yesterday.

Previous revocations and reduction in allotments, amounting to $15,000,000, leaves about $47,535,000 for additional projects taken from the waiting list, Ickes said. In most cases the revocations were chiefly for legal reasons.

An allotment of $50,000 was rescinded for Fairfax County, Va., when a bond election defeated the proposal to obtain $50,000 for a jail.

The $47,535,000 has been allotted, officials said. The chief cause of revocations was legal inability of communities to add to their debt burdens.

Rush Hour at Lending Desk in Main Public Library

The rush hour at the leading desk at the main public library, where the demand for library service and for books taxes the limited facilities.

Washington Is Rated Low for Library Service It Offers.

public library facilities can be traced to the source of most of Washington's civic difficulties—Congress. For 40 years Congress has resisted attempts to obtain for Washington public library facilities even approaching those that other cities consider necessary as accessories to the schools and for the education and convenience of the adult population.

Accessible to Congress is one of the largest and finest libraries in the world, the Library of Congress. It is an institution of which all Americans have a right to be proud. It is one that is deserving of the continued and everlasting support of Congress. Housed in a huge and magnificent building, the Library of Congress is one of the most complete in the world. It is accessible to Congressmen and Government officials. Others may use it for reference and study.

But the Library of Congress is in no sense a public library. It is not a lending library. Only the select few may take books away. It is not accessible to school children, whose only means, in most cases, of becoming acquainted with literature is through a library. The Library of Congress serves a great purpose, but because it is in Washington, the impression must not be that Washington is being served with the library's facilities. It is not.

Lion's Share for Congress.

Yet the people of Washington—the school children—must look to the same source for the money for library buildings and for new books as does that great, magnificent Library of Congress, into which Congress has poured a million dollars for every thousand that it has given for library facilities in the Capital. Right now there is being completed a section in the Library of Congress for the housing of rare books, a section on which sufficient money is being spent to provide Washington with two or more branch libraries.

There is no attempt here to suggest that there should be any skimping of appropriations for the Library of Congress. That institution is brought into this article because Congressmen are inclined to let it overshadow the much smaller problem of providing the city with libraries.

Washington has one central library, four branch libraries, and five subbranches. The administration of the Public Library is in the hands of a board of trustees, who are appointed by the Commissioners of the District. Members of the board must be taxpayers of the District and they serve without pay for six years.

The trustees appoint the librarian, who in turn appoints all the assistant librarians, and is in charge of the administration of the library's affairs. The librarian, with the assistance of the board, prepares the budget estimates which are transmitted to the District Commissioners, who have authority to reduce them.

City Is Far Behind.

Both the trustees and the librarian constantly are working for increased library facilities. They have repeatedly presented plans and have slowly improved library conditions, but still Washington is far behind most cities in that respect.

In respect to the number of branch libraries, the volumes per capita of the population, the proportion of the population who are registered readers, and the circulation per capita of population, Washington falls below the minimum standard set by the American Library Association and the average attained by other cities.

Washington has one branch library for every 98,600 population, while, according to the American Library Association, there should be one for every 25,000 population. Whereas Washington has four branch libraries, the average number of branch libraries for 42 cities over 200,000 population is 20. Among cities smaller than Washington, but with more branch libraries, are Minneapolis, with 21; Louisville, 21; Portland, Oreg., 17.

Washington Twenty-sixth in Line.

Washington has .863 books per capita of the population, while according to the American Library Association cities over 200,000 should have at least 1.5 books per capita. Among 44 cities of more than 200,000, Washington ranks twenty-sixth in the number of volumes per capita. The following table shows how poorly Washington ranks with five smaller cities:

City	Population	Books per Capita
Washington	486,869	.863
Minneapolis	464,356	1.276
Newark	442,337	1.24
Kansas City	399,746	1.344
Seattle	365,583	1.395
Indianapolis	364,161	1.608

Of the population of Washington, 23.6 per cent are registered readers of the Library. According to the minimum standard set by the American Library Association, 30 per cent of the population should be registered readers. Washington ranks twenty-third in the proportion of population who are registered readers among 30 cities of more than 200,000, according to a bulletin of the American Library Association covering 1932.

Circulation Grows.

Washington's per capita book circulation is constantly growing. In 1933 it was 5.31, as compared with 4.65 the previous year. However, Washington still is below other cities. Comparative figures are not available for 1933, but here are some comparisons for 1932:

City	Population	Per Capita Book Circulation
Washington	486,869	4.65
Minneapolis	464,356	8.35
Newark	442,337	6.32
Kansas City	399,746	5.66
Seattle	365,583	11.26
Indianapolis	364,161	8.99

Washington's library received only .97 per cent of the budget in 1930, while the average for cities of 300,000 to 500,000 population was 1.5 per cent. If the Washington library had received this average proportion of the budget, the library appropriation would have been increased 55 per cent ($213,122) over the actual appropriation.

Children Forced on Long Trips If They Want to Get Books.

Letter Written by Gen. Lee Discovered After 70 Years

Danville, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—A hitherto unpublished letter of Gen. Robert E. Lee was found yesterday—one day after his birthday anniversary—by Miss Grace Arnett, among effects of the late O. W. Barrow, of Henry County, who served during the Civil War with Company H, Twenty-fourth Virginia Infantry.

The letter, written in pencil, and still easily legible, was addressed to Gen. H. J. Anderson, commanding Gen. Longstreet's corps.

It was written in the spring of 1865. It had escaped notice, apparently, because it was written on the back of an ordnance report bearing Barrow's signature and addressed to Gen. Lee. The text of the letter follows:

Gen'l:

I take great pleasure in congratulating the gallantry of the troops you command. I believe they will carry anything they are put against. We tried to stop Pickett's men from taking the enemy's works but couldn't do it.

I hope his loss has been small.

(Signed) R. E. LEE,
Gen'l.

Reich Farming Change Hailed

Hitler's Actions Are 500 Years Ahead, Says State Leader.

Weimar, Germany, Jan. 21. (A.P.)—Admitting that what the Hitler government was doing now for German peasantry would perhaps be fully appreciated only 500 to 1,000 years hence, Walter Darre, Nazi commissioner of agriculture, explained the agricultural reform policy today at a nation-wide congress of peasant leaders.

The government is determined to take capital out of the hands of capitalism, he asserted, and break the interest bondage under which farmers groaned so long.

Three European revolutions which endured, those of the Swedish King Gustav Vasa, Oliver Cromwell and Mussolini, owe their permanence to the fact that they were rooted in the peasantry, Darre said.

The Dutch and Swiss, he continued, have been lost to the old German empire because rulers failed to allot the peasantry its rightful place.

Kaiser Wilhelm II, he said, was equally to blame because he dropped Bismarck, who had the true interest of the farmer at heart.

Boy Burned in Blast Of Cleaning Fluid

Can Explodes as Annapolis Youth Pours It on Fire.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Charles K. Schlegel, 15, son of Charles Schlegel, chief clerk in administration offices at the Naval Academy, is in a serious condition in Annapolis Emergency Hospital, suffering from burns received when his clothing ignited while burning a pile of rubbish at the home of his parents in Homewood, Annapolis, late yesterday.

The boy mistook a can of cleaning fluid for kerosene and poured it on a smoldering blaze. The can exploded, and the lad's clothing was a mass of flames as he ran to his parents in the house. Mr. and Mrs. Schlegel both suffered severe burns about the hands as they wrapped their son in blankets to extinguish the flames.

The boy's most serious burns are on his legs, although his face and neck were badly scorched. Dr. George C. Basil said seriousness of the injuries could not yet be determined.

Boy Fires Sister's Dress; She's Dying

Luray, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—When Cecil Smelser, a Stanley boy, touched a lighted match to the dress of his sister, Mary, yesterday, the latter was burned severely.

Running wildly around in the yard of her home, the girl was enveloped in flames.

Rift Threatens Peery's Plans To Boost Taxes

Senator Garrett Bolts on School Issue; Fight on Bills Looms.

Richmond, Jan. 21 (A.P.).—Senator W. A. Garrett, veteran Senate finance committee chairman, today broke with the Peery administration on the subject of schools and announced he would not support the new Governor's tax increase measures, scheduled for introduction this week.

"I supported Mr. Peery in the primary and in the general election," said the senator, "but I did not see any advocacy of increased taxes in his platform."

"Since I do not intend to support bills increasing taxes, I cannot be expected to introduce them," he said when asked if he would present bills calling for increases in income, merchants, utilities, theater, city buses and inheritance taxes proposed by Gov. Peery for schools in his inaugural address Wednesday.

The Governor said yesterday he hoped for the cooperation of committee chairmen in getting his revenue measures enacted.

Redistricting is to come before the Senate at noon tomorrow. The Holt bill then will be on its second reading and its amendable stage. A hot debate is expected.

The house will not meet until 8 p. m.

Senator Garrett's stand was taken as a forecast of a fight over the Peery school program.

Governor Pollard in his budget message before his retirement recommended restoration of half of the 30 per cent cut made to state appropriations, and proposed the use of liquor profits and an increase in utility taxes only to finance the restoration.

Governor Peery proposed a further increase in the school appropriation over the current year's funds, and recommended tax increases in excess of $1,000,000 for that purpose.

City Scrip Profitable.

North Bend, Oreg. (U.P.).—The city of North Bend made a $440 profit on two issues of scrip, printed on myrtle-wood disks. The scrip was much sought by collectors in all parts of the United States. Two thousand dollars' worth was issued.

Priest Advises Congress Keep Money Powers

Opposes Part of Gold Bill Vesting Sale Authority in Morgenthau.

Detroit, Jan. 21 (A.P.).—The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit priest, today advocated amendment of the Roosevelt gold measure to permit Congress to retain control over the monetary system, rather than to bestow that authority upon the Secretary of the Treasury.

"There is no fear of the integrity of President Roosevelt or Secretary Morgenthau," Father Coughlin declared, but, he asserted, Congress alone has the Constitutional right to control the monetary system.

"America is in no mood to transfer control of the dollar to a one-man dictator not elected by the people," he said.

Silver Issued Raised.

Besides proposing modification of the administration measure, which was approved last night by the house, Father Coughlin asked:

"Why not include remonetization of silver to avoid printing press money?"

Otherwise he voiced approval of the president's monetary program.

Except for proposing this modification of the Administration measure which was approved by the House last night, Father Coughlin supported the program of the President.

Father Coughlin's speech was broadcast over an independent hookup.

Charging "international bankers" want the dollar stabilized at 60 cents instead of 44 cents, which, the speaker asserted, is the proper level, he said:

"There must be no stabilization unfair to the people of the United States. The people's voice in this is their Congressmen and Senators."

The priest then urged his auditors to communicate their views to them with dispatch.

Debt Defaulters.

Father Coughlin traced what he said was the United States' financing of the allied powers, especially Great Britain and France, in the World War and accused them of "welching."

"Great Britain wanted our dough more than our doughboys," he said, adding that now she still "is proceeding to acquire our dough."

Returning to his theme of "Roosevelt or Ruin," the speaker said "no country ever existed half prosperous and half impoverished."

"If we adjust our local finances to benefit ourselves, our foreign finances will solve themselves," he added.

He said the dollar must not be revaluated in comparison with foreign markets, but it must be a "100 per cent American dollar, controlled by Congress—not by bankers."

British Expect To Govern U. S. Liquor Styles

Popularity of Drinks in England Is Importers' Measuring Stick.

London (U.P.).—What Britain drinks today the United States imbibes tomorrow in the opinion of competent wine and spirit connoisseurs here.

Liquor exporters are taking careful note of drinking tastes and trends here. The stuff they send to America depends thereon.

Port, they say, is becoming increasingly popular.

Summarized, here are other trends:

Hocks and Moselles: Quantity not above the average, but quality gets owe star.

Champagne: Shippers happy, but workers critical. Three successive bad vintages have been followed this year by a favorable vintage corresponding with a revival in trade. Owing to economy, it is possible that the crops will not have such strict scrutiny as previously.

Claret: White claret should be superb this year. Red wines are not so good. Prices will be high.

Burgundy. Not enough fine burgundy to go around. White vintage excellent. Prices high.

Sherry: A very small vintage, but at the same time a very great increase in sales in the British market. The cocktail as the aperitif is now in full retreat before sherry.

Gribbin to Become Bishop Thursday

Will Take Over Diocese of Western North Carolina.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—The Rev. Robert Emmet Gribbin, of St. Paul's Episcopal Church here, will be consecrated Bishop of the Diocese of Western North Carolina, in St. Paul's Church Thursday, according to orders promulgated today in New York by the Right Rev. James De Wolf Perry, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States.

Bishop-elect Gribbin, who will succeed the late Right Rev. Junius Moore Horner, was elected unanimously at a convention of the Diocese of Western North Carolina at Rutherfordton, October 17. The presiding bishop of the church will officiate at Bishop-elect Gribbin's consecration and will be assisted by bishops of six adjoining dioceses in North Carolina and Virginia.

The see city of the new bishop will be Asheville. There are 70 parishes and missions in the diocese and a considerable group of schools and other church institutions.

Ireland Seeks Right To Try De Valera Foe

Dublin, Jan. 21. (A.P.)—The Irish Free State, it was announced today, will seek dismissal of a conditional order barring the trial of Gen. Eoin O'Duffy on charges of inciting to kill President Eamon De Valera, when the high court meets on Wednesday.

An order was issued January 1 prohibiting a military tribunal from proceeding with the trial against O'Duffy, leader of the United Ireland party.

All-Day Fire Damages Mixed Spanish Vessel

Genoa, Italy, Jan. 21 (A.P.).—Fire in the hold caused heavy damage to the Spanish 6,000-ton mixed passenger and freight steamer Cablo Palos. The fire raged all day Saturday and finally was extinguished by the combined forces of firemen and the port militia.

At one time water poured into the hold to put out the flames caused the vessel, which arrived Wednesday from Buenos Aires, to list dangerously and strenuous efforts were needed to right her.

Careful Driver... did you SAVE $13.70?

This man saves $13.70 on insurance on his Buick because he is a careful driver and deals direct with Liberty Mutual.

This man pays $13.70 more for insurance on his Buick because he is a DANGEROUS DRIVER. He cannot buy a policy from Liberty Mutual.

You could have saved $9.80 to $13.70 by placing your car insurance DIRECT with the company which will not insure DANGEROUS DRIVERS

Which kind of a driver are you? Are you careful, conservative and considerate of other people's rights on the road, or, are you the reckless, dangerous type that is always causing accidents?

If you are a dangerous driver, don't read this

Only careful, responsible drivers can qualify to be insured by Liberty Mutual. This is one of several reasons why Liberty Mutual has saved policyholders at least 20% every year on their car insurance.

Don't misunderstand... Liberty Mutual is not a "cut-rate" company. It sells at the same standard rates as other responsible companies. But, because it only insures careful drivers, Liberty Mutual has fewer accident cases to settle, proportionately, than the average insurance company. Therefore its operating costs are less and these savings are paid back to policyholders in the form of dividends.

If you are a careful driver... seldom involved in accidents... and keep your car in good condition—you do not need to help pay for many serious accidents caused by irresponsible car-owners. This is an important reason why you should insure with Liberty. Not that our policyholders never have accidents, because they do. But Liberty's selected, responsible policyholders have fewer accidents. This means that a Liberty Mutual policy is always sounder as well as lower in cost. And every Liberty policyholder has always received his dividend, regardless of whether or not he has had an accident.

You owe it to yourself to find out more about the savings and prompt accident claim adjustment service supplied by Liberty Mutual. Investigate its financial condition, which is stronger now than before the depression. Join with 115,000 careful, responsible drivers who have reduced the cost of their car insurance and received the kind of insurance which causes them to renew their policies every year with Liberty Mutual. Send coupon for booklet which tells how and why Liberty Mutual has saved policyholders 20% for 22 years on their car insurance.

Air Line Head Defends Mail Award System

Asserts Foreign Powers Hope Senate Quiz Will Wreak Injury.

Stating that "certain foreign governments and some of the surface transportation interests want the present Senate air mail hearings to result in suppression of our commercial air transportation system because of rivalry," Thomas B. Doe, president of Eastern Air Transport, yesterday made a vigorous defense of the Nation's air mail system.

"Under the Waters act, the air transport industry of this country has far surpassed the rest of the world in every phase of developing a well-equipped service," he said. "This has been accomplished at minimum cost to the Government."

"The aviation industry is growing so fast that it naturally gives concern to other forms of transportation and to other military powers. This investigation has been pending for two years and most of the evidence thus far adduced is not news. It has been peddled up and down the country by dissappointed seekers after mail contracts.

Claims "Wonderful Job."

"These companies holding mail contracts have done a wonderful job and everybody in the United States has a right to be proud of them. We have built up a great deal of good will in our territories. We have spent our stockholders' money and the Government's money. There are some 6,000 persons employed in the air transport industry and if they are entitled to a clean bill of health, they should have it from this investigation.

"I am confident that a thorough hearing, a complete airing of all the facts, will show that we have a right to be proud of our job. I make no apologies for our mistakes. This is a new industry in an entirely new field. When these air line companies were formed it took enthusiasts with courage to go ahead. Millions of persons even today are afraid to fly. To even hope that such a young and new kind of industry can be developed without making serious mistakes would be to expect the humanly impossible.

"I sincerely hope that the Senate committee gets sufficient funds and sufficient authority to complete this investigation and learn officially how the money has been spent and what has been accomplished. I am confident that the findings would show we have gone far ahead of the rest of the world in our industry and have done it as minimum expense to the Government.

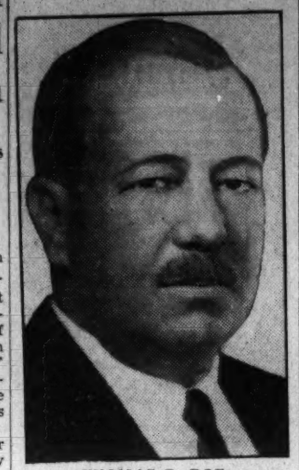

Cites Accomplishments.

"One fact to be brought out is that the 11 contract mail lines are flying about 151,000 miles every 24 hours, carrying mail, passengers and express, and about 60,000 miles of this flying is done at night, an accomplishment unequaled elsewhere in the world. It would also be found that this flying is more than that accomplished by the rest of the world combined. Thus we are doing a better job than any other foreign service and we are doing it with less Government aid.

"It is possible that one of these days our military leaders will require every large commercial plane in the United States to transport troops, supplies and munitions to the Pacific Coast. We can never again hope to have 2,000,000 men stand between us and the enemy for two years while we design and build planes and motors. When the emergency comes we must meet it with the equipment that is ready to fly, and I sincerely hope it will not be the obsolete, second-hand and inadequate equipment that of necessity would result from awarding air mail contracts to the lowest bidder."

Bureau Aims To Settle All 'Out of Court'

Conciliation Group Here Formed to Solve Personal Ills.

Believing the spirit of "Let's Get Together" is a panacea for many controversies between men, corporations and governments, The Conciliation Bureau, Inc., is making its bow to Washington.

Founded "on the native honesty, kindness and fairness of the human heart," the new agency of adjustments proposes to bring about reconciliation of any "unfortunate difference without litigation, acrimony and the necessary great expense and notoriety of court action."

A group of Washingtonians, none of whom are lawyers or are concerned with the practice of law, have organized this unique service and put out their shingle.

Methods of operation, it was announced, will embody "persuasion, reason, mutual and friendly discussion and other amicable means, eliminating the necessity of court action with its obvious unpleasant results."

"Our compensation," the new agency declared, "must come by the voluntary payment of the parties to the differences we reconcile."

Listed among controversies which the corporation would handle are collections of debts, staying off of creditors, claims for damages to person or reputation, domestic relations and "disputes with individuals or corporations with respect to any of the multitude of social and business relations present in the involvments of modern life."

Culbertson on Bridge

The Play of the King.

"If you had played the four of hearts rather than the King, I could not have made my contract," remarked Miss Lee Goode, a New York bridge player, to an opponent rated as an expert, at the end of the fulfillment of a successful Slam contract. The expert was slightly annoyed.

"My play made absolutely no difference," he retorted. "I knew you were going to finesse the hearts, and whether the King fell on the first round or the second round could not possibly change the result in the slightest."

However, the expert was wrong. The play of the King in the case cited furnished to the Declarer the only opportunity to fulfill a contract that must otherwise have been defeated. The importance of the order in which cards are played is probably appreciated by very few players. Of course, there are other reasons why the expert should have played the low card instead of the high one, one of them being that it still left to the Declarer a guess with reference to the location of the King, and the holding might be such that a finesse in clubs would appear as the preferable alternative. For instance, assume that South held only a singleton heart. To play the King, thus making sure that the Declarer will make two tricks in the heart suit, might easily be a practical present of the game, but assuming that the player holding the West cards knows that a finesse is to be taken, there is no situation in which the play of the King with King-small can gain, and, as will be seen below, there are situations in which it can lose.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

North and South had reached a contract of six spades, which as it will be seen, is an over-ambitious contract. Had West made a good Opening lead against the Slam contract—namely, a club—there would then not have remained the remotest play to take twelve tricks, but West was unwilling to open a club, fearing that it might be up to a tenace in the Declarer's hand or to the Queen in Dummy and the Ace in the Declarer's hand, and that he would thereby be presenting the Declarer with the contract.

Instead, he chose as his Opening lead the diamond 8, and the Declarer, after drawing the adverse trumps, then led the heart 6. Without the slightest study, West played the heart King, which was won with the Ace, and the deuce of hearts returned, East winning with the Knave. A club was returned, but it was too late. The Declarer went up with the Ace, led the Ten of hearts, then re-entered Dummy with the diamond, and discarded the club Knave on the heart Queen, thereby fulfilling the contract.

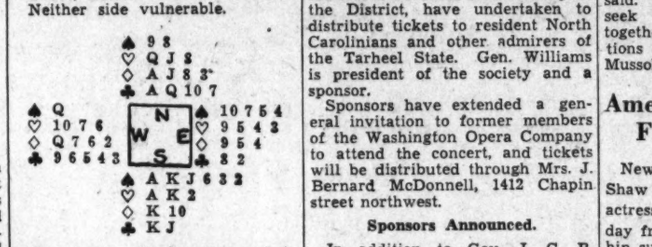

The entire play of the hand, as is readily seen from a study of all the cards, hinges upon West's play in the heart suit. The heart 4 limits the Declarer to two tricks in hearts regardless of the manner in which she plays her hand. If the finesse is taken and the Ace returned, it is true that West's King drops apparently just as ineffectually as the manner in which West played it, but then East can drop the Declarer's Ten with the Knave and still retain the high card over Dummy's seven.

An interesting corollary to the play described herein would be the correct play if West had held the King-Knave of hearts alone. In that case it is my judgment he should play the King and would thus be safeguarded against the actual line of play followed by the Declarer. If the same line were attempted, West would win the return with the Knave, and if his partner held four to the nine, the Declaring hand would still be held to only two heart tricks.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If you were South, the Declarer at a seven-spade contract, how would you play the diamond suit?

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Carolina Art To Be Shown In Washington

Exhibit Jan. 30-31 Aimed to Make Exhibition Center of City.

Marking inauguration of a movement which may make the National Capital the exhibition center for the arts of the various States, North Carolina will stage in Washington a two-day exhibit of her art and music on January 30 and 31.

Sponsored by prominent educators, social and business leaders, musicians and artists of the State, the exhibit will be brought to a climax with a concert in Constitution Hall on January 31, at which Edouard Albion, barytone, formerly director general of the Washington National Opera, will be the principal artist.

Leslie P. Spelman, director of music of Meredith College, N. C., who will give an organ recital, and Miss Elizabeth Marshall Mauney, youthful coloratura soprano, will be the assisting artists.

Painting and Pottery.

The exhibit of paintings by North Carolina artists, pottery and other art objects will be opened the preceding day in the House of the Seven Arts at Fifteenth and Chapin streets northwest.

Undertaken as a means to call attention of the National Capital to the artistic, educational and cultural development of the State, the sponsors have defrayed all expenses and no charge will be made for admission to either the exhibit or the concert.

Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus heads the list of sponsors and Brig. Gen. Williams, on duty at the War Department here, and Miss Jane Elizabeth Newton, secretary-treasurer of the North Carolina State Society of the District, have undertaken to distribute tickets to resident North Carolinians and other admirers of the Tarheel State. Gen. Williams is president of the society and a sponsor.

Sponsors have extended a general invitation to former members of the Washington Opera Company to attend the concert, and tickets will be distributed through Mrs. J. Bernard McDonnell, 1412 Chapin street northwest.

Sponsors Announced.

In addition to Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, the sponsors include: John Sprunt Hill, financier and member of the State assembly; Mrs. Cameron Morrison, wife of the former governor and senator; Mrs. Clay Williams, wife of the president of the Reynolds Tobacco Co.; Mrs. Will Reynolds, of Winston-Salem, who donated to the D. A. R. the organ which Mr. Spelman will play; Representative J. Walter Lambeth, of Thomasville; Gen. Williams, on duty at the War Department; Julian Price, president of the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Co., of Greensboro; Jefferson Penn, of Reidsville, member of the historic William Penn family; Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; Mrs. B. Frank Mebane, who has been mentioned as a candidate for governor; Mrs. J. L. Graham, who will have an exhibit of water colors; Mrs. C. E. Meisler, of King's Mountain, prominent in the D. A. R., and North Carolina philanthropies; Mrs. J. W. Cannon, sr., of Concord; Mrs. James A. Hartness, of Statesville, wife of the former secretary of state of North Carolina; Mrs. J. E. Latham, of Greensboro; Mrs. Julius Cone, M. J. Wrenn, of High Point; Mrs. J. E. Millis and Mrs. R. T. Amos, of High Point.

Arms Truce Urged By Fascist Paper

Nations Asked to Intervene in Franco-German Issue.

Rome, Jan. 21 (AP).—The moment has come, says the Gazzetta del Popolo of Turin, for England and Italy to intervene in Franco-German disarmament negotiations and at least to seek an armament truce.

The newspaper, which owing to its geographical position close to the French border is frequently chosen by the government to express its viewpoint concerning France, said diarmament is a political problem which must be solved by political means.

"An exchange of notes between France and Germany has served to clarify their positions," the paper said. "Now Italy and England can seek to bring the viewpoints together on the basis of conversations in Rome between Premier Mussolini and Sir John Simon.

Amelia S. Summerville, Former Actress, Dies

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Amelia Shaw Summerville, 71, a popular actress of a generation ago, died today from the effects of a fractured hip suffered in a fall on icy pavement.

Attendants at the Bible Institute, where she lived, said she had been a friend of Henry E. Dixie, the veteran star, who is critically ill in Bellevue Hospital. The actress had appeared in "Trilby" and "Mary, Mountain Maid." Her last role, several years ago, was in "the Gingham Girl."

Interest Is High In President's Birthday Ball

Tickets Selling Rapidly for Affair at Shoreham on Jan. 30.

City-wide response is being given the sale of tickets for the President's birthday ball to be held at the Shoreham Hotel, January 30, Mrs. John Allan Daugherty, chairman of the arrangements committee, announced yesterday.

Interest also is being shown in the midnight show to be given at the Fox Theater, the concert of the Washington Central Labor Union to be given at Central High School, and the vaudeville show to be given at the Government Printing Office Auditorium, Mrs. Daugherty said.

Tickets for the ball are on sale in all leading hotels and at headquarters of the committee, 1631 H street northwest.

All those who can not attend the president's ball and other events scheduled on January 30, will be able to contribute, through memberships to the Washington Warm Springs Foundation Club, which will be available beginning today in all banks, drug stores, Western Union offices and leading department stores. To those contributing 25 cents or more, a membership to the club, without limit as to time, will be given. Dr. George C. Havener is chairman of the club committee, assisted by representatives of every section in the District.

Girl and Her Dog First.

Little Betty Bliss and her dog Cocoa are to posses the first membership cards. Although dozens of requests asking to be the first member of the club were received by Dr. Havenner, the 10-year-old daughter of Col. and Mrs. E. Goring Bliss came into the headquarters of the President's birthday ball committee with her dog before the membership cards were even printed and asked that she and Cocoa be allowed to make the first contribution.

National figures in the theatrical work will take part in the entertainment at the Fox Theater, together with the combined stage shows and orchestras from the Fox and Earle. The committee representing Washington theaters which are cooperating for this event are: John J. Payette, Warner Bros., chairman; Carter Barron, Loew's, Inc.; Hardie Meakin, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, and Rodney Collier, Universal's Rialto.

Concert at High School.

The concert at Central High School Auditorium will include such features as the Catholic University Glee Club and Victory Post Minstrels. John Colpoys heads the committee in charge of the event and it being assisted by Richard A. Dickson, John Locher, F. W. Lee and F. S. Walker. More than 100 local labor organizations representing all independent crafts and Government employes are sponsoring the concert.

Through the permission of Public Printer George H. Carter, Harding Hall, in the Government Printing Office, will be the scene of an entertainment on the night of January 30. Professional and local talent will take part in a musical and vaudeville performance. Dr. Havenner, James T. Ford and Howell K. Stephens are in charge of arrangements for the show. Tickets are available from any Government Printing Office employe or at headquarters for the President's Birthday Ball on H street.

Other Dances.

In addition to the ball at the Shoreham, other dances being held on that night will be the All States Ball at the Raleigh Hotel, a students' dance at Georgetown University and a supper dance given by the Elks Lodge. The Knights of Columbus of the District will have a dinner at the Willard Hotel, proceeds of which will be their contribution to the Foundation campaign.

Civic and fraternal organizations which have expressed their intention of assisting with the local campaign include the Democratic Club, the Lions Club, the Reciprocity Club, the Business Mens Luncheon Club, the Ladies Auxiliary of the Fire Department and the Federation of Business Men's Clubs.

Colored citizens in the District are making preparations for a celebration, proceeds of which will go toward benefitting members of the colored race who need treatment such as afforded at Warm Springs. Mark D. Rowe is general chairman of this celebration.

Herriot Links U. S. and Japan

Tense Far East Situation Declared to Involve Threat of War.

Paris, Jan. 21 (AP).—A dangerous situation in the Far East involving the United States, Russia and Japan was seen today by former Premier Edouard Herriot, writing in the Agence Economique et Financiere.

The question of Japan's purchase of the Chinese Eastern Railroad from Russia "poses a problem of peace or war," he said, "while Japan is watching the United States' policy, particularly on naval armaments."

Between the United States and Japan on the one hand and Japan and the Soviet Union on the other," M. Herriot wrote, "tension is unquestionable." He mentioned overpopulation, export activity and militaristic parties as factors in the danger formula.

While declaring that "every sensible government must watch the Far East with the greatest vigilance," the former premier denied that France was meddling "in the present imbroglio" and said she was ready to offer her good offices.

Death Takes John McCooey, Brooklyn Democratic Boss

precipitated the former mayor's resignation.

In Paris, on learning of McCooey's death, Walker said:

"He made Brooklyn Democratic and was among the great leaders of Democracy in America."

The November mayoralty campaign brought a rift with Postmaster General Farley, creating rumors in recent weeks that Farley would seek the overthrow of McCooey, as well as of Tammany Leader Curry.

Farley came to New York last night, denied any attempt to wrest control of the Brooklyn machine from McCooey and expressed concern over his health, saying "I'm going to call on him tomorrow."

"My close association with him for a period of over 20 years brought about a personal friendship that I regarded very highly," said Farley when informed of McCooey's death.

"Mr. McCooey was active not only politically but in a civic way in his borough for many years, and he leaves behind him a record of achievement which will stand as a fitting monument to his accomplishments.

"His death will be regretted not only by members of his own party, but by thousands of other political faiths who enjoyed not only his friendship but the benefit of his advice and assistance. His passing leaves a place that will be impossible to fill.

Farley to Attend Rites.

"The party to which he gave a life's service is stronger because of his leadership. He encouraged activity upon a number of young men in politics and his borough is filled with officials of high standard because of his interest in tehir welfare."

Farley said he would leave Washington late tonight and would return for McCooey's funeral Wednesday.

Accessibility was the keystone of McCooey's political career.

District leaders could see him any hour of the day. In the thick of a campaign or convention, the newest of cub reporters could talk with him as freely as the veteran journalist. Near the Brooklyn Courthouse he kept his office in an old brown stone building. His sense of humor was keen.

Born in Manhattan.

Born in Manhattan's lower East Side within sight of old Tammany Hall, McCooey was taken to Chester, Pa., by his parents. His father, a laborer, was killed in a factory accident. The family came to Williamsburg, in the old Fourteenth Ward.

After getting a job in the postoffice, McCooey mixed with the ward leaders under the late Patrick H. McCarren, then borough boss.

McCarren liked the young fellow and soon made him a district lieutenant. When McCarren died in 1909, McCooey became the leader in the borough.

For the only time in his life, McCooey sought public office in 1909, the borough president—and lost.

All of the family were at the bedside today when he died, the widow, Mrs. Catherine McCooey; three sons, John H., jr., a justice of the supreme court; Herbert and Everett, and a daughter, Mrs. George Tilyou.

Farley Man Likely To Take Over Post

(United Press.)

A complete reorganization of the New York City Democratic political organization was regarded here last night as almost an accomplished fact.

The death of John H. McCooey, veteran Democratic leader of Brooklyn, was believed to end the last faint hope that John F. Curry and his Tammany supporters may have had of resisting the combined pressure of last fall's defeat at the polls, and the Roosevelt Administration's denial of Federal patronage.

Postmaster General Farley, who is chairman of both the National and the New York State Democratic Committees, is known to have exerted every effort to weaken the hold of Curry and Tammany upon the New York County, or Manhattan, Democratic organization. A reorganization of Tammany will not in itself satisfy the National party leaders, it has been indicated. They want a new party organization in Manhattan, which will not have to bear the burden of Tammany's past.

The Roosevelt-Farley forces already have the Bronx in their hands through its leader, Edward J. Flynn. Tammany was so weakened by the collapse of former Mayor Jimmy Walker's administration and the inanity of the O'Brien Tammany administration which followed, that the capture of New York County by the Roosevelt-Farley group should not be difficult.

President Roosevelt, Postmaster General Farley and Gov. Herbert H. Lehman are reputedly in league to gain control of the New York Democratic organization, while Sachems within the organization itself, supported by Alfred E. Smith, have been quietly working toward a similar end.

Among those being mentioned as successor to McCooey were two men who are reputedly looked upon with favor by Farley. They are Frank V. Kelly, public administrator, and Postmaster Francis J. Sinnott.

Brooklyn, Kings County, has presented a serious problem. McCooey had a sentimental value as the Kings County Democratic leader that could not readily be cast aside. In his long career as leader, he almost always went along with Tammany though he maintained just enough of an attitude of independence to make Tammany give his county an adequate share of the political plums.

Move to Farley Seen.

Curry has not been received at the White House since last fall's New York City election, in which Farley sponsored an independent ticket which ran ahead of the Tammany ticket, but behind the Fusionists headed by Fiorello H. LaGuardia.

McCooey, it appeared, was almost won over to the Farley wing of the party. He held his position as Democratic leader more because of sentiment and tradition than because the Democratic district leaders of Brooklyn wanted to maintain their Tammany alliance.

The death of the leader, political observers believed, would send the Brooklyn district leaders flocking to Farley to win recognition in Federal patronage distribution.

With the Bronx already under Farley's control, and Manhattan district leaders wavering, barely supporting Curry, it was regarded as highly probable that the next Brooklyn party leader would be an administration man. If so, that in itself should be enough to complete the job of unseating Curry, it was believed here.

The Bronx and Brooklyn will be too formidable a combination for Manhattan to fight. Neither of the other two counties—Queens and Richmond, or Staten Island—matters much in the general picture. They will go along with whichever group dominates the other three counties, which make up the bulk of the city's pouulation.

Hull Confers With Roosevelt On Cuban Rule

Back From South America, Secretary Enthuses Over Amity There.

hearted program of cooperation and understanding."

From his travels in most of the Latin-American countries to and from Montevideo, the Secretary of State was impressed with friendliness towards the United States.

Roosevelt's Policy Praised.

"Confidence born of the feeling that the United States, instead of being an arrogant or indifferent big brother, is sincerely eager for the role of equal partnership with the other Americas, accounts in my belief for the surge of good will that greeted us below the equator," he said.

A recent formal declaration of friendship by President Roosevelt, timed to fit in the work of the American delegation at the seventh Pan-American conference, paved the way for achievement of a new sentiment in all the Americas, according to Hull.

"When the President emphasized the assurance that the United States disavows and despises all the old themes of conquest or armed intervension, it became evident that solidarity of purpose of all the Americans could be attained," he said. "For the first time in the history of such conferences, there was no imposing bloc arrayed against us.

End of War Foreseen.

"Individual carpers and quibblers were thwarted. Suspicions were disarmed. Understanding of a genuine sort became the pervading element of the proceedings and cooperation a significant reality."

Although the Pan-American Conference's efforts to end the war between Paraguay and Volivia in the Gran Chaco failed, Hull is confident that strides toward peaceful solution of such conflicts were accomplished.

"I firmly believe the result will be the elimination of warfare in this hemisphere," he said.

Progress was made in questions of trade recovery and improved cultural relations between the American countries, said Hull.

Groveton P.-T. A. Buys 100 Chairs for School

The Groveton Parent-Teacher Association has purchased 100 chairs for use in the auditorium of the new Groveton School. The association also has authorized purchase of several sets of reference books for use in the school, part of the cost to be borne by the Fairfax County School Board and the State.

Mrs. C. B. Kerns, president of the organization, has appointed a committee to appear before the county school board. Members are A. H. Tinkle, chairman; E. D. Dillon and Mrs. R. N. Roseberry.

Women Back Legion's Campaign for Benefits

Indianapolis, Jan. 21 (AP).—The national executive committee of the American Legion Auxiliary today reaffirmed the auxiliary's support of the legion's full program of veterans' benefits.

The committee, composed of representatives from every State, voted to continue support of the Legion's complete program after hearing discussion of the $21,000,000 liberalization of benefits to disabled veterans authorized by President Roosevelt.

Liquor Dealers Fight Sales by Drug Stores

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—A resolution protesting what they termed unfair competition by drug stores and calling for a revision of the State control laws was adopted at a meeting of retail liquor dealers today.

The dealers, comprising the Five Boroughs Liquor Dealers Association, petitioned Gov. Lehman and the Legislature to extend the closing hour from 8 to 10 p. m., and to investigate the drug store liquor traffic.

Convict Seized Seeking Doctor

Escaped Kansas Prisoner Captured on Alighting From Street Car.

Kansas City, Jan. 21 (AP).—Charles Clifton McArthur, 29, one of seven convicts who escaped over a wall of the Kansas Penitentiary at Lansing, Friday, was captured by city detectives here today while officers continued their search in Kansas and Oklahoma for the other fugitives.

McArthur, his right leg swollen from a broken bone in the ankle, which he said he suffered in jumping from the wall, was arrested after he descended from a street car that brought him from Kansas City, Kans.

He was recognized by Detectives William P. Bruce, Clarence Ratliff and J. Sprofera from prison photographs. He still wore his blue denim uniform.

"I don't believe anybody was hit by the guards' gun fire," he said.

Police said McArthur had walked 35 miles to Kansas City to obtain medical attention. After treatment here he was returned to prison to complete a sentence of five to ten years for burglary.

Lecture Fans To See Italy's Scenic Beauty

Augustus E. Califano on The Post's Program Tomorrow.

"The half-way mark in a series of 20 illustrated travel lectures being presented by The Washington Post will be reached tomorrow night when Augustus E. Califano, Italian authority, will describe Italy and the enchantment of the Italian lakes at the Masonic Auditorium, New York avenue and Thirteenth street, beginning at 8:15 p.m. The travelogue will be supplemented by motion pictures and stereptican views in color.

Many years of travel and residence in Italy has given Mr. Califano an intimate knowledge of Italian history, scenic beauties, and Italy's many marvels of antiquity as well as an understanding of present day economic and social problems that also will be treated in his lecture.

Among the pictures that will be shown are the beautiful bay of Naples, sinister Mount Vesuvius, the historic Cathedral of San Gennaro, the National Museum filled with superb bronzes from Herculaneum and Pompeii, Rome and many of its historical places of interest, orange, lemon and olive groves, vineyards, the enchanted Lake Maggiore, Lake Lugano, Lake Como and many other places of unusual interest.

The purpose of these lectures is to provide an interesting background for news of all the world as it is brought to The Washington Post every day, through the medium of the Associated Press and other news-gathering facilities. All arrangements are made by The Washington Post and lecturers chosen on the recommendation of travel authorities. Costs are partially defrayed by the nominal admittance charge of 25 cents, for each lecture.

Tickets may be obtained at the Masonic Auditorium Box Office beginning at 7 o'clock tomorrow evening.

Insull Expulsion Decision Set Today

Council of State Will Announce Finding.

Athens, Jan. 21 (AP).—Speculation regarding tomorrow's decision of the council of state on expulsion of Samuel Insull produced a paradoxical situation today, but no definite intimation of the final outcome.

The government organ Proia quoted Premier Tsaldaris as saying that the government will respect the decision of the council of state, whatever it may be, on Insull's final appeal against an order of expulsion, effective January 31.

The opposition organ, Pholito Fulaou, interpreted published statements of the minister of the interior as a determination to expel Insull regardless of the state council's decision.

COOPERATING with the District Legion's Child Welfare Committee in caring for the interests of children of former service men, Stuart Walcott Post will hold a "Better Child Contest," Henry F. Fones, Veterans' Administration, announces.

BAKER.

Mr. Fones, post commander, has named a committee to handle entries from members of the Legion or its auxiliary, as follows:

William E. Mitchell, chairman; Dixie B. Guynn and E. J. Hurdle, all of Veterans' Administration. Mrs. Mary Esther Kolhos, Bureau of Mines, is chairman of the Child Welfare Committee of the auxiliary and is assisting.

Rice B. Means, department commander, and Mrs. Edith O'Connor, Veterans' Administration, have indorsed the project. The latter is president of the department auxiliary.

Prizes will be awarded to the most physically perfect boy and girl. Qualifications for entrants are:

1. Any boy or girl under 7 is eligible.

2. Parents must be willing to present children for examination by a board of physicians upon request of the committee.

3. Names of children must be submitted to Mr. Mitchell, 3519 New Hampshire avenue northwest (telephone, Columbia 4410), before midnight, January 31.

4. Winners of the contest must be present when the awards are made.

Prizes will be presented by a senator at a dance the Stuart Walcott Post is planning for February 3 at the Arlington Hotel.

Reaching 70, Dr. J. Franklin Collins, senior pathologist, Agriculture, has retired after 21 years' Government service. Dr. Collins is an authority on forest pathology and has lectured in botany at Brown University.

DIVISION OF INVESTIGATION, Justice, basketball team is pressing ahead to departmental championship under management of L. J. (Ty) Rauber. Walter Morris (*), playing coach, and the following are responsible for an unbroken string of victories:

James Ryan, David Shapiro, Charles May, Edward Colliflower, Lester Singman, Milton Singman, Bennett Hirsh, Earl Hirsh, Lee Levin, Forrest Burgess and Joseph Lynch.

Division of Investigation, Justice, has received an application for a position as special agent from an American youth who is at present attending school in China. He expects to be graduated from the Chinese law school in 1941.

Harrison N. Hiles, NRA, has been named code manager of the American Veneer Package Association, with offices here. Mr. Hiles was associated with the Liberty Bank of Buffalo from 1928 to 1932. Previous to that for 18 years he was with the Beaver Board Corporation of Buffalo, holding various positions ranging from credit manager to director and secretary.

Modern writers have developed the art of calling a man a so-and-so without using a code word.

THE newly incorporated Bureau of Standards Credit Union recently held its first organization meeting, thus adding one more unit to the growing list of credit unions being incorporated within the District under the law approved June 23, 1932—and a statute for which the D. C. Federation of Federal Employes was largely responsible.

Victor L. Lowe was elected president of the board of directors, with Dr. F. C. Breckenridge as vice president, and Elmer T. Cline, treasurer and clerk. Dr. J. Franklin Meyer, J. P. McKeon, O. G. Lange and C. D. Shepard are members of the board.

L. E. Barbrow, M. R. Evans and G. J. Kramer were elected to the supervisory committee.

Lee R. Downs, chairman, and James A. Slattery, clerk, are officers of the credit committee. Other members are F. M. Defandorf, M. B. Topping, K. H. Logan and E. H. Fortney. Messrs. Downs, Cline, Barbrow, Evans and Lowe will also represent the Standards unit with the D. C. league of credit unions.

Mr. Lowe says 18 new members have been recently admitted, with as many more applications pending.

Diary Guest Tickets.

700 Gardens To Help Needy

Plots on Anacostia Flats and in Georgetown Being Prepared.

Approximately 700 subsistence gardens on the Anacostia flats and in Georgetown will be available for the District's needy next spring, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, chairman of the Garden Committee of the Council of Social Agencies, and the emergency Relief Division of the Board of Public Welfare.

Ploughing will be started next week and all gardens will be assigned by March 10, when planting will begin, according to Mary Edith Coulson, committee secretary. Twenty applications for plots already have been received, she said.

Arrangements for conditioning the land were made by Leroy Halbert, director of the emergency relief division of the Board of Public Welfare. Use of Government land in the Anacostia flats was obtained through W. R. Beattie, of the Agriculture Department.

Implements obtained for the gardening project last year will be used again next spring. Last year's gardens produced an average of $75 worth of produce at an average cost of $2.50. The cost this year is expected to be lower.

Soviets Observe Lenin Anniversary

"Bloody Sunday" Is Also Commemorated.

Moscow, Jan. 21 (AP).—Soviet Russia today began commemoration of two important dates in its revolutionary calendar—the tenth anniversary of Lenin's death, which fell today and the twenty-ninth anniversary of "Bloody Sunday," when the czar's troops shot down persons who appealed to the Imperial Palace in St. Petersburg for bread.

The latter anniversary comes tomorrow, which will be a general holiday, but today was the usual work day.

The Order of Lenin was bestowed on Profs. V. P. Vorobiev and B. I. Zbarsky, noted biologists, for their work in preserving Lenin's body, which still lies in a glass-inclosed catafalque in a massive granite tomb on Red Square.

Sidney Fox and Mate Are Thinking It Over

Hollywood, Jan. 21 (AP).—Sidney Fox and her husband, Charles Beahan, seperated during a quarrel at a New Year's party, have talked things over, they said today, and decided to abandon all plans for a divorce for the present.

"In spite of our recent difficulties," said Miss Fox, film actress, "our marriage has meant too much to both of us to end it without serious consideration. We have determined to take time to think things out."

Radio Waves and Ripples

CONCENTRATION of spot advertising announcements is N. B. C.'s aim in putting five new recorded programs on the air from each of its Washington stations this week.

Beginning Wednesday WRC and WMAL will begin broadcasting five especially arranged 15-minute electrical transcriptions into which the minds hope eventually to throw all advertising now being broadcast throughout the day at the beginning or end of regular commercial or sustaining programs.

Much of the listener aversion to advertising is expected to be overcome in this way. After a couple of months of broadcasting the new programs, the minds hope to be able to sell the idea to advertisers.

Three of the programs will go on before 6 p. m., another between 6 and 11 and the fifth after 11. Under its new policy on spot advertising, N. B. C. will limit evening announcements to weather and time broadcasting.

Behind the decision of the March of time sponsors to get along without William Adams' imitations of the President are overworked White House secretaries.

It seems that a lot of listeners weren't entirely satisfied that the Adams voice was not in reality that of Mr. Roosevelt, so they wrote the White House just to make sure. Furthermore, the sound picture people, among others, were incessantly demanding that they be allowed to use a President imitator.

The secretaries saw a chance for cutting off what appeared to be an endless stream of letters and inquiries at the source. One of them, Stephen Early, called Columbia Vice President Henry Bellows here and requested that Adams be called off.

Bellows conferred with the program sponsors. Together they decided to give the White House staff a break, though in doing so they were aware a large part of their show's punch would be lost.

Adams alone was not responsible for the accuracy with which the Roosevelt voice was reproduced. Part of his effect was due to his covering the microphone with a heavy felt hat and talking down into it.

Gallows of Chance

By
E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

The Story Thus Far.

Only one man in England has the power to save Cecil Brandt from the gallows for the murder of one of his wife's friends. He is the young Home Secretary, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, who does nothing because he believes Brandt guilty. Following a visit with Sir Edward Keynsham in Norfolk County, he motors to London the night before Brandt is to die. On the road a band of masked men seize Sir Humphrey.

His captors tell him that he will be hanged if he does not agree to spare Brandt's life. He refuses and is led to the gallows. A rope is placed about his neck. Sir Humphrey holds firm in his resolve not to intervene. An excited messenger arrives and speaks to the leader. "Cecil Brandt's wife is now at your home, waiting for you," Rossiter's chief captor says, "She has never told the truth. Now she will tell all. If it exonerates Brandt will you see he is reprieved?"

Sir Humphrey agrees and is released. At his home he finds Mrs. Brandt, who tells him her husband shot Gervase Benham in her bedroom and then, finding he had made a tragic error, demanded that she keep quiet to save her honor.

His nervous fingers drummed upon the edge of the desk. He looked into what were supposed to be the most beautiful eyes in London. At that moment they were set and almost glassy. Notwithstanding the warmth in the room, she shivered.

"You must not ask me that," she begged. "You must not, indeed. It came to me suddenly—it might even have been from overhearing a chance conversation—that it might make this great difference. I thought the truth might have leaked out some other way. When the time got so short I knew then that I had to act. You won't ask me any more, Humphrey?"

He considered for a moment. It was such a strange position for a man with a scrupulous sense of honor.

"No," he decided, "I do not think that I need ask you any more."

"And it is not too late?" she repeated, with a terrible note of wistfulness in her tone.

Not Too Late.

"It is not too late," was the firm reply. "I shall feel justified now in arranging for the reprieve."

She rose to her feet. Sir Humphrey was too weary himself to take note of ordinary things, although, for a moment, he thought it strange that there were no tears in her eyes. She carried her handkerchief crumpled up in her hand like a ball, but it remained dry.

"I am going to send you away now," he said, touching a button upon his desk. "It may sound very brutal, but I think you must realize that it is best for nothing but official words to pass between us tonight. I am glad that you have come. I am glad that you have given me the opportunity of sparing you the greatest shock of all."

The butler made his silent approach. Sir Humphrey touched his visitor's ice-cold fingers and patted them with his other hand.

"You can show Mrs. Brandt out, Parkins," he dircected, "and if she hasn't her car send for a taxi. Believe me," he added to her, "I am grateful for your visit."

Room His Greatest Solace.

Sir Humphrey resumed his seat in his favorite chair before his favorite table in the room which was his greatest solace in life. The window in front of him, across which the dark red curtains were now drawn, looked out onto a pleasant square where there was very little traffic and at certain times of the year a fragrant barricade of flowering limes. But it was, after all, in a winter room.

There were very few law books or parliamentary records among the volumes with which the walls were lined. There were books of sport, of poetry, of classical fiction or biography, historical works—the mental playground of a man with cultivated tastes. The furniture was massive but comfortable, and Parkins saw to it that there were always plenty of flowers.

Horror Returns.

It was here that Humphrey Rossiter considered the problems of his own day-by-day existence. In other places, in Whitehall and Westminster, he did his life's work. As a rule, to sit in that chair, to feel himself steeped in the atmosphere he loved, was sufficient to rest his overtired brain, to bring him relief from any crisis.

Tonight the charm failed. Continually his hand was creeping up to his neck. He fancied that the smell of hemp was always in his nostrils. He heard the hammering, felt again the horror of that gruesome pageant. Impossible though it might seem, he knew that he had been on the point of death. Not death alone, but the terrible and sordid extinction of what was really a great career.

The horror of it was unrealizable. It was there now at the back of his brain. It was there in those shivering fits which he was always trying to control, the tired twitching of his limbs, the fluttering pain which kept on coming and going.

He thought even with satisfaction of the sleeping draught recently prescribed which he would find in his bedroom. Where was he? He sat up with a start. Was it sleep, or what was it which had nearly stolen his senses away? He tried to remember why he was seated there and his eyes fell upon the pile of documents. Rex versus Brandt. Why, of course, there was work to be done before he went to bed. He reached out for the telephone.

Telephones to Prison.

"Give me the night exchange of Wandsworth Prison," he directed. "Official."

He suddenly began to tremble. He had been holding the receiver in his hand a moment ago. Now it was lying there upon the floor. Some one else had been speaking. It could not have been his voice—those strange, quavering tones, the half-finished sentence. And the room was full of mist. It was spinning round. His neck! He grasped at it frantically. The rope was there again. After all, he had not escaped. They were going to hang him in that awful place. He was slipping—already slipping from his chair. Below him was that awful cellar.

They found him later, lying upon the carpet.

When he opened his eyes a nurse flitted to the bedside. She smiled at him cheerfully and called out to an elderly man who was seated at the table, writing. He came over at once, and Sir Humphrey recognized his doctor.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "Have I been ill?"

"Something like it," the other admitted. "You are going to be all right, though. I warned you that you were run down, you know, before you went on that shooting visit. You will have to rest now."

In the Meantime.

Sir Humphrey's fingers were playing nervously with his forehead. They lingered around his throat. Hemp! Why was that horrible odor in his nostrils? Why was the doctor wearing something white over his face? He was standing on the edge of something. What was it? There were other people in the room fading away and coming again—a man with a cruel voice. There was something he had to do, something on his mind. Suddenly his cry rang through the room. He raised himself fiercely in bed and gripped at the arm of the doctor, who was leaning over him.

"What time is it?" he demanded harshly. "How long have I been here?"

The doctor pushed him back, for with a sudden access of strength he was already halfway out of the bed.

"What time is it?" he groaned. "Tell me."

"It is 4 o'clock in the afternoon," the physician said soothingly. "It was midnight when they sent for me and we brought you up here at once. Do be a good fellow and lie down."

"Oh, my God!" Rossiter moaned. "Brandt—that man Brandt. He was to have been hanged at 8 o'clock." The doctor nodded gravely.

"I saw it in the early editions," he confided. "Brandt was hanged all right, at Wandsworth Prison."

Then once more everything faded away. They had him this time all right. A black sea of horror seemed to close over his head. He felt himself sinking through space. Unconsciousness was a blessed relief.

Visits Mrs. Brandt.

Along Piccadilly and Pall Mall, across Trafalgar Square and down the Strand a limousine was making leisurely progress through the gathering dusk of a February afternoon. Its occupant sat back as far as possible in the car, with folded arms, his hat pulled forward over his eyes, his general air being that of one who desires to escape observation. He looked like a man who had been near the grave, as indeed he had. His expression was that of one driving to a funeral, as indeed was allegorically the case. The Right Honorable Sir Humphrey Rossiter was about to call upon the woman whose husband he had sent to the scaffold.

The rain pattering against the windows was rather a relief than otherwise, for it aided the seclusion which he sought. It was not until the door of the car was thrown open by the blue-coated commissionaire outside the Savoy Court that he became a visible person. All London knew him from photographs, from caricatures and from the day when he himself was a figure in society and a constant diner-out. Hats were raised, polite speeches embarked upon even during those few seconds when he stepped across the pavement and rang the bell for the elevator.

No one, however, directly addressed him. A well-known journalist who had just paid a visit to an American film star stepped forward, then thought better of it. Every one knew that Katherine Brandt lived in the Savoy Court, and a good many realized that he was on his way to visit her.

To the Living.

The elevator brought him to the fourth floor; and, stepping across the carpeted way, he rang the bell of Katherine Brandt's suite. The door was opened almost at once by a maid in quiet, dark clothes. He had no need to ask any question. She took his coat and hat and he followed her into the sitting room. * * *

Katherine Brandt rose impulsively to her feet from the depths of the easy-chair in which she had been seated, and held out both her hands.

"Humphrey," she said, "I have been living in the shadow of tragedy and so have you. It is time our wills came to work. I am reading light novels and translating two plays from the French. In a week or two I am going over to Cannes. As a matter of fact, I am only here now because I had made up my mind that I would not leave London without seeing you."

"That was very kind," he murmured, still holding her hands.

Chilean Paper Praises Roosevelt Cuba Policy

Santiago, Chile, Jan. 21. (AP)—The government-owned newspaper Nacion today expressed admiration for the Cuban policy of President Roosevelt.

Despite attacks from Caribbean delegates at Montevideo, the newspaper said, Secretary of State Hull of the United States succeeded in carrying "the Rooseveltian atmosphere of the new international policy of the good neighbor" to Latin-Americans, convincing them the present course is not linked with the past.

Peery Money Plea Ruffles Virginia Calm

New Governor Takes State by Surprise in Road, School Requests.

By J. K. Irving, Jr.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 21.—The matter of changing governors at the appointed time—every four years—is sufficiently perfunctory in the State of Virginia not to create a great deal of stir or to cause among the people an appreciable quantity of uncertainty. So Gov. Peery took the oath of office last Wednesday and the reins of government from his predecessor, John Garland Pollard, with no more than the customary pomp and ceremony.

But Gov. Peery's speech of acceptance was not exactly such as to confirm the public idea that things would move along without any more action than had been indicated by the "last few words" from Dr. Pollard. He ran almost immediately into the question of finances and he struck it on a tender spot that his predecessor had been careful to salve—public education.

Pollard, in making his recommendations for the biennium, had seen proper to balance theoretically the budget by estimating a return from the State sale of liquor of $1,675,000 and an additional $500,000 from taxes on public service corporations. This would a little more than wipe out a deficit of approximately $2,000,000 resulting from the depression.

Speaks of Taxes.

The new governor—and the step had been forecast—went a good deal further. He wanted $1,000,000 for public schools and another $2,000,000 for roads. It was rather astonishing and disconcerting. Immediately the question arose: How does the new governor propose to raise this additional revenue?

He answered in the course of his message. He would be more rigid in the matter of levying and enforcing income taxes and he would tax admissions to moving picture theaters, add to the burdens of sleeping car companies and to certain other public service corporations.

Naturally he may expect protests from private citizens as well as the companies referred to. The motion picture people will kick on their own account, so will the others. But the people's stall is the most important for, after all, the people must pay it all. The cry has already been raised that if additional revenue must be had, it would be better to obtain it from a general sales tax, but the merchants, whose organization extends into the byways, have taken time by the forelock and forestalled quiet transfer to that source.

People Must Pay.

In any event, the people must pay. But they are asking if the State can not get along for another two years on the Pollard computation. It sounds business-like enough to figure as far as he did on liquor and additional returns from utilities. But $3,000,000 more when the financial situation is in an uncertain condition doesn't set well. It is probable that Gov. Peery would have received a much more cheerful "hand" had he indicated that Pollard was a little too liberal than by bluntly calling for more.

Schools and roads are both popular. The people are willing to put up more for them than for anything else. But there is an end of all altruism, even in politics, in these times of trouble. Whether Gov. Peery overstepped the mark in the beginning is something that will be determined before the end of the current session of the General Assembly.

Righteousness Called Way Out

Dr. Smith, President of Roanoke College, Is Rotary Speaker.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Dr. Charles J. Smith, president of Roanoke College, addressing the Winchester Rotary Club on the twelfth anniversary of the chartering of the club, declared that the way out of the present economic situation is righteousness.

Dr. Smith spoke on "Internationalism." He pointed out that the conception of internationalism a decade ago, as embodied in the League of Nations, was idealistic, but now it is realistic.

In discussing the changes of the governments of foreign nations, Dr. Smith declared that the reason Hitler was at the helm in Germany was because that nation was not yet ready for popular government.

Dr. Smith praised President Roosevelt for recognizing Russia.

John F. Rodman, jr., presided. Past President H. Douglas Fuller introduced Dr. Smith. Violin selections were rendered by Miss Eva Stouffer, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. H. C. Stouffer, at the piano. Mrs. E. A. Reinberg, Front Royal, sang.

Dunaway Takes Over Ranson Postoffice

Ranson, W. Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Postmaster duties were assumed here today by George E. Dunaway, recently appointed by Representative Jennings Randolph.

He succeeds Mrs. Mary Casey Baker, who has held the office during the last two Presidental terms.

Virginia Pays $203,790 To Get Land for Park

Luray, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—M. R. Trout, treasurer of Warren County, through J. M. Purcell, treasurer of Virginia, has ordered the payment of $203,790 to land owners of Warren County for real estate condemned for the Shenandoah National Park.

The largest amount paid an individual was $6,344, to J. F. Wine.

Winner Named In Oratory Test

Student of Margaret Brent High Chosen as Best St. Mary's Speaker.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Henry Burroughs, jr., student of Margaret Brent High School, was winner of the oratorical contest held here Friday night, it was announced yesterday.

This annual contest, held by the St. Marys County Oratorical Society, and in which all high schools of the county are invited to participate, had as the subject this year "The Significance of the Maryland Tercentenary." Three other schools were represented. St. Mary's Academy, by William Sterling; St. Mary's Female Seminary, by Miss Frances Metcalf, and Great Mills, by Louis Shuman.

Young Burroughs will get a silver cup, on which his name is inscribed, for his school to hold for one year, but in order to keep the cup it must be won by the same school three successive years.

Presentation of the cup takes place on Maryland Day, March 25. Falling on Sunday this year, the presentation will be made Monday.

Dr. Charles V. Hayden is chairman of the society and presided at the meeting.

Judges were William A. Loker, Mrs. Justin Sypher and S. Bernard Gwynn, superintendent of public schools of Charles County.

2 Farm Credit Associations To Be Formed

Meeting Is Set Today at Charlottesville for Five Counties.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Virginia farmer-delegates from Albemarle, Greene, Madison, Orange and Fluvanna Counties will meet here tomorrow to help organize a Production Credit Association to make loans available to farmers and stockmen of these counties.

The meeting here is primarily concerned with incorporating and organizing the Production Credit Association, with headquarters at Charlottesville.

Berryville, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—C. C. Funkhouser, county agent, announced four meetings during the next ten days to acquint farmers of Clarke County with the Federal hog-corn reduction program. The meetings are:

Berryville, Wednesday, courthouse, 7:30 p. m.; Boyce, Thursday, Parish Hall, 7:30 p. m.; White Post, Friday, Parish Hall, 7:30 p. m.; Pierces, Monday, schoolhouse, 7:30 p. m.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Farmers of Augusta, Rockbridge, Bath, Highland and Rockingham Counties have been asked to meet in Staunton on Thursday, to consider organizing a production credit association to serve the farmers' short term credit needs. The Production Credit Corporation of Baltimore, a branch of the Farm Credit Administration, is empowered to organize associations.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—When the commissioners of St. Marys County meet here Tuesday, they will take up filling of the position of county agent and home demonstrator. G. Frank Wathen and Miss Ethel Joy have held these positions for several years past.

Dr. Symons, of the extension service of College Park, recommended two persons not residents of the county, and as the county pays part of the salaries, the commission insists local people be employed.

10 Prisoners Held in Jail at Harrisonburg After Sentences.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Ten prisoners facing total terms of 81¾ years are now in Rockingham County Jail awaiting removal to the State penitentiary at Richmond.

They were sentenced at the present term of circuit court.

Clarence Williams, Negro, heads the list with 33 years for killing his wife; Ray Davis, of Alexandria, 10 years, and his companion, James Henkel, also of Alexandria, 8½ years for attempted burglary.

Dennis Via and J. L. Kelly face 9 years for a shooting affray; Lonzi Knight, 7 years for killing Andy Carrier.

Leonard Lilly, who shot a neighbor's steer for revenge, has 2 years; Louis Shirkey, 15 months and George Smiley, 1 year for housebreaking.

James Higgins has 1 year for second violation of prohibition law.

Wytheville, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—A court order providing removal from a Bristol hospital to the jail has been issued for Henry F. Bausell, 55, and his son, Bernace Bausell, 27, indicted in the slaying of T. Eugene Cornett, 57, and his daughter, Mrs. Virginia Cornett Bausell, 25.

The Bausells have been under special guard in the hospital.

Cornett and his daughter, the estranged wife of Bernace Bausell, were killed in a fight at the Cornett home, two miles south of Rural Retreat, January 13.

The indicted men were wounded and were taken to the hospital.

"Dark Horses" Enter Picture In Maryland

Goldsborough, G.O.P., and Lewis Discussed for Governorship.

By J. E. Hager.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 21.—Two dark horses have suddenly been injected into the political arena, neither, perhaps, with his own consent as yet, but close political observers of the party which each represents are beginning to talk among themselves of their possibility as candidates for the gubernatorial race in Maryland next November.

Both are now holding elective offices, one in the United States Senate and the other in the House. A strong sentiment in favor of Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough as the Republican candidate for governor, an office he once held, is apparent among western Maryland Republicans. The Republican newspaper in Allegany County last week revealed that the name of Senator Goldsborough has been advanced not only by Republican leaders of western Maryland, but that Republican leaders of Washington County had held a secret meeting during the Christmas holidays and had discussed the senator and several others who desire the nomination, but that the sentiment was strongly in favor of urging Goldsborough to seek the gubernatorial nomination.

Ritchie's Word Awaited.

With the time approaching when Gov. Albert C. Ritchie has indicated he will make known whether he will run for his sixth term, the name of Representative David J. Lewis, of the Sixth congressional district, is being mentioned in Democratic circles as one of the several "dark horses" whose candidacy for governor might command the support of Democratic factions throughout the State. There appears a strong belief that Ritchie will announce his retirement from active politics.

Lewis is a power in his own district, as was attested by the huge majority he received in the last election, in a district that often has given large majorities to former Congressman Fred N. Zihlman and other Republican congressional candidates. Many Republican leaders have admitted Lewis has lost none of his popularity in the district.

Lewis never has been closely aligned with the State Democratic organization, although the Ritchie organization in the Sixth district was actively behind him when he was elected.

Popularity Widespread.

But Lewis' popularity is not confined entirely to the Sixth district, which sent him to Congress. His record in Congress and as a member of the tariff commission has brought favorable comment from newspapers of Baltimore, the votes of which city any candidate for governor must have to be elected. These newspapers have praised Lewis' ability and constructive legislation he has introduced.

But Democratic leaders admit, too, that any candidate that obtains the Democratic nomination this fall must have the support of the Ritchie organization, which, despite the setbacks on the Eastern Shore due to the recent lynching investigation, is still the real power on the Western Shore.

It is known that Democrats throughout western Maryland have been watching the progress of Mayor Howard Jackson, of Baltimore, who all agree would accept the nomination for governor, and is, as a matter of fact, recognized as an aspirant for the nomination. Only 10 days ago, Eastern Shore men hailed Jackson, upon his visit to that section, as the next governor of Maryland. Jackson is a native of the Eastern Shore.

But Washington County Democrats, even those who are opposed to Gov. Ritchie's sixth term, have asserted they will not vote for Jackson, even if he gets the nomination.

Two Others Mentioned.

The names of two other men, neither of whom are looked upon as politicians, have been mentioned as possible Democratic candidates. They are Brig. Gen. Milton Reckord, head of the State militia, and Col. Stuart Janney, chairman of the Maryland Welfare Board, both Ritchie appointees. Both are popular in the State.

Meantime, while the undercurrent here is bringing the name of Senator Goldsborough to the forefront, Republican leaders from all sections of the State have been gathering in Baltimore ever since the holidays, discussing two other avowed gubernatorial candidates—Harry Nice and John Phillip Hill. Some of these leaders have expressed the opinion that each will kill the other off. The latest to announce his desire for the nomination, Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt, of Annapolis, is not known in this section of Maryland and his announcement failed to cause even a ripple.

$130,000 for Relief Asked in Roanoke

Budget Goes to Council, Then to U. S. Bureau.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—A budget of $130,000 for operation here in January, February and March has been submitted to the city by the Roanoke Social Service Bureau, of which Miss May Hankins is director. She said about $40,000 has been spent by the bureau for Federal emergency relief here in the last three months.

The application must be approved by city council before it can be forwarded to William A. Smith, administrator in Virginia for the Federal Emergency Administration.

Miss Hankins says $40,000 more will be spent on a nursery school and sewing classes. The new projects, the employment of 23 persons on the bureau's staff and decision to give two quarts of milk a day to some 800 families will increase costs of operation, Miss Hankins added.

Marylander Killed In Auto Collision

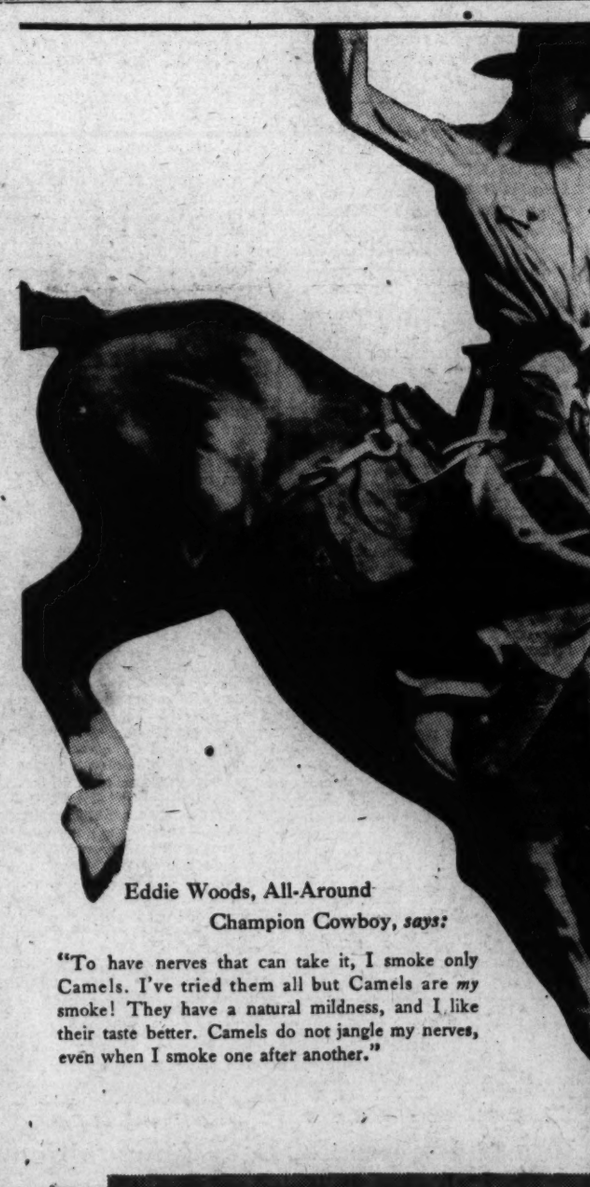

Companion's Back Broken in Dresden Crash.

Easton, Md., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Vernon Blades, 30, of Bethelehem, Md., was killed at Dresdon, Md., this morning when his automobile collided with another machine and overturned.

Edward McClure, of Tilghman, Md., who was with Blades, received a broken back, and was taken to Easton Emergency Hospital. Blades operates a garage at Bethlehem. He is survived by his wife.

Names of the persons in the other car were not obtained.

"COWBOYS NEED HEALTHY NERVES — AND, BELIEVE ME, SO DO HOUSEWIVES"

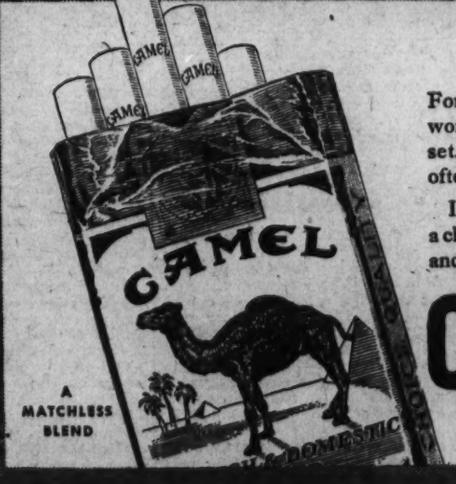

Eddie Woods, All-Around Champion Cowboy, says:

"To have nerves that can take it, I smoke only Camels. I've tried them all but Camels are my smoke! They have a natural mildness, and I like their taste better. Camels do not jangle my nerves, even when I smoke one after another."

Mrs. Phyllis L. Potter, Home Maker, Montclair, New Jersey, says:

"I don't doubt but what it takes healthy nerves to ride an outlaw horse! But any woman who is a home maker will agree with me that shopping, cleaning, answering the doorbell a dozen times a day, and tending to all the other duties of running a household are enough to jangle anybody's nerves. I know that I have to be careful in choosing my cigarettes. I am a confirmed Camel smoker because I can smoke Camels freely without a hint of jumpy nerves. And they are the mildest cigarette I ever smoked!"

How Are YOUR Nerves?

Fortunate indeed is that modern man or woman who does not get nervously upset. Raw, jangled nerves seem, all too often, to be the order of the day.

If nerves are your problem, we suggest a check-up now—on your eating, sleeping, and smoking. Get a fresh slant on your smoking by trying Camels. Much is heard about the tobaccos used in various cigarettes. But this is a fact, as any impartial leaf-tobacco expert will tell you:

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand. An important fact to nervous people!

Everywhere you see Camels smoked more and more. People do care about mildness...about good taste...about their nerves. And Camels never get on your nerves...never tire your taste.

Of All Places.

Bird lovers, professional and amateur, ought to be pretty well discouraged about what's going on in Lafayette Square.

Long before Mr. Roosevelt even got to be Assistant Secretary of the Navy, the park facing the White House was a rendezvous for nurses with their charges, and pigeons anxious to do tricks, even to lighting on your hat, for a handout. Lately English sparrows and starlings, forced to adapt themselves to changing methods of transportation, have joined the breadline, and are almost as tame as pigeons.

But, insofar as being a home is concerned, Lafayette Park is like New York—it's a nice place to go, but nobody wants to live there. Of course, squirrels do live in the park, but no better is expected of them. Starlings don't need nests as long as public buildings stand and sparrows are little tramps who sleep wherever night catches them. Any good honest bird who had the intention to become a householder with a family could find a hundred better places in Washington. But birds don't appear to have much more sense than human beings.

One of the handsomest nests in town has gone up in a straggly, scrawny tree at Jackson Place and Pennsylvania Avenue, one of our busiest corners. Gasoline fumes ruin the air; screeching automobile brakes and horns make the place an eternal New Year's celebration and signal lights flash night and day. Stenographers and bureau heads—even Mr. Hull if he chooses—can look right down into the nest from State Department windows and see everything that goes on. The mama bird can't even lay an egg without everybody knowing about it. Of all places in Washington to make a home, that is the poorest.

Only a professional bird lover straining himself to the utmost could care much about such a feather-brained couple.

District Libraries.

Among the distinguishing features for which Washington is known throughout the world is the Library of Congress. The fame of this remarkable institution has led to the conclusion—almost everywhere except in the District—that the people of Washington are highly favored with library facilities. The millions of visitors who have admired the magnificent structure next door to the Capitol would be astounded to know that many school children in Washington have never seen the inside of a library.

Of course, the Library of Congress is very useful to adults who can go there to study. But it does not serve Washington as a public library. Books actually available to school children and casual readers are shamefully inadequate for the city as a whole.

Washington has one central library, four branches and five subbranches, or about one-fourth the minimum requirements fixed by the American Library Association. On a per capita basis, Indianapolis and Seattle have nearly twice as many books as the District. This shortage has become particularly acute during the depression, when many unemployed have been seeking to utilize their time educationally.

In vain has Dr. Bowerman, our able and energetic city librarian, prepared plans for extension of library facilities. Conscious only of its own superb establishment, Congress has been deaf and blind to the needs of the rank and file of District residents. Sheer neglect has prevented the construction of branch libraries in sections that now have no access to public books, and a parsimonious attitude toward the existing libraries has prevented normal growth.

From The People.

Gentlemen who, prematurely, have been pronouncing funeral orations over the League of Nations will be interested in a cable to the New York Times from that paper's Geneva correspondent.

Chancelleries of the world may have reacted favorably to recent denunciation of the Geneva agency by personages of importance, but the League itself has had striking evidence that there are still those who believe in it. So numerous have private contributions become that the Council devoted a meeting to consideration of whether it would accept small gifts from individuals. The decision was favorable, provided no member vetoed a gift from an individual in his country.

A number of Americans have sent $1 or more, some of them merely signing their initials and saying the contribution was "For Peace." A Scottish Sunday school class sent 87 cents, and said, "We are all looking to you to save us from another war." An Englishman sent half a crown "to foster peace and cooperation." A man from "down under," in New Zealand, sent a pound.

The whole policy of the League has been to discourage private gifts. And it does not now encourage them, because its officials desire that it shall be dependent upon the governments which use it as an instrument for peaceful adjustment of world problems. But the fact that it is deluged with private, anonymous, small gifts, indicates the extent of the hope the people of the world place in its efficacy.

The Eastman Report.

The voluminous report submitted to the President and to Congress on Saturday by Joseph B. Eastman, Federal Coordinator of Transportation, is not intended to be a document of finality.

It seeks to throw light only on one of four major questions which the coordinator has set himself to answer in accord with the stipulations of section 13 of the Emergency Railroad Transportation Act. Reports on three other fundamental questions, which are promised "as speedily as possible," must be at hand before any definite conclusions on the future of the railroads can be drawn. This is obvious when it is realized that it is left for a forthcoming study to take up the issue of governmental regulation of transportation agencies other than railroads, and to consider the formulation of a national transportation policy, as opposed to competing railroad, highway, waterway, airplane and pipeline policies.

Mr. Eastman, therefore, has submitted what is in reality an interim report, devoted to the answer of a single question: "Is there need for a radical or major change in the organization, conduct and regulation of the railroad industry which can be accomplished by Federal legislation?" While his answer to this vital issue is in no sense evasive, it can not be called really conclusive. The coordinator says, in effect, that there is very great need for radical and major change, but that the present is not the time to put such change into effect.

"Theoretically and logically," says Mr. Eastman, "public ownership and operation meets the known ills of the present situation better than any other remedy." He further holds that "many of the dangers which are ordinarily seen in public ownership and operation can be brought under control if suitable precautions are taken." And in conclusion the coordinator inclines to the belief "that such ownership and operation will be the ultimate solution of the railroad problem." This conclusion is bolstered by a great weight of evidence, presented with restraint and cogency. But to it is coupled the flat statement that: "Nevertheless, I am not now prepared to recommend resort to public ownership and operation."

The reasons why the coordinator refrains from urging the immediate practice of what he regards as sound theory will appear to many as a tacit admission that his theory is not wholly watertight. He believes, and few will contradict him, that the Federal Treasury has quite enough immediate and prospective deficit without "imposing burdens which can not be definitely foreseen." The clear intimation is that the Government would be assuming a risk in taking over the railroads which it should not at the present time incur. The obvious retort to this is that if the country were in better shape financially, the railroads would doubtless also reveal an improved condition which would make the argument for Government ownership less effective.

In other words, the coordinator virtually admits that there is no assurance the Government would succeed better than private ownership. He thereby puts himself in somewhat the position of the doctor who refused to perform a serious operation, but said he would be glad to take charge of the case later if his colleague would demonstrate that the knife could be used successfully.

The first Eastman report is obviously intended to be a club which will be held over the private managements during the trying months which lie ahead. "Much will depend upon the railroad managements" . . . "The managements must pull together instead of pulling against each other" . . . "It is well that the managements should have the chance to apply the principles of statemanship." Such phrases, in which an underlying threat is obvious, recur constantly throughout the document. The railroad executives might legitimately retort that they are being scolded for not showing perfection in a job which Mr. Eastman says is at the moment too big for the Government to swing successfully. But rather than indulge in repartee they will be well-advised to close ranks and show the public that the problem is not really too big for private initiative to overcome.

The Fight For Economy.

Reports that President Roosevelt is receding from his courageous stand on economy legislation are denied at the White House. Some of the President's political advisers on Capitol Hill are seeking a compromise on veterans' pensions and the Federal pay cut. But the President has not yielded to their importunities, and there is ground for hope that he will make a vigorous fight against any attempt to break down the economy act.

It is unfortunate that Federal salaries and veterans' benefits are linked together in consideration of this important issue. For the pay cut represents a very real sacrifice on the part of Government employes. No question of principle would be involved in its elimination. In fact, the basis on which salaries are paid remains as it was before the depression. Temporary deductions are made as a patriotic contribution toward a balanced budget. And it is generally agreed that the salary cut must be withdrawn as soon as the Government can afford to do so.

Veterans' pensions are in a very different category. Under the present law all veterans who were injured as a result of their war service are being cared for. Inequities arising under the economy act have been eliminated by Executive orders granting an additional $21,000,000 to veterans. Yet Congressional leaders seek to restore the old system of disseminating lavish benefits for "presumptive" disabilities. Thus might be undermined the important principle enunciated by President Roosevelt when he told the last American Legion Convention that "no person because he wore a uniform must thereafter be placed in a special class of beneficiaries."

Ten months ago, when Congress was confronted by this issue, President Roosevelt told that body: "Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on rocks of loose fiscal policy. We must avoid this danger." Estimating the aggregate deficit for the three previous years at $5,000,000,000 the President said: "With the utmost seriousness I point out to the Congress the profound effect of this fact upon our National economy." Now the deficit for the current year is estimated at $7,300,000,000.

The drive for more liberal pensions is closely allied to efforts by a number of Senators to perpetuate the CWA. That organization has just found it ncessary to curtail outlays because its funds are nearing exhaustion. Most of its $400,000,000 allotment has been spent in two months. It would not take long, at this rate, for the CWA to bankrupt the Government.

There is no political reason why Mr. Roosevelt should compromise on the economy issue. He is supported by large majorities in both houses. Congress is unusually amenable to his wishes. A weakening of the White House attitude would only give encouragement to other groups planning raids on the Treasury.

On The AAA Front.

Congress is surveying the operations of the AAA to see what progress is being made toward rehabilitation of agriculture. It is too early, of course, to make a complete appraisal of this experiment in production control. But certain trends are apparent.

In accounting for his stewardship before the Senate agriculture committee, Secretary Wallace noted a reduction in the surpluses of staple crops, and predicted a substantial increase in farm income. Experiments of the last eight months have demonstrated that most farmers are willing to cooperate with the Administration so long as cash is forthcoming from the Treasury. Secretary Wallace believes that the practicability of the domestic allotment plan, so far as its administration is concerned, has been conclusively demonstrated.

The most recent report on wheat plantings make this optimism appear a little premature. AAA contracts with farmers require a reduction of 15 per cent in the acreage planted. But actual winter wheat plantings show a reduction of only 7.2 per cent. Eighteen States, including most of the leading wheat producers, have reduced acreage, but 18 others have planted larger areas. Approximately 20 per cent of the country's wheat growers refused to sign acreage control agreements. Conceding that "apparently some non-cooperating farmers increased their acreage or planted new acreage," Secretary Wallace told the committee that "supplementary plans to take additional acreage out of production . . . will be put into effect before the end of the spring planting season."

The tendency of farmers outside of the chief wheat belts to plant more of this staple may well arouse apprehension among AAA officials. At present there is almost no export market for American wheat, except those subsidized shipments on which the Government is losing 21 cents per bushel. "We may never again," says Secretary Wallace, "need as much land in wheat production as we had during the last decade." Yet the temporary benefits of the acreage reduction program are drawing other farmers into competition with the country's established wheat producers.

Difficulties of this kind appear to be less evident in the cotton belt, since 98 per cent of all the acreage reduction contracts offered by the AAA last year were accepted. But while American farmers were plowing under their cotton with a view to raising prices, their foreign competitors increased their output by 16 per cent. Egypt, India, China, Russia and other cotton producing nations are fully aware of the American curtailment plan. We would be naive indeed if we didn't expect them to take advantage of it.

In the live stock industry failure to pass the hog-processing tax on to the consumer affords a dilemma. Consumption of meat depends largely upon its prices and the buying power of the public. If prices rise too much less meat reaches the dinner table of Mr. Average Consumer. Consequently, the hog-processing tax, as Secretary Wallace told Congress, "has been reflected somewhat more in the farm price of hogs than in either the spread or in the consumers' price of pork." It remains to be seen how much of the $350,000,000 which the AAA expects to pay hog producers will come out of their own pockets.

"Our objective from the start," says Mr. Wallace, "has been to work out methods of adjusting production to supply which would increase farmers' income, and at the same time lead to stable and enduring prosperity for farmers." Certainly the first part of this objective has been achieved. Farmers throughout the country have been gladdened by Government checks and generous loans. But what of future stability?

On the Subject of Pensions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest, amusement and amazement the letter in your issue of Saturday, January 6, signed "H. W. S.," who reveals herself as the wife of a veteran.

The writer to whom I refer says that she and her husband were never money-getters, but placed the money they controlled in small annuities which should guard against them in old age or from disaster. She decries the loss of a pension because it deprives her and her husband of the "little more" than a comfortable living. "We were never money getters, but kept out of debt," says the writer, but further on in her letter, in speaking of the loss of her husband's pension, says that it helped to meet "the deferred obligations assumed upon the basis of an income now withdrawn."

If H. W. S. will take into consideration the millions who have never had the "little more," not to mention the further millions who have never had anything to place in annuities large or small, she may find some comfort in what she considers her predicament

Further, if the eyes of this distressed lady should fall upon these lines it will be so kindly appreciated if she will explain what she means by keeping out of debt and also explain what is meant by ". . . the deferred obligations assumed upon the basis of an income now withdrawn."

Candidly, I am of the opinion that much of the hue and cry about the elimination and reduction in pensions is due to the fact that the pensioners have assumed obligations for Uncle Sam to assume through the payment of pensions. Should they not blame their own judgment instead of the Government? C. B. R.

In Defense of Coles District.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An article in your paper a few days ago entitled "Neighbors Are Bootleggers" gave us a bad name among the readers of your excellent paper, in other parts of the country. The people in Coles District, in Prince William County, Va., compare favorably with any other people as to education and morality. We have had until recently eight school houses in this district, always full of pupils learning lessons like other children, and they were not taught the science of moonshining, crap shooting, or stud poker. Some of those children graduated from Manassas High School with high honors and have gone out to other States to make good. Five of these boys are today real live ministers of the Gospel, and others are professors in different walks of life, and all are law-abiding citizens.

We have also six churches and two fraternal lodges with Sunday schools running in each of the four churches. Now, does it look reasonable that 90 per cent of these people are bootleggers? What these people need now is some industry to employ labor, say three days each week, so as to give them money to buy such things as they can not grow on the land—in other words, money with which to pay doctors, grocers and taxes, all of which must be paid in cash.

We have about 500 acres of timber land here bearing good white oak, red oak, maple and other hard woods which can be made into furniture or other useful articles, plenty of good water, and good roads to each railroad. Also we have a gold mine and the famous gold ridge traverses the district from northeast to southwest with specimens assaying $30 per ton. We have a State bank ready to be opened.

Now if any of that committee of Mr. Hazen's has any ideas to suggest how to get something going in this district, he will confer a blessing on a stranded people.

By one who has lived among these people for 20 years.

Agonies of Waiting For a License.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read E. N. D.'s letter about his difficulties in getting an automobile license. What he says is absolutely correct. I never saw a worse mess and more inefficiency in a Government office than in that traffic office.

For a reason that I have not learned yet, no application was mailed me. I made several trips to find out and although I insisted I had lived in the same place for ten years the officials had me stand in the "returned mail" line for several hours, and finally I gave up in disgust. I then tried to get information from a clerk who seemed to have a list of doubtful addresses on his desk. He had lost a registration card that some colored driver had given him to make a check and spent 35 minutes trying to find it, without success. I then walked into what I thought was an executive's office and was told to go back to the returned mail section, but I got angry then and was rather boisterous in relating my experiences to date.

That got me into the chief clerk's office and he heard my story and gave a clerk my registration card to go out to the returned mail section. The clerk returned with the information that no application of mine was there, something I insisted was true in the very beginning. The chief clerk then wrote O. K. on my card and told me to go down to window 4. Like E. N. D. says, window 4 had at least 30 applicants around it and the clerks therein working at a snail's pace. I had spent too much time already in the Traffic Bureau, so decided that the best thing for me to do was to wait until about the middle of the month and then there probably would be a lull and perhaps I could get my tags.

I feel rather strongly, as you may observe, about these conditions, but it is time the public called attention to the condition and had it corrected. H. R.

Theater Ushers and the NRA.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is no remunerative advantage for the ushers in the theaters of one of our largest exhibitors of motion pictures under the NRA. It was hard enough to make both ends meet before the NRA came along, but it seems that the legal representatives of the motion picture industry duped the representatives of our Government and they fell into a trap purposely laid for them at the signing of the now enacted code, for these young men have to be satisfied now with a salary of $10 per week (to live on?).

I was under the impression that the purpose of the NRA was to raise wages. In this instance, however, it reduces the income of these boys considerably.

I have called this deplorable condition to the personal attention of the administrator and wonder how long it will take to get the salary for these young men that they rightfully deserve or at least as much as they were receiving before the NRA was ever heard of.

The Proposed New Dollar.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It appears from the papers that the President proposes to stabilize the dollar at 50 cents. This will be pretty hard on the Government employe, for it means that it will take $2 to buy what now costs him $1.

Unless he is to be subjected to a bare existence, which is very nearly his present lot, his salary should be doubled before stabilization becomes effective, for with the 15 per cent cut, which is doubled by devaluation, and a 50-cent dollar, he will have sustained a reduction in salary of 80 per cent.

When the so-called Conant system of curreney was established in the Philippine Islands the nomenclature of the Spanish coinage was retained. The peso was the unit of value and subsidiary coins were centavos. The peso was exactly of the value of 50 cents in American money. All salaries in the insular government were based on the American dollar. Therefore, an official, whose salary was say, $5,000, was paid in Philippine currency at the rate of 10,000 pesos.

If we are going to Filipinize our currency on the basis of a 50-cent dollar we should follow the Philippine government in the matter of government salaries. A. S. L.

For Quick Results, Issue Ammunition To Privates Instead of the General

By Robert Quillen.

There is a way to end the depression almost at once, give every man a job and make business boom.

The Administration has sponsored many measures that suggest the plan and approve it in principle, but no one has suggested the plan itself.

Consider these matters that justify it.

One reason for recognizing Russia was the reasonable hope that Russians would buy great quantities of American goods—on credit.

The banks are urged to extend greater credit, on the theory that want of credit hampers business and prevents expansion.

Vast credits have been given to farmers, in the form of land, seed and crop loans, and business in agricultural States has multiplied.

Apparently no one doubts that greater credit means greater business, and apparently those who need goods will borrow or buy to the limit of their credit.

That being true, why not make business boom by providing credit for those who need it here at home?

Money spent for labor by the RFC and CWA will not be returned. Borrowed money, for the most part, is repaid.

And much CWA money—in my section, at least—goes to bootleggers and gamblers instead of building up legitimate business.

Why not give relief in the form of goods instead of cash? Why not give the needy credit instead of paying them for useless work?

Let the Government underwrite retail business. Grant to every citizen a "store credit" equal to one-half the worth of his property or one-half of his normal annual earnings.

Let him appear before a Government agent to establish his deserts and give a lien on his property and future earnings; let him be given a credit sheet on which each merchant in turn will write the sum of his purchases until his credit is exhausted, and let him sign for each purchase a coupon that the merchant can exchange for cash.

Certain restrictions would be necessary, but who can doubt that such universal credit would empty every merchant's shelves and so increase demand that every factory would operate at full capacity?

A few rogues might fail to pay; but a dollar loaned and lost would cost the taxpayer no more than a dollar paid by the CWA for unnecessary labor.

Carlisle Bargeron

IT would be funny, in fact, it would be a scream, if the Democrats, forced to live closer and closer to the high ideals and lofty purposes implied in their New Deal slogan, finally became so pure that they ascended into heaven and left the Government to the Republicans again. Yet I can see that distinct possibility in the happenings of the past few days.

BARGERON.

A movement, originally aimed at only the so-called political hucksters, and involving only a few men, is growing by leaps and bounds. There is no telling the end as the wheels of virtue gain in momentum and circumference. Never have I seen a reform catch on so. Like tossing a rock into a pond, there is no seeming limit to the spread that ensues.

• • • •

Here is a case of where Mr. Roosevelt was asked by a newspaperman one day if he approved of national committeemen practicing before the Government here and he replied no, he didn't. Then subsequently he was asked if he thought Jim Farley should be both Postmaster General and national chairman, and he replied, no, he didn't, to that, and again he was asked if he approved the Vandenberg bill which would prevent any official of a political party having anything to do with the Government, and he said yes.

From that a movement is developing to amend the Vandenberg bill, to broaden its terms to take in a lot of others, for one thing to prevent congressmen and senators from participating in any court action in which the Government is involved.

But the possibilities of reform do not end there. The suggestion is thrown out that a congressman using his influence for a postoffice in his district when no postoffice is needed, does not have the interests of his country at heart, but is actuated solely by a desire to get votes. Perhaps, something could be done about this.

• • • •

The point I am trying to make is that it is amazing how this thing has caught on and how it keeps on developing. It would not have happened under the Republicans. A Republican President would have turned scornfully towards the newspapermen who asked him those questions and just the same as asked if they were born yesterday. And right then and there the whole business would have been squelched.

But with the New Dealers it is different. They are supposed to be pure, far above the traditional practices of men and mice.

When you ask them if they think Jim Farley should be both Postmaster General and national chairman, they must say: "Oh, no, indeed. We are so glad you called our attention to it."

The very funny thing about it is that it makes no difference whether they take the title of national chairman from Jim or not, he will be national chairman, nevertheless. He will be that just as long as he is the Postmaster General and has the patronage that goes with the job.

• • • •

And don't think, either, that a lot of bitternesses aren't developing in this purifying process. They explain, really, the expansion of the movement. The administration got particularly sore when the name of Frank Walker, head of the Emergency Recovery Council, was thrown into the political huckster story, and they know or profess to know the man who was responsible for it. They have caused laudatory stories to be written about Walker since.

Walker is one of the highest calibred men of the new crowd. And he was certainly not using his political influence in representing clients. What he is doing is building up a gigantic Democratic machine to supplant the various relief agencies in the States. Only the Republicans would call this wicked.

Emerson's Essay on Napoleon.

If I could keep only one of the prose pieces written by Ralph Waldo Emerson, I should keep his essay on Napoleon, published originally in his book, "Representative Men," in 1850.

We should expect the greatest of American philosophers and mystics to write well on friendship, love, religion, nature, and on metaphysics. But that he could write a masterpiece of appraisal on the most practical man of modern times, would seem as improbable of success as the attempt by a clergyman to estimate the work of a mechanical engineer. Yet Emerson, who had never studied military tactics, understood Napoleon a great deal better than Napoleon could have understood him. Our quiet American, living in seclusion in the rural retreat of a New England country village, made a valuation of Napoleon's mind, character and career, that the latest researches of historical scholars, who have access to the archives, merely ratify.

Emerson was not overawed. He studied him with aloofness, as we study any portentous phenomenon. He gives full credit to Napoleon's marvelous genius, his capacity for getting things done, the rapidity of his mind. But Emerson shows with unmistakable clarity why Napoleon failed. It was not his fault; he did his best. But the scheme of things was against him. Napoleon tried to fight the moral law of the world, as hopeless as to the fight the law of gravitation. If you don't believe this, read Emerson's essay. Read it anyhow.

Tomorrow—If Winter Comes.

William, Mary College Seeks CWA Money

$240,000 Asked for Gym, Lecture Building and Stadium.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—Formal application of the College of William and Mary for $240,000 for new construction at the Norfolk division of the institution has been submitted to the Virginia Advisory Board of the Public Works Administration, meeting here.

Although this was the only new application for PWA funds proponents of other projects which have been hanging fire came to inquire into the status of their requests and two delegations came down from Covington to engage in a controversy over the proposal to erect a municipal electric power plant.

The Covington power plant debate was the most enlivening feature of the session yesterday, and was given more time than any other business on the docket. The board, however, arrived at no decision.

Plan Gym and Stadium.

A. H. Foreman, Norfolk member of the College of William and Mary board of visitors, presented the application of the college for the $240,000 loan. The sum would provide, Mr. Foreman said, for a gymnasium and lecture building to cost approximately $100,000 and a stadium to cost $140,000.

The controversy over Covington's proposal to erect a municipal electric power plant arose because of the protest of the Virginia Public Service Corporation and a so-called citizens committee of Covington. The town's application for a $400,000 loan to erect the plant was laid before the PWA several weeks ago.

Alexandrian Leads Foes

Opponents of the project were represented by Floyd W. King, of Alexandria, chairman of the board of general counsel for the Virginia Public Service Corporation, and several citizens whom he introduced. These included Cecil L. Reid, engineer representing the citizens committee; Ellis H. Barr, chairman of the Allegheny county school board; Thomas M. Gathright, chairman of the committee, and Homer H. Parker, Covington merchant.

Appearing to defend the city's action were City Manager James S. Mathers, Councilman and former Mayor E. M. Stull; Hale Collins, attorney, and E. C. Wiley, Lynchburg, consulting engineer, whose firm designed the proposed power plant.

Water Line Crosses River

Mount Jackson, Va., Jan. 21. (Spl)—Due to favorable weather conditions, the river crossing of the Mount Jackson waterworks project has been completed in five days. Materials for the project were furnished by the town and labor costs by the Civil Works Administration.

One hundred men, working in two shifts, were employed on the project. The pipe line was laid 4 feet beneath the river bed. The length of the pipe line was 227 feet and workmen found it necessary to cut their way through solid rock for 115 feet of the distance. J. L. Meem planned and supervised the work.

Winchester CWA Jobs Halted.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.). After all Civil Works Administration projects in Winchester had ceased yesterday under orders from the State CWA Administration, the local common council hurriedly met in special session to pass a special resolution, embodying additional information on the projects which, it was believed, would result in the State officials allowing work to be resumed tomorrow.

Frank W. Bailey, CWA Administrator, stopped work on the local projects after W. F. Day, of Staunton, district CWA Administrator, advised the former of the necessity for more detailed information on Winchester projects. City Manager P. P. Pilcher stated last night, after the resolution was adopted by the council, that he would leave for Richmond soon to place the additional information at the disposal of State CWA officials.

Work here had previously been discontinued on two projects—the Berryville avenue and Millwood avenue approaches to the city. It is believed work will be resumed on Berryville avenue within a few days. Some doubt was expressed here as to the continuance of the Millwood avenue project further than to make the work accomplished harmonize with the present approach.

CWA Pay Roll Hits Peak.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—The CWA pay roll in the Shenandoah Valley's seven counties and four cities the past week was about $71,000—the highest figure since the Federal program got under way. It went to 4,995 persons.

By counties and cities the number of persons employed during the week was: Augusta, 1,007; Bath, 244; Frederick, 113; Highland, 125; Rockbridge, 572; Rockingham, 1,285; Shenandoah, 617, Buena Vista, 182; Harrisonburg, 189; Staunton, 424; Winchester, 237.

Mrs. M. K. Updike Buried at Strasburg

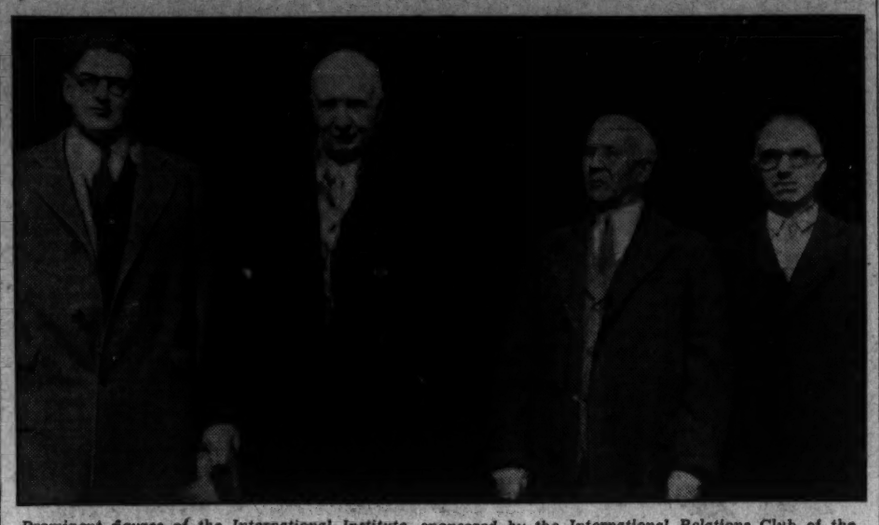

Strasburg, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.). Funeral services were conducted at Strasburg Lutheran Church today for Mrs. Mabel Keister Updike, 50, a native of Strasburg, who died at her home in East Falls Church Thursday. The Rev. F. B. Lingle officiated. Burial was in Riverview Cemetery.

Surviving are her husband, J. Garnet Updike; one son, Keister Updike, and two aunts, Mrs. A. D. Kendall and Mrs. Ella Crabill.

Waynesboro Fund Grows.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 21 (Spl.) In a drive for $2,000 to erect a wire fence around Waynesboro High School's new athletic field, one-quarter of the amount has been subscribed, according to the first report of workers today.

Leaders of International Institute

Fleet to Pay Call At Hampton Roads

Scouting and Battle Forces Schedule Visits.

A three-week visit to Hampton Roads during June is provided for the scouting force in a tentative six-month schedule for the fleet, approved by Acting Secretary Roosevelt, the Associated Press says.

The battle force, less its destroyers, will pay a month's visit to the Virginia port later in the summer, while the aircraft carriers of the battle force—the Saratoga, Lexington and Langley—will spend a large part of the summer there. The new orders bring the bulk of the Navy from the Pacific, where it has been concentrated since 1931, to the Atlantic this spring.

The scouting force will sail for Hampton Roads from New York, after a fleet review there June 18, and will remain until July 8. It will be preceded by the carriers. The tentative schedule calls for the departure of more than 100 vessels from the San Pedro-San Diego area in California on April 9.

Red Men to Meet In West Virginia

Pocahontas Unit to Join in Session Wednesday.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Plans were completed here last night by Tuscarora Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men, and Tippecanoe Council, Degree of Pocahontas, for entertainment of the Tri-State League of Red Men and Pocahontas here on Wednesday.

A business meeting of the league is set for the afternoon, attended by Mrs. Edith Johnson, of Huntington, W. Va., great incohonee of the Great Council of West Virginia.

Other guests will include W. P. Wachter, of Hagerstown, Md., great incohonee of the Great Council of the United States; Oscar Elliott, of Martinsburg, great sanap; Sam Blum, of Charles Town, W. Va., grand inner guard, and great chiefs from Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia. Following a banquet in the evening there will be an open session for Red Men and degree of Pocahontas.

Illness Fatal to Resident of Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.). John W. Lawson, 68, well known contractor, died yesterday after a brief illness.

The funeral will be held tomorrow. The Rev. W. A. Orser, pastor of Hinton Avenue Methodist Church, officiating. Interment will be in Riverview Cemetery.

Mr. Lawson was born May 16, 1865, in Greene County. He married Miss Mildred Lamb, who survives, with eight children—Willie F. Lawson, of Richmond; R. T. Lawson, of Baltimore; Mrs. W. W. Hendrick, of Richmond; Mrs. S. A. Robertson, of this city; Mrs. Paul Williams, of Wilson, N. C.; Theodore, John W., jr., and Clarence Lawson, all of this city.

Charlottesville Trio To Church Parley

Minister, Rabbi, Priest to Report on Recent Tour.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.). Father J. Elliot Ross, of this city, widely known Catholic priest, who, with Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron, of Baltimore, and the Rev. Everett R. Clinchy, a Presbyterian minister, of New York, recently made the first Nation-wide tour to foster religious freedom, left here tonight for New York, where the trio will report the result of their pilgrimage at a meeting of the cochairmen and directors of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, to be held tomorrow night at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

The three traveled about 9,000 miles, mostly by airplane, spoke in 38 cities in 24 States to 119 audiences, besides broadcasting 23 times.

Martinsburg Democrats Name Hicks Chairman

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.) J. Nelson Hicks was named chairman of the city Democratic executive committee here last night to succeed Gilbert Dehaven, who asked relief because of continued absence from the city. Hicks also is head of the Young Democrats Club here.

Here's How

Way to Tell a Drunk Is Found at Last.

Richmond, Jan. 21 (Spl.).—When is an individual intoxicated?

The answer to the age-old question is provided by a liquor control bill before the General Assembly as follows:

"Any person who has drunk enough alcoholic beverages to so affect his manner, disposition, speech, muscular movement, general appearance or behavior as to be apparent to observation shall be deemed to be intoxicated."

Virginia Dairy Group to Study Code Problems

Parley Opens Tomorrow in Richmond; Leader Urges Importance.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.). The twentieth annual three-day meeting of the Virginia Dairy Products Association, opening in Richmond Tuesday, will be the most important gathering of dairymen in the history of the association, President D. E. Shank, of Harrisonburg, said tonight.

"I hope every dairyman will attend," he said. "Important problems connected with milk codes, agricultural readjustment and dairy manufacturing will be discussed, and the association is anxious to get the viewpoint of the men engaged in this industry."

The convention will convene Tuesday at 2 p. m. Speakers include Delos L. James, of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Miss Aibyn Chin, of Washington, of the National Dairy Council; Charles F. Whiting, of Boston, president of the Association of Milk Dealers; Roy C. Potts, of Washington, of the Federal Bureau of Agriculture Economics, and O. E. Williams, of Washington, of the Federal Bureau of Dairy Industry.

The Virginia Dairymen's Association will hold its annual convention Wednesday and Thursday.

Mother, Daughter To Get Diplomas

Both Are Honor Students at Huntington High.

Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—When the midwinter commencement exercises are held Wednesday at the high school here, a 40-year-old mother and her 16-year-old daughter will receive diplomas.

These graduates are Mrs. S. M. Callaway and her daughter, Adelia Belle. Both entered the high school at the same time, both had many classes together and both consistently made high grades. Both are on the honor roll. The mother majored in domestic science.

Farm Loan Unit Elects.

Petersburg, W. Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.) T. J. Grove was elected president of the Grant County National Farm Loan Association at the annual meeting yesterday; H. E. Schell, vice president, and W. C. Moomau, secretary-treasurer.

Three Also Appointed on Equalization Board.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.). Sheffey L. Devier, commissioner of revenue, and his deputy, Ernest C. Wilton, have been named by Judge H. W. Bertram, of Rockingham Circuit Court, to reassess Harrisonburg real estate this year, as required by law.

John W. Bolen, L. B. Yates and George Shaver were appointed to the board of equalization.

The old Rockingham County Equalization Board was reappointed. Members are T. T. Showalter, North River; John F. Miller, Port Republic; J. S. Swartz, Mount Clinton; R. M. Neff, Broadway, and W. S. Armentrout, Edom.

Funeral Is Held For W. C. Taylor

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.). Funeral services were held today for Walter Courtney Taylor, former deputy treasurer of Hanover County, who died in Ashland.

Mr. Taylor had been employed in the State highway department construction division. Surviving are his wife, Stella Dietrick Taylor; one daughter, Mrs. D. Earle Quaries; five sons, five sisters and one brother.

Bill Is Pushed to Halt Theft of Postal Stamps

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.) To prevent employes from purloining postage stamps from State offices, a bill is on its way through the Legislature providing for establishment of a branch postoffice in the State capitol.

According to Delegate Dee Gates (Democrat) of Kanawha, who made an investigation of the practice and introduced the bill in the House of Delegates, a branch postoffice will serve to break up the practice. It is asserted that taxpayers have been suffering to the extent of $50 to $100 a day by this purloining of postage stamps.

Judge Browning to Sit In Disbarment Hearing

Orange, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Judge A. T. Browning, of the Orange Circuit Court, will sit with the judges, including Lemuel F. Smith and T. L. Keister, in disbarment proceedings against Frank G. Lawson, of Charlottesville, to be heard February 8.

Judge Browning was named by Chief Justice Preston W. Campbell of the Virgiina Supreme Court of Appeals. Lawson is charged with malfeasance and unprofessional conduct.

Miss Annie C. Carter Buried at Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.). The funeral of Miss Annie Champ Carter, 70, a lifelong resident of this city, who died yesterday, was held today, the service being conducted by Dr. Henry Alford Porter, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Interment was in Oakwood Cemetery.

Surviving are three brothers, A. Goodman, A. T. and C. E. Carter, of this city, and two sisters, Mrs. Rufus W. Powell, of Newport News, and Miss Blanche Carter, of this city.

Air Instead of Cell Advocated As Means to Cure Drink Habit

Indeterminate Sentence Amendment Urged by Health Officer.

Danville, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—City Health Officer Richard W. Garnett believes that the inveterate drinker should be given the air instead of a cell and he has written to State Delegate Maitland H. Bustard asking him to amend the Virginia code so as to enable magistrates to give indeterminate sentences.

The city health officer said 15 years of work here had shown him sentences for drunkenness are a drain on city resources.

His contention is that such prisoners should be put to work outdoors to build up physical and mental resistance to the habit.

Roanoke, Jan. 21 (Spl.).—The Roanoke Real Estate Board will send a committee to the General Assembly on Wednesday with a petition to the Roanoke delegation for a reduction in license fees for real estate dealers.

James A. Bear, former member of the House of Delegates from Roanoke, recently addressed the board in regard to the problem.

The committee consists of George S. Via, C. S. Spindle, R. A. Poff, J. Allen Flora and J. W. Boswell, jr.

Men Will Serve Banquet Climaxing Campaign at Woodstock.

Berryville, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—E. C. "Ted" Mercer, of Salisbury, Conn., nationally known layman of the Protestant Episcopal Church, opened a six-day mission in Berryville today. Mr. Mercer is a missioner of wide experience, and during his preaching as a layman has addressed 600,000 people over the United States.

The opening services were held this morning and evening in Grace Episcopal Church. Services will be held the remainder of the week as follows: Tomorrow, 8 p. m., Grace Episcopal Church; Tuesday, 8 p. m., First Baptist Church; Wednesday, 8 p. m., Duncan Memorial Methodist Church; Thursday, 8 p. m., Berryville Presbyterian Church, and Friday, 8 p. m., Grace Episcopal Church.

Men to Serve Banquet.

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Contrary to the custom of women holding sway in the kitchen and dining room, men of Woodstock Christian Church plan to serve a banquet here Thursday, bringing the 100-day campaign of the church to a climax. The campaign, a drive for support for the work of the denomination, will close January 28.

W. D. Sager will have general charge of the supper. He has named as head waiters Clint Saum, H. C. Clower, Philip Sager, jr., and Fred Beidler. Cooks will include S. D. Epard, Robert Sager, Brown Sherman, sr., Dolph Sweeny, and W. D. Sager. The reception committee includes C. C. Boyer, George Wilson, and the pastor, the Rev. J. Mitchell Hoye. H. Frank Boyer will act as cashier. It is planned to serve six turkeys.

Baptists Choose Director.

Roanoke, Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Everett Melton, who recently moved to Roanoke from Richmond, is the newly elected director of music and religious education at the Melrose Baptist Church, taking up the work formerly done by Mrs. F. M. Sawyer and Mrs. E. R. Jewell.

Mr. Melton also will be assistant to the pastor, Dr. George Dewey Stevens. Since graduating from Southwestern Seminary Mr. Melton has done field work for the Baptist Board of Missions and Education.

The Rev. S. R. Orrell, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, at Richmond, has accepted a call to the Waverly Place Church here, succeeding the Rev. Clifton C. Thomas. Mr. Orrell is expected to arrive about March 1.

Organ Recital at Roanoke.

The Rev. R. Deane Shure, minister of music at Mount Vernon Place Church, Washington, D. C., will present a program of organ music at Greene Memorial Methodist Church here on the night of February 7.

The Rev. H. R. Deal will serve as narrator. The recital will be "Twelve Impressions of the Holy Land."

Conventions Scheduled.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Christ Lutheran Church here will entertain the thirteenth annual convention of the Luther League of the Synod of Virginia, June 19 to 21. Dr. Charles M. Teufel has just returned from Philadelphia, where he attended a meeting of the Luther League of America executive committee.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—The annual convention of the Virginia Christian Missionary Society will be held June 11 to 14 at Lynchburg College.

Sessions of the convention are to be held in the First Christian Church.

The committee named to provide the program is composed of the Revs. H. G. Haney, Percy Thomas, Dr. M. E. Sadler, R. N. Redford, and Mrs. A. H. Eubank.

Two Pastors Called.

Westernport, Md., Jan. 21 (Spl.). The Rev. A. W. Eppard, Chambersburg, Pa., has received a call to the pastorate of the Presbyterian Church here. He has been supplying in the pulpit since October. He has the call under consideration.

Mr. Eppard holds membership in the Central Presbyterian Church at Chambersburg, Pa. He is a licentiate of Carlisle Presbytery of the Synod of Pennsylvania. A graduate of Lafayette College, he attended Princeton Theological Seminary and Westminster Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, from which he graduated. He took post-graduate work in the School of Theology, University of Edinburgh, Scotland, and traveled on the Continent and in the Holy Land.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Dr. John W. Hastings, for several years a pastor at Savannah, Ga., has accepted a call to University Place Christian Church, Seattle, Wash. He will go there next month.

Dr. Hastings, a former resident of Baltimore, graduated from Lynchburg College, did postgraduate work at Yale and took his Ph. D. from a university in Scotland. His wife is a daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Watson, of Euclid Avenue Christian Church here.

Clifton Forge Bank May Be Open Soon

Over Two-Thirds of Stock Already Subscribed.

Clifton Forge, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.). Reorganization plans of the Clifton Forge National Bank, closed since last March, are progressing, according to L. F. Pendleton, conservator, who said yesterday that of the $60,000 which must be raised by the stockholders under a Treasury Department plan, $42,000 already has been subscribed.

Failure of nearly one-third of the old stockholders to subscribe delayed plans. After the stockholders have met requirements, depositors will be asked to subscribe.

The proposed new bank will have a capital of $100,000 and a surplus of $20,000. If the plan is perfected, 60 per cent of the deposits of the Clifton Forge National Bank are to be credited to old depositors without restrictions.

Famous Musicians To Be Heard Here

National Symphony Orchestra Concert Next Sunday to Present John Powell, Noted Pianist-Composer, as Soloist.

Distinguished musicians from several cities will come to Washington this week to participate in the series of American folk song programs to be given throughout the city, centering largely in the program by the National Symphony Orchestra next Sunday afternoon, when John Powell, pianist and composer, will be heard with the orchestra as one of the soloists.

Closely allied with this Sunday concert will be a talk on Saturday at 8 p. m. at the King-Smith Studio School, to be given by Mrs. Annabel Morris Buchanan, coorganizer and chairman of the Virginia State Choral Festival, and coorganizer and director of the White Top Festival, in Virginia, in which Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt is so greatly interested.

Mrs. Buchanan, who is likewise chairman of the department of American music and folk research, of the National Federation of Music Clubs will arrive Friday morning, and will give her talk, entitled "Folk Song" on Saturday night, in which she will be assisted by "Les Fauvettes," a choral group of the King-Smith Studios.

Others on this program will be Hilton Rufty, composer and pianist, of Richmond, Va., who will play one of his own compositions, with Miss Helen Ware, violinist and Emile Simon, cellist. Miss Rebecca Tarwater will also take part in this program, offering a group of "mountain sketches."

Mrs. Buchanan will be the guest of Mrs. King-Smith, and will attend the concert Sunday by the National Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Powell and Mrs. Powell will come from Richmond in time to be present at Mrs. Buchanan's talk Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Crane and Miss Bruce Crane will come from Westover to attend the folk music events of the week-end, Mr. Crane being deeply engrossed in this type of American music, which he and others are developing in the White Top Folk Festival. Mr. Rufty, pianist and composer, of Richmond, will likewise be among the guests of the King-Smith School.

Mr. Lamar Stringfield, composer, and director of folk music at the University of North Carolina, and Mr. George Fischer, well-known publisher of New York City, will also come to Washington, and will hear Mrs. Buchanan.

The President entertained three youthful members of Capital society at luncheon yesterday when his guests were Mr. Gordon Grayson, Mr. William Grayson and Mr. Cary T. Grayson, jr., sons of Admiral and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who is enjoying a brief rest at Warm Springs, Ga., is expected to return to the Capital the first of the week.

The Ambassador of Belgium and Mme. May will be joined the end of this month by their daughter, Mlle. Francoise May, who is expected to arrive in this country January 30.

Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the Ambassador of France, heads the list of a most interested group of patronesses for a series of lectures to be delivered by Dom Thomas Verner Moore, M. D., Ph. D., O. S. B, at the Carlton Hotel at 11 o'clock February 6, 13, 20 and 27. Birthday Ball Ticket Sales Near Full 1,500

List of Patrons Augmented for Roosevelt Fete January 30.

Never in many seasons has society in Washington been so enthusiastic about anything as in the President's birthday ball to be held Tuesday, January 30, at the Shoreham. Whether as patrons, table hosts or ticket holders, everybody will be there; and the demand for tables and for tickets bids fair to outrun the number of tables and tickets available. The committee announces that when the 1,500 tickets are sold, which would seem to be in the near future, there will not be any more to buy, as the capacity of 2,500 will have been reached, including table ticket holders.

Recent additions to the list of patrons and patronesses for the birthday ball are Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, Col. and Mrs. Kenyon Joyce, Maj. and Mrs. Henry Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman and Mr. Julius Garfinckel.

Among those who have taken tables for the ball are Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Mr. Pembroke Jones, Mr. Lynch Luquer, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Christian Heurich, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. John Embrey, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mr. Arthur F. Mullen, Mrs. Herbert J. Slocum, the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, Mr. Robert L. O'Brien, Mr. Walter D. Denegre, Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, the Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Breckenridge, Dr. Leonide Pitamic, Mrs. Oscar Jarecki, Mrs. Adolph Caspar Millar, Miss Deborah Dows, Mr. Charles H. Martin, Mr. Abram H. Tillman, Mr. Joseph P. Tumulty, Mr. Henry C. Berrits, Miss Helen K. Johnson, Mr. A. P. Homer, Mr. Urey Woodson, Mr. Julius Garfinckel, Mr. L. Suffern Tailer, Mrs. Guy Norman, Mrs. Arthur R. Forbush, Mrs. John R. Williams and Mrs. John Allen Daugherty.

Westminster Choir Sponsor List Announced

Constitution Hall Concert Will Be Directed by Dr. J. F. Williamson.

Prominent women among the Capital City's music lovers and music patrons are patronesses for the concert Tuesday, February 6, in Constitution Hall, of the world-famous Westminster Choir, formerly from Dayton, Ohio, but more recently of Princeton, N. J. The concert of sacred and secular music, sung a capella, will be conducted by America's foremost choir director, Dr. John Finley Williamson, who founded the choir in 1920, and has been its only conductor.

Sponsored by Mrs. H. E. Talbott, of New York, the Westminster Choir was heard here two years ago by an auidence which filled Constitution Hall. Large groups of Washington choir singers joined visiting choristers in singing a final number. Since then the fame of the choir has increased constantly, and now an invitation has been extended and accepted by the choir to go abroad next summer to appear in concert in European countries, notably in Russia, where the American Ambassador, William C. Bullitt, is to be the patron.

Patrons for the Washington concert will be Mrs. William Howard Taft, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller, Mrs. Nicholas Longsworth, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. Robert Lowe Bacon, Mrs. James Wadsworth, Mrs. Sidney Cloman, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. John Allan Daugherty, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. Fleming Newbold, Lady Willmott Lewis, Mrs. Henry Aivah Strong, Mrs. George Dunlop and Mrs. Van Ness Phillip.

A number of boxes for this event, which will be sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches, already have been reserved, and the audience will include diplomats whose countries the choirs will visit on its tour.

Wide Range of Artistic Interests Fill the Life of First Lady of British Embassy

Tiny Frenchwoman Barrister Finds America One Big Thrill

And Mlle. Madeleine Gaucheron Tells of Her Life Pleading Cases at the Paris Bar, Which to Americans Seems Thrilling Too.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Life in the United States has impressed a vivacious young Parisienne as being such a thrilling, exciting affair that, although she came to this country last March to study our judiciary system, she has not yet found time to make more than a cursory examination of our courts. Mlle. Madeleine Gaucheron, a lawyer, came to America with the intention of spending three or four months with her brother, Roger Gaucheron, First Secretary of the French Embassy. She has enjoyed her stay here so much that her visit has lengthened into 10 months.

"Soon now I shall—what you say? Get down to business," she declared laughingly Saturday morning in her brother's apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. "I plan to study very, very hard in the next few months your legislation which deals with the radio and with aviation. Then I shall return to Paris and resume my practice before the bar."

Admires America.

The petite barrister is enthusiastic in her admiration of America and everything American, so much so that the reporter almost despaired of ever getting her to tell about her law career. In her halting but charming English the Frenchwoman interrupted her description of the cases she had pled to extol the warmth of American hospitality, the interesting lives led by American women, and the beauty of American cities and countryside. She has been as far West as Chicago, which she found exhilerating, and says that she will not be content until she sees San Francisco. In the meantime, she has been making innumerable delightful short trips into Virginia and Maryland.

Asked why she had chosen the legal profession, Mlle. Gaucheron said that she had always been interested in political science and the study of that subject had led her to the study of law. Since being admitted to practice before the Paris bar she has devoted most of her time to civil cases.

Criminal Cases.

"At first I had to take some criminal cases," she explained. "All new lawyers in my country are expected to take both criminal and civil cases for the first few months—then they may gradually work into the branch they prefer. My very first client was a woman who was accused of receiving stolen goods from her husband. I saved her from a term in prison by convincing the court that she did not know her husband was a thief. I'll never forget how nervous and excited I was when I made that first plea. I think I was what you call dramatic. But everyone was very kind. Women lawyers receive as much respect as men lawyers in Paris. There are now 200 of us with successful practices, while before the war there were only five women lawyers in the French capital."

After a young woman is admitted to the bar in France she is usually employed by some eminent lawyer with such a large practice that it is necessary for him to maintain a large staff of men and women assistants. The young barristers' average salary, while helping the prominent lawyer, is 1,000 francs or about $65 a month. After a year or two, if the beginning is successful, he is given cases and permitted to create his own clientele.

Office at Home.

"Most of us have our law offices in our apartments instead of maintaining a place in a business building as American lawyers do," said Mlle. Gaucheron. "Another difference in habits between barristers in this country and in France is in the wearing of uniforms.

"Whenever we French lawyers, both men and women, are in the courtroom we are gowned in long, black robes. The day we take the oath of admission to the bar, some ermine is placed on the wide shoulder band of the robes. Black toques complete the costume, but we women lawyers don't like them much." Mlle. Gaucheron smiled whimsically. "They're very, very unbecoming."

The World and I.

By Katherine Smith.

By trees I know the age of earth,
By slow-filled seas, the weight of tears.
On long, lone plains the world's rebirth Appears.

In night's deep eyes, twin stars grow shy
Before the staring of the sun.
And well I know the world and I
Are one.

Paris Festive In "Reveillon" Formal Frocks

A Green Taffeta Has a Double Basque Effect.

Special dresses known as Reveillon dresses have been created by a number of the leading Paris dressmakers for festive occasions. Maggy Rouff has created a Reveillon dress in Empire green taffeta with a double basque effect, one in moire in the same shade and the other in green and gold lame, with an incrustation of this last material around the neck opening, which is rather high in front and very low at the back.

At Dormoy there was noticed a black marocain dress with the bodice cut in two parts on the front, which were crossed and twisted around the neck. Jenny also sponsors these twisted effects and high neckline in the front, particularly on a very striking dress of pink crepe with a delicate touch of silver lame. This model develops over the shoulders into a little capelet effect that covers the upper part of the arms, and is knotted very low at the back, almost at the waistline.

Short coats and three-quarter evening coats in velvet often accompany these dresses, but it is noted that lame with only a touch of metal is very much in favor for elaborate coats, often enhanced by sable, mink or blue fox.

First Lady's Winter Mode.

Black broadtail and baum marten are used for a new winter dress coat worn by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, according to the Associated Press. She wears with it a smart toque of black velvet trimmed on one side by a cascade of glycerined black ostrich feathers.

Lady Lindsay

Gardening and Photography Are Lady Lindsay's Hobbies

An American, She Gave Up a Promising Career as a Landscape Architect to Become the Wife of Britain's Envoy to the United States.

What manner of women are the wives of the foreign ambassadors at Washington? Probably every woman reader is interested in making their acquaintance, sharing with them for a moment the glamour and brilliancy of their diplomatic existence.

This is the first of a series of interviews with the wives of the ambassadors who are now in the Capital.

By Elizabeth Young.

Underlying all of Lady Lindsay's pursuits and hobbies—and they are many, for she is a vital and enthusiastic woman—is one recurrent theme: A sensitive appreciation of beauty in every form.

"Nowadays, I'm completely engrossed in amateur photography," she told The Post reporter, who found her at a business-like desk drawn up to her study windows.

She was briskly concluding an interview with a young woman whose advice, apparently, had been sought on the matter of some photographs. That business transacted, the young-faced, silver-haired wife of Great Britain's envoy to the United States turned with a smile.

"My interest in photography hardly amounts to a hobby, yet," she said, "I still know so little about it. I don't know whether I ever shall master it. But it fascinates me. It really started in defense of beautiful memories of beautiful places."

Loves Motoring.

"Motoring is one of our greatest pleasures. Time and again, driving through lovely country, we have photographed picturesque people and beautiful landscapes, only to see a fortnight's efforts destroyed through careless handling of negatives and enlargements.

"Naturally, we could not always choose a stop-over place from the point of view of whether the photograph studios did first-class work. The results were often regrettable. I became fascinated with the possibilities of well-handled photography. I'm still learning."

Lady Lindsay's response to the beauty inherent in landscapes was no casual outgrowth of motor tours through idyllic country sides. Since childhood, she has been interested in the multiform beauty manifested in plants and shrubs and blossoms, masses of greenery and splashes of color, vistas of earth and sky.

When she was Elizabeth Sherman Hoyt, of New York City, before her marriage in 1924 to Sir Ronald Lindsay, she demonstrated her creative interest in this form of beauty by demanding an education which would equip her as a landscape architect. She studied architecture and botany at Columbia University, and pursued the study of related subjects in England and France. Stately gardens in Cleveland and Long Island were designed by her and exist today as evidence of her mastery in this field.

Interest in Gardening.

Although her marriage to one of the world's foremost diplomats caused her to abandon her career as a landscape architect, today Lady Lindsay finds an outlet for her love of gardening in supervising the care of the beautiful grounds which surround the new British Embassy at 3100 Massachusetts avenue.

"The appeal in gardening?" She was amused at the question. "I suppose it's the dual satisfaction which comes of creating and contemplating beauty. We have such a lovely variety of flowering shrubs and trees. There's always a great deal of replanting to be done. I snip off the dead blooms; train creepers. And I love cut flowers.

"To the English, cut flowers are one of the necessities of life, you know. One sees more cut flowers in English homes than almost anywhere. During the war, even the English soldiers in the front lines had their little flower gardens. One never saw an English dressing station without its flowers. The love of flowers is almost a racial trait in the English.

An American.

"I'm not English, except that my ancestors were English, like nearly everyone's else, in America."

But if Lady Lindsay loves cut flowers, she also has a great care for the beauty of flower borders. In her gardens no blossom is ever carelessly snipped, but always the greatest care is taken to preserve the charm and perfection of the color patterns in bloom.

As though the one seemed symbolic of the other in her mind, Lady Lindsay turned the conversation from flowers to a consideration of Washington's newest generation of debutantes.

"They're the most charming young girls I've met in any country," she said. "They are so attractive in themselves, so beautifully dressed, with such an unspoiled freshness about them. They're all so endlessly appreciative. They're not blase at all. I suppose it's because of their mothers that they're so fine. The mother, of course, is the paramount influence in every life.

"As for Washington—and this is most sincere, and not in any sense a merely diplomatic statement—I think it altogether the most charming place in the world, with its heavenly climate, its delightful people.

"July and August? Yes, of course, the heat is rather awful then, but to us who love Washington, that minor flaw is easy to overlook."

Old Favorites Regain Winter Table Prestige

Public Increases Demand for Foods Formerly Neglected.

"They never come back" is an old adage. But every once in a while an exception comes along that proves the rule.

This year the old winter standbys, cabbage, potatoes, onions and turnips have a great comeback in spite of the usual popularity of a wide variety of green vegetables.

New cabbage has become so plentiful that it is selling at no greater cost than old. Cauliflower is plentiful and unusually reasonable in price. Excellent Brussels sprouts are arriving from California. Cauliflower's green cousin, broccoli, is also available. All the members of the cabbage family need rapid cooking for only a short time to be at their best in color and flavor.

Vegetables Good in Quality.

Cooler weather has slowed the maturing of Southern-grown green beans and they are, therefore, a little higher in price. Even at a considerable higher price green beans would be economical as there is so little waste. One pound will serve from four to six people. Fine quality spinach is arriving from Texas. The price is low. Mexican peas are fine, but they are rather expensive. The salad vegetables are of good quality. Tomatoes are better flavored than they have been and heads of lettuce are firm and cheaper than often. There is plenty of celery at a moderate price.

Young bunched beets and carrots are inexpensive. With new potatoes to supplement the old and sweet potatoes for variety dinner menus need not be monotonous.

Chuck Steak Inexpensive.

As usual meat choices are varied. If you wish beef, chuck steak is an inexpensive cut. Loin lamb chops are never cheap but they are delicious and at this time less expensive than often. Beef and lamb dinners are more appreciated if they are separated by other meals using fresh or smoked pork or fowl. Fish also makes a pleasant change though the variety is somewhat limited at this season. Oysters, fish fillets, halibut and salmon steaks and smoked fish are all good choices.

Strawberries in Demand.

Fresh strawberries are in great demand, and are reasonable in price. Many more are being sold than last year at this season. Both California naval oranges and the Florida Valencias are excellent and moderately priced. Bananas are cheaper than they have been in several months. Grapefruit are unusually fine this season. There are plenty of apples for all eating and cooking needs.

Here is a medium priced menu made up from the foods our experts consider the most suitable for this week:

Braised Chuck Steak
Mushroom Sauce
Buttered New Cabbage
Parsley Potatoes
Beet Salad, French Dressing
Bread Butter
Banana Short Cake
Coffee

Thousands of Women Find Library Jobs

Mrs. Roosevelt's Advice Led to Projects Giving Work.

Imagination is providing thousands of brand-new jobs for women in library work all over the United States. The good news came yesterday straight from Miss Julia W. Merrill, executive assistant of the American Library Association, in Washington for a brief visit in connection with her work.

Last autumn Mrs. Roosevelt, speaking at the conference of leaders who were planning relief work for women under the Civil Works Administration, warned them of a probable danger, Miss Merrill recalled when interviewed by The Post reporter.

"The only way women can receive the aid they need is for you to use your imaginations," the First Lady told these leaders. "If all your work is confined to establishing sewing classes the jobs will be given to men."

Words Had Effect.

Greatly impressed by her words, these women left Washington determined to find ways in which women might serve under the CWA, Miss Merrill declared, adding:

"No women were harder hit by the depression than the white-collar women, for even when they were working they usually had to help members of their families who were not, and so were unable to save money. And when they were out of work they were too proud to go to relief agencies. It was a difficult problem to find out the neediest of these people and give them work which would permit them to use their talents and training, and which would be at the same time of real social value.

"We have tried to link library work with the CWA program in such a way that later on the States can carry on the work.

Reopened Libraries.

"Our first project was the reopening of a little village library in Georgia which had been closed. This was of real benefit to the people in the village, and also put two women to work at something they had been trained to do."

"In New Jersey the movement had been concentrated around the need for proper use of leisure time. The reading rooms in the libraries have been kept open at night. This gives people who have no work a place to spend the evening in a profitable manner.

"Evanston, Ill., has done one of the best pieces of work of all. It has undertaken the whole thing as a community project. Out there they have established emergency education classes; the reading rooms of the libraries are open at night to the people in these classes. Reading counsellors have been hired. It is their duty to advise the people in these educational classes in regard to the books which will help them.

"Nowhere has the work done shown greater results than in the rural communities in several States. Here people can secure guided reading courses by mail. In the State centers many people are employed helping these readers select the books which will fit them for a better job when things pick up.

"New life has been carried into the hospitals in Bismarck, N. Dak., where a traveling library, fitted in such a way that it can be rolled through the hospital corridors, has been built. And an unemployed librarian has found a job keeping this hospital library.

"We feel that the value of the work we are doing will be permanent, for the things now being done have often been planned before, but not put into effect because of lack of funds or time.

"But the best thing of all," Miss Merrill concluded "is the way it has helped the spirits of women throughout the country. Everyday we have hundreds of letters from them expressing gratitude. Some cases we knew of where the women who were on the verge of committing suicide are now leading happy useful lives. Helping the white collar woman has been one of the greatest accmoplishments of the CWA."

Gloves, Belts And Bags Now Are Matched

Doeskin Is Combined With Prystal and Gold Ornaments.

At a recent exhibition of novelties were several interesting ensembles of handbag and gloves to match with belts and sometimes fancy ornaments.

On a plain black doeskin handbag, which showed no apparent frame or clasp, were disposed two olive buttons in emerald green. The gloves to match were in the same suede and of elbow length. They were slashed over the wrists and fastened with the same green buttons in reduced size. Handbags that showed a combination of calf and black patent had a strap in silk braid passed through several rings of gold metal and prystal. The gloves to match had the hand part in kid, while the stiff cuff was also in black patent and was fastened by a rayon braid cord passed through two metal and prystal rings.

A very original necklace had a woven strand in leather, cellophane and braid, holding two large motifs, from which fell, in the shape of a tassel, a fringe in soft leather in bright contrasting shades. A novel belt of black patent leather in narrow width shows a striking motif as a buckle composed of four little ermine tails passed through lacquer red rings of plastic composition.

Universities Move Toward Cooperation

Georgia's System Example to Nation, Says President Hutchins.

Sea Island Beach, Ga., Jan. 21. (AP).—Georgia's university system is an outstanding example of the tendency of American colleges toward cooperative educational programs, says President Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago.

Dr. Hutchins and Mrs. Hutchins are here for a vacation. They expect to return to Chicago the last of next week.

"Universities and colleges all over the country are recognizing the waste involved in duplication in various fields," Dr. Hutchins said today. "Under the cooperative plan a college loses none of its individuality in the matter of administration or fundamentals but develops greater concentration in given fields, prevents duplication of expense and encourages the growth of important education centers."

Admiral's Widow, Home From China, Recounts Strange Adventures on the Yangtze River

By Elizabeth Perrow.

Peiping and Shanghai furnish enough thrills to last the average tourist a life time. But Mrs. H. J. Diegemeir, widow of a United States admiral, longed for even greater excitement. Extravagant tales of fierce bandits, Chinese exeuctioners who beheaded people on the slightest pretext, and stories of enchanted cities untouched by civilization, reached her ears.

She wanted to see for herself.

So she went adventuring.

She returned safely because, as she told a Post reporter yesterday: "The gods were kind and the admiral sent an armed guard of six men with me."

The adventure began when Mrs. Diegemeir, accompanied by her 8-year-old daughter and a Chinese nurse, and protected by her bodyguard went sailing up the Yangtze River.

"We went up the river just after the great flood. We saw millions of people huddled together in the highest places they could find. They were pushing each other off to get a foothold.

"Danger threatened us all the way. One night we were aroused by the cry, 'Bandits.' We hastily put on some clothes and went on deck. had an idea. He reached in his The bandits had fired on the boat to be an official passport. We were allowed to continue.

and boarded it. My guard saved the day, however. For when the bandits saw the United States uniforms they retreated. They are afraid of Uncle Sam.

"Another time we had gone into the interior and we were stopped and asked for our credentials. Imagine our horror when our guard looked for our passport and could not find it.

"Visions of Chinese prisons—filthy, filled with lice and inhabited by starving, cholera-stricken men—filled my mind. Suddenly the officer pocket and produced a receipt for some brass he had bought in Shanghai. It was marked "paid."

"They took the piece of paper, got together in a little group and scrutinized it carefully. We watched with baited breath—fearful of what the outcome would be. At last they beamed and came over to us. They had found the paper

"Chunking was the end of our journey. We found the whole town deep in water. But we refused to be discouraged. We hired a sampan and went out to see the town. The only boat we could get was half full of water, but we sailed gayly forth, a huge Chinese umbrella stretched above the boat to protect us from the blazing sun.

"It was a fascinating city. It is more than 2,000 years old. And except for the hospital and one new road it is exactly the same as when it was built. There was one automobile in the town. A very old, very creaky Ford. We managed to hire it on the condition that we have one Chinese man to drive it and another to watch him drive. We agreed, and started out.

"But we got into difficulties. About every few hundred feet we were stopped and asked to show our credentials. We did, but they let us continue only on the condition that we would take a Chinese guard. By the time we had gone a few miles we had a guard of eight men, collected at various points along the way. And we had to turn back because there was no room for us.

"By the time we reached Wansiean on our way back I was looking forward to seeing Shanghai again. And I was as mad as six hornets when the boat was delayed a whole night so that the crew could go to a "Singsong" party.

"Oh, yes," Mrs. Diegemeir concluded. "It was a great experience. But exciting as it was I was glad to see Shanghai again. As I came into the port and saw the sail boats and the junks, the pagodas enveloped in a misty blue haze, I felt that I had come home.

Rhumba Gives New Silhouette To Style Mart

Gown With Spanish Train Designed on Long, Sleek Lines.

Maybelle Manning, a Park avenue designer, created them, taking her idea from the Cuban rhumba dance.

The "rhumba silhouette" is a long, sleek silhouette for evening, with a Spanish train — a billow train, formed of circular ruffles that begin above the knee.

The rhumba scarf is a long, ruffled affair, draped across the neck and over the arm.

Taffeta Petticoats.

This designer uses snowshoe clips to fasten a diagonal plaid wool dress. This spring she likes taffeta petticoats that swish under evening gowns in big flowering prints.

One of her skirt flounce effects for evening is called the "minaret tier." The flounces are spaced, giving the effect of Chinese roofs.

For evening she also likes a "teardrop silhouette"—a streamlined effect, and frequently uses the Victorian, off-the-shoulder decolletage.

Her suits this spring are informal "soft suits" rather than tailleurs. It will be, she believes, a great two-piece dress season—the first in several years.

Balbriggan Frocks.

Some of her two-piece frocks are cut on balbriggan lines, with boyish pockets. They are modelled after workmen's shirts, but are made of ultra-feminine silks.

Repeal, this designer thinks, created a need for more distinctive daytime dresses, that may be worn from office or matinee to a restaurant for cocktails.

This needed distinction she gives by lingerie yokes and panels, or monograms. A two-piece black crepe dress has "distinction" in the form of zebra stripes made by white chiffon insets.

Leis Replace Corsages.

Mrs. Childress Vermillion, of Washington, has abandoned corsages for evening wear in favor of flower leis, according to the Associated Press. With her evening gowns she wears a lei of either gardenias or carnations.

Mrs. Paris Outthreads Men In All-Star Needle Race

She Puts 145 Strands Through a Single Eye; It Just Takes a Twist of the Wrist, She Explains, as She Carries Off Championship.

Seattle, Jan. 21 (AP).—It remained for a woman, Mrs. P. J. Paris, to show these Northwestern, male needle-threaders where to head in. She put 145 threads through a needle's eye today, ruining every male record hereabouts.

That was her reply to the challenge of a Denver man who ran a mere 18 threads through a needle, and stirred up a controversy involving such men as Peter Oliver, of Reno, Nev., who threaded 75 Anton Oquist, who threaded 110, and J. R. Binyon, who threaded 81.

Mrs. Paris after finishing her quota of 145 in 45 minutes, tossed off a second needle with 111 threads in two colors. The secret is in the way you twist the wrist, she says.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

Fun and Happiness.

Fun isn't happiness. Fun is a game,
A dance, a parade and an hour may claim
When some pleasure entrances him so he forgets
Cares, disappointments and worries and debts,
But fun isn't lasting, the lights cease to burn
And with morning the sorrows and burdens return.
A man can be selfish and still buy his fun,
But pride won't be his when the laughter is done.
Who dallies with women with wine and with song
For a time may be glad, but the time's never long.
And who would be happy must learn how to share
The sorrows and burdens his fellowmen bear.
Men blunder who fancy that fun is the thing
Which makes life worth living and soothes every sting.
But happiness isn't so easily gained,
For only by suffering can it be attained,
And who would be happy must find at day's end
There are many about him who call him their friend.
Neither in fortune nor fame can men find
Contentment of spirit and calmness of mind.
Only they can be happy who mixed with their fun
Can look back and see something useful they've done;
Some purpose fulfilled, spite of heartache and pain,
And know that their lives were not spent here in vain.

New Dressing For Hair Adds Fragrance, Too

Package Includes an Atomizer to Spray the Hair; It Won't Make It Oily.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

When seven people put their heads together intent on a single subject we'd say something was up. And when all seven people happen to be hair, scalp and skin specialists we know then and there that the huddle has a far-reaching significance.

We've watched those huddles before. We've waited the outcome, and we've never been disappointed yet. Once it was a new kind of hair whitener which kept gray hair looking for all the world like spun silver, which resulted. Another time it was a special kind of shampoo for dry hair. Time after time there's been something of interest to women the world over—and often to gentlemen. For on one occasion they delighted us by announcing a special treatment for bald pates.

This time they are announcing a new product which has just come out of the laboratories. It's a hair fragrance, but unlike the usual kind, it was especially prepared not only to add a flower-like scent but also to act as a dressing. It contains just enough oil to allow the hair to absorb it instantly, and yet it is positively guaranteed against making oily hair oilier.

It comes in a charming package which includes besides the bottle of fragrance, an atomizer to use in spraying the hair. Of course if we happen to have our own fancy atomizer we can buy the bottle separately.

Finger bowls can be made surprisingly attractive. A Connecticut avenue store which makes a specialty of carrying various and sundry novelties to embellish every corner of our house also has number of things to turn a plain table into a work of art.

Among them are some little glass water lilies coming in white, yellow, pink, red, blue, and orange. An air space inside of them fits them for floating on the surface of the water to look like real miniature lilies. Just what term to use to describe their exact effect evades us. Unusual, yes. But they're something more. They indicate that the hostess has an eye for artsitc garnishing, and that she makes an effort to take advantage of the charming little suggestions we meet with occasionally to add beauty—personality to her table.

Had we found such pretty doll furniture in a toy shop we might have passed it by unnoticed. But to find it in a gift shop where everything else is decidedly adult, from the cocktail shakers to the new novels, was a different matter. It looked so completely naive sitting there between some cigarette cases, and a "nudist" lamp, that we stopped in our tracks to look at it. There was the quaintest little four-poster bed with ruffled flowered muslin curtains. And a little chaise longue upholstered to match. There was also a tiny dressing table, stool, and night table, all of them made by hand.

If for any reason at all you don't own a boudoir clock valued at $125, but would like to, then drop by a local shop and see the one they have on display there. If you don't want to own such a little plutocrat, but would like to say you've seen one, the shop assures us that you're perfectly welcome to come and look around. And as for the clock you can pick it up and give it a thorough once over if you like.

The machinery which is indescribably delicate and steady was made and guaranteed by one of the most dependable concerns in Germany.

We never doubted that if we went around to a certain dressmaker, had our size taken, and ordered one of the smart sport suits, her specialty, the bill could come to—well a goodly sum, anyway.

But no, not so. She called us yesterday and told us that she was making three types of suits, skirts and short sleeve blouse, skirt and long sleeve blouse, or skirt and jacket, for $6.50 or $7.50, depending on the style. She furnishes the material herself, a cotton jersey with a soft finish, which comes in twenty-three different colors, suitable for all the year 'round. The lighter shades and particularly the creamy white will be charming for southern wear.

She also told us that customers could call at her house, select their type and color, and let her take their measurements, or she could call at their homes.

We'll be glad to furnish her address and telephone number.

Regular boys are usually prone to whittle at anything "whittleable," from the grand piano to the four-poster bed. If, however, this urge for carving and carpentering is taken in hand early it can be turned from a trait to a talent. There's a wood carving set which will give the young fellow real tools for any big task he's likely to undertake. The set includes three guages, two chisels and tool sharpeners. All these implements are made of the finest steel, guaranteed for long and hard usage.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

The German Genetics Program.

The papers state that the Germans have announced officially their eugenics program. They have arranged for about 1,700 centers where men and women are to appear to have their fitness for parenthood determined. Just how they are to decide who is to appear has not been announced.

The person cited to appear must undergo something of an examination by the official physician of the center; and the social and family history and the behavior record are to be collected by social workers. The facts for and against the individual as a prospective parent are to be presented to a commission. If the commission finds that the person under investigation would beget children that would be a tax on the state or would vitiate the German stock, they decree that a simple operation should be done. He or she is then taken to a government hospital, where the operation is done by official surgeons. The operation is a simple one, and, in the case of the male, free from all danger; in the case of the female, almost so; and it has no effect except to bring about permanent sterility.

Some of the conditions that will cause the operation to be performed are: Established insanity, especially if it be of a type in which inheritance plays a large part; feeble-mindedness; criminal constitution, enemy of the people type; constitutonal inferority of the kind that causes the individual to be an inhabitant of poorhouses, workhouses; an established beggar; a generally worthless, shiftless individual, and those with certain inheritable diseases.

Doubtless, as experience accumulates, the causes that bring about this operation will be modified. It is estimated that half a million people will be sterilized under this law or ruling.

A program of this kind goes by the negative eugenics. The United States has had and is still having considerable experience with such a program. Several States have sterilization laws, and in some the number of inmates of prisons and asylums that have been sterilized under the law reaches well into the thousanads. The procedure has been upheld by the courts. Judge Olson had the Municipal Court of Chicago put out a volume treating of the procedure from the legal as well as the genetic angle. This is said to be only a part, and, at that, a minor one, in the German genetics program. They contemplate doing much in the way of positive genetics.

Pierce Hall Players To Give "Year's End"

The Pierce Hall Players will present "Year's End," a play by Olga Helma and William Rodon, Wednesday and Thursday in Pierce Hall.

The authors will appear in the play, together with Eileen Fowler, who has played with the National Theater Players, Martha Turner, Richard Harr, and Howard Whitfield, Zack Mace and William Austin Davis, students at the Clifford Brooke Academy.

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Washington Irving—Matilda Hoffman

Washington Irving, at 24, had the bitter grief of losing his 18-year-old sweetheart, who died suddenly after an illness of only a few hours. But the memory of the lovely Matilda Hoffman remained with him throughout his life and he was ever true to the shrine in his heart. Time did not extinguish the light which burned so steadfastly.

Washington Irving's Love Was of the Kind That Does Not Die.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

The true philosophy of love is found in a quatrain in Alfred Tennyson's "In Memoriam.":

I hold it true, whate'er befall,
I feel it, when I sorrow most,
'Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all."

In the romances that cling to the memories of American literary men none is more enduring than the story of Washington Irving and the sweetheart of his youth, Matilda Hoffman, whose early death before they were married saddened the rest of his life.

Sacred Memory.

"More and more beautiful," Irving wrote of this lost love of his many years after her passing. Her memory was a sacred shrine in his heart of hearts and his romantic attachment spread a gentle melancholy around him that heightened feminine interest in him. It is said that to the day of his death he never ceased to mourn her and he is said to have died with her miniature (from which her picture accompanying this romance was drawn) in his hand.

Naturally one is apt to idealize his love. Those gazing at the miniature or its reproduction are prone to agree with Charles Dudley Warner that it is a "most lovely miniature."

Washington city should have a special interest in Washington Irving outside of the admiration due to his masterly portrayals in his books. For he passed much time in Washington before he was sent by the Government as U. S. Minister to Spain.

Irving cherished a sentimental regard for the city in turn. Perhaps this was engendered by the fact that he was born very soon after the close of the Revolutionary War, named for George Washington and as a small boy had met the great hero and been patted on the shoulder by him. A commentator years after remarked: "Always thereafter Irving felt pleasantly drawn to the city which Washington founded, and his presence aided materially in making a fine atmosphere." While a resident here first as a guest of Gen. and Mrs. John P. Van Ness in 1811, and then during the early forties Irving "seemef always to be on hand to meet the best and ablest among visitors. He met Dickens here and he met Thackeray."

Noble Ancestry.

Irving was only 16 when Washington died and he records somewhere how he read with tear-stained eyes and a sinking heart the news of the passing of the Father of his country. He paid a noble tribute later on in his masterly life of the hero he so admired and after whom he had been named.

A child of English-born parents on his paternal side, Irving could trace his ancestry to one William de Irwyn, armor bearer of Robert Bruce, while his mother had been Sarah Sanders, of a noted preaching line, who fell in love with William Irving, a petty officer on a packet between Falmouth and New York. After his marriage William Irving gave up the sea and settled down in business in New York. Eight sons and two daughters had been born to Sarah and William Irving before Washington Irving was to appear on the scene.

Biographers of Irving have maintained that his tendency to letters as well as his love of society and humor were a heritage from his mother, while his father handed down to him his probity, stern covenanter respect of religion and a sagacity in worldly matters as well.

School Days.

In the little old New York of the close of the eighteenth century, Irving found plenty of opportunity for fun and mischief making. His school days were marked by his love for reading and distaste for set studies, a habit which often brought him into dire conflict with both his stern father and his teacher. His parents wanted him to follow several of his elder brothers into the classic halls of Columbia College. Irving decided in favor of study in a law office and did not go to college.

Here again books lured him from too close application to Blackstone. There was no pressure in the matter of money, for things had prospered with Merchant Irving and the American dollar was then worth every one of its hundred cents to any possessor.

The theaters lured him even more from study. Early he developed an overpowering love for the drama. Calvinistic William Irving thought the playhouse the habitat of Satan. Thus Washington Irving learned how to sandwich in family prayers at 9 with the second act of plays, reaching the theater via his bedroom window to the roof and perilous gutter to the street.

However, his health began to fail and consumption was feared. So he was sent on hunting expeditions in the Sleepy Hollow region, afterward to be immortalized by him.

But Death Robbed Him of the Girl of His Dreams.

Became a Law Clerk.

Under such pleasant stimulus his health mended and we find him a law clerk again in the office of one Josiah Hoffman in 1802. Hoffman was a hard taskmaster, but he had a "fair and lovely daughter" and after Irving saw her he resolved to endure the crotchets of the father. Matilda was only 12 years old at the time, but she gave promise of real beauty and was accomplished beyond her years. Soon Irving was a welcome visitor and became as a brother to the little girl. He was always ready to listen to her and she followed his first steps into the land of literature with interest and devotion.

Then came another recurrence of the lung trouble. This time he was sent abroad and wandered about a year or two, visiting Italy, France and Spain, and studying art meanwhile.

When he returned to America, Matilda was now 15 years old and quite the young lady. Irving found the brotherly feeling had grown into a stronger sentiment. Finding his affection returned, ambition awoke for the first time in the heart of the future writer. Matilda and he planned their marriage when he should become more established in law. By this time he was 24 and she was 18 when, suddenly, out of the blue, fell the terrible bolt of fate. Without warning, and after only a few hours' illness, Matilda died.

Heartbroken by Loss.

Irving was inconsolable when the sad news was broken to him. His most intimate friends dared not allude to his loss, and for years he never smiled.

"She died in the beauty of her youth," he wrote in his private notebook, "and in my memory she will ever be young and beautiful."

The unspoken pledge he made then never to forget her he kept inviolate to his death.

Years afterward, he wrote of the event: "When I became more calm and collected, I applied myself, by way of occupation, to the finishing of my work (The History of New York). I brought it to a close as well as I could, and published it; but the time and circumstances in which it was produced rendered me always unable to look upon it with satisfaction." In other extracts from his letters we read: "You wonder why I am not married. My time has now gone by, and I have growing claims upon my thoughts in this lost love of mine."

And again he wrote, this time in Bracebridge Hall: "I have loved as I never again shall love in this world. I have been loved as I never again shall be loved."

Her Miniature.

Under his pillow after his death were found the miniature of Matilda Hoffman, her Bible and Prayerbook, a braid of fair hair and a strip of paper on which he had written the two words "Matilda Hoffman" as if tracing the dear name had been some solace to him.

In his pocketbook was found a paper on which he had written those noble lines of Campbell's "What's Hallowed Ground?" which well expressed Irving's life-long loyalty to his first love, Matilda Hoffman.

There is, perhaps, no better way to complete this half-forgotten romance than to repeat Campbell's words:

A kiss can consecrate the ground
Where meted hearts are mutual bound;
The spot where love's first links were wound,
That ne'er are riven,
Is hallowed down to earth's profound,
And up to Heaven.
For time makes all but true love old;
The burning thoughts that then were told
Run molten still in memory's mould,
And will not cool
Until the heart itself be cold
In Lethe's pool.

Designs Borrowed From Far Countries Lend Atmosphere to New Print Dresses

New York, Jan. 21.—Talk about your round-the-world cruises! (And that's what many people are talking about right now.) You need go no farther than the silk or the dress department of your nearest store to feel you've been in far-off lands.

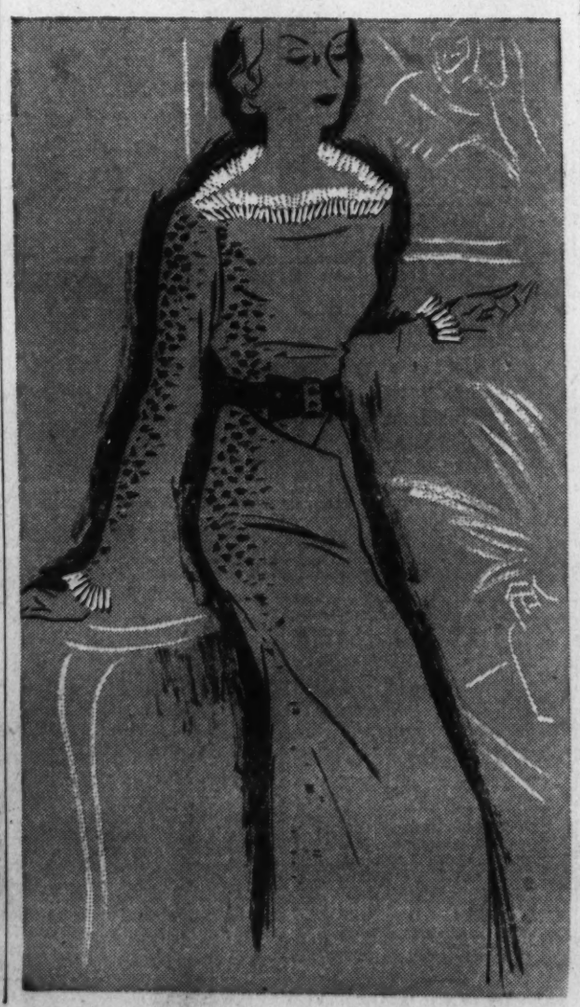

For in quest of new print designs, fashion practically circled the globe. Result: Some of the smartest, gayest-in-years prints of unmistakable Chinese, Persian, Russian and Mexican inspiration.

China contributes some national motifs done in daring colors skillfully combined so as not to seem bizarre.

Mexican pottery and blanket designs make up into strikingly colorful prints. From Persia come those soft toned geometrics and florals so familiar in handsome Persian rugs.

Prints of the types described are available in Washington in all the better class shops and department stores.

Back-Yard Ideas.

But foreign countries aren't the only inspiration for this year's prints. Right out in your own back yard you'll find plenty.

Fruit patterns are a new idea. Cherries, berries, grapes and pears with their stems and leaves will delight your artistic sense.

Flowers, too. Field flowers, garden flowers, old-fashioned posies. They combine many colors and generally cover the background pretty thoroughly. For daytime they're small. For formal wear larger.

Then there are new ideas in those geometrics which make such neat tailored daytime dresses. The classic stripes, dots and cirles of different sizes combined and rows of tiny flowers making stripes.

Quaint Patterns.

Prints, like some other fashions, have their gay '90's side, too. Old-fashioned braids have been worked into designs and Dresden-like flowers give other patterns a quaint look.

Men's tie silk patterns are sure to be big favorites, they're so neat and tailored looking. New bright colors are used as backgrounds and often the silk itself is foulard to make it look even more tie-like.

And then if you don't want too much color there are monotone prints, usually in flower patterns. Black-and-white and brown-and-parchment combinations are favorites. But you'll find brighter ones, too, such as rust, gold or bright blue.

Samples of Prints.

Would you like to see what some of the new prints look like? If so, send us the coupon with requested inclosures and we'll mail you our new leaflet with actual silk samples of several of the most interesting designs and a detailed description of each.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If January 22 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 4 to 5 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 to 11 a. m., from 2:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 9 to 10 p. m.

If you were born on January 22, you are one of those people who radiate good humor, so long as no one disagrees with you. Unfortunate is the person who differs with your opinion, for you do not know the art of arguing. Quite unintentionally you lose your temper, and give voice to a diatribe that borders dangerously near to a line of abuse. It would be well for you to remember other people are entitled to their opinions, and learn to control your tongue when engaged in a discussion. You are ordinarily very moderate in your habits, but on this date you are apt to have a temptation pleced in your way, and it is advisable for you to resist anything that will be a radical departure from the rules you have fixed for your own guidance.

The child born on January 22, as it grows older, will display a great interest in anything of a mechanical construction, and toys of that nature will have the greatest appeal. In school this child will excel in its mathematical studies, and should be encouraged to take up drawing. It will possess a rather quiet nature, and display a great amount of affection for those with whom it is brought in close contact. It may be well to train this child for some profession.

The woman born on January 22 has a very independent nature, and is self-assertive. If you once form an opinion, it is a fixed one, and it is almost impossible to make you change it. Your friends may possibly at times resent this stubborn characteristic, so try and be a little less radical in your reasoning. Your bright mentality, as well as personality, makes you very attractive to men. Your husband will be most congenial, and married life shall prove thoroughly satisfactory. You will accomplish a great deal of good in your life.

The man whose birthday is January 22 must cultivate cheerfulness. You can make your life much brighter, by being more optimistic. You are inclined to dwell too much on what may happen in the future. It would be well for you to learn to live for each day, and not worry about the next one. You will have many things to be grateful for, after the new year arrives.

People born on January 22 may secure a great deal of happiness, if they will cultivate a love for out-of-door sports. Mother Nature will reveal to you many wonders, and the physical benefits will be gratifying.

Successful people born on January 22:

John Delafield, banker.
Charles Davies, mathematician.
Richard Upjohn, architect.
Edmund R. Peaslee, physician.
George E. Belknap, naval officer.
Walter Gay, artist.

Youth Painted As Irreligious Called Fallacy

"Noisy Minority" Blamed by Dr. Schnabel for Misconception.

Denying that young people in general are not Christian, the Rev. George E. Schnabel, speaking last night at the Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, blamed a "noisy minority" for a popular misconception.

"There are more Christian young people than at first appears," he said. "They are not as noisy as that cheap crowd that likes to attract attention. Thoughtless people judge all youth by this noisy minority.

"Youth can be Christian if given a chance, because youth can do anything it wants to do. Youth, the very word implies courage, daring, adventure, life. Tie these up to the Christian living, and you will find youth at its best glorious, almost divine.

"The most adventurous life it is possible to live is the Christian life. It is that, not because it is easy, but because it is hard, sacrificial, filled with daring, adventure and challenge."

Turning again to the "noisy minority," Dr. Schnabel said: "The best adventure they know about is a cocktail party, a wild ride, petting parties, or anything questionable. It is the same story with them over and over until the sheer monotony drives them to a disgusted 'I'm fed up.' The tragedy is too many are too late in getting 'fed up.'

"Their example has been wrong. They are having the only kind of good time they know anything about. Ninety out of 100 young people of this class have parents who are careless, irreligious, hypocritical and ignorant about youth. Affection is not all that is demanded of a good parent.

"From Jesus, who at 29 died on a cross, from the martyrs, the heroic pioneers, the missionaries, the selfless servants of mankind like Grenfell, Ida Scudder, Albert Schweitzer and Susan Bauerfriend comes the call of youth to dedicate itself to heal the hurt of the world."

Pinkham Medicines HELP!

Your grandmother and mine depended upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Modern women like Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets ::: chocolate coated ::: purse size package ::: for the relief of periodic pains and discomfort and female irregularities.

MRS. V. ARTHUR
54-7th Ave., Carbondale, Pa.

"I am 57 years old. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was so bad I could hardly walk around and I cannot praise it enough. I have also used the Sanative Wash and got wonderful help from it."

ANGELINE G. LAROSA
1313-5th Ave., McKeesport, Pa.

"For four years I suffered with periodic pains. My left side used to feel paralyzed and I would stay in bed two days. I had no appetite, just drank about six cups of coffee a day. I was weak and nervous. I tried all kinds of medicine without results until I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets. They gave me strength and appetite. My nerves are much better and I am so relieved that I do not suffer as I used to. I recommend your medicine to every woman I come in contact with."

Cruise Coat of Light Tweed

by Amelia Earhart

If you plan to take only one coat cruising, this would be a nice choice. Cut on the slimmest lines, this brown and white tweed is lightweight and soft, takes little space, and goes with everything. It's the classic raglan-shoulder, wide-lapel, back-belted style personally designed by Amelia Earhart. And for buttons she has added discs that look like "intake valves." Amelia Earhart fashions are exclusive with Jelleff's in Washington.

Church Gives Chaos Hope, Says Bishop

Answer to Man's Quest Is Outside Material Realm, Perry Holds.

National "Endeavor of 1934" Follows Call in Cathedral Here.

The answer to mankind's quest for a sign of promise amid present chaos lies outside of "material recovery in the spiritual realm."

This was the message of the Right Rev. James De Wolf Perry, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in America, delivered yesterday from Washington Cathedral pulpit in a "call to the faith" throughout the Nation.

"The only reconstruction that will satisfy this shaken world must rest upon foundations built in conformity with God's purpose and in obedience to his will," Bishop Perry said.

He urged a way of life revealed through divine power which "sanctifies the home, illumines every personal experience of birth and marriage, of joy and sorrow, of moral and physical adversity, suffering and death."

Church-wide Movement Starts.

Calling upon communicants to make this way of life their own in the coming year, Bishop Perry said, "let there be carried from house to house and from heart to heart the message of the same loving purpose, until flames of faith, of quickened conscience and devotion, burn with new light."

A movement embracing the entire church to be known as "The Church-Wide Endeavor of 1934" was started in response to Bishop Perry's summons. Its aim will be to reach all within the church with a "fresh statement of the purpose of God and an appeal for reinstatement of that purpose in their lives."

A seven-point pledge for voluntary acceptance by those in the movement was suggested as follows:

"I will endeavor to learn the purpose of God through research of the Bible, in the church through a renewal of allegiance, in worship and sacrament, in vocation and occupation, in home life, in civic life, for political institutions are the instruments of God's purpose; and in missions uniting men everywhere in the fulfillment of the purpose of God."

Implies Church Is on Trial.

A message to the church issued in connection with the call states that an era of vigorous self-confidence is closing and that industrial, commercial and financial structures are in danger of disorganization.

"So man is frightened today as he experiences the trembling of his social and economic world," the message continues. The remedy for the situation, it is declared, lies in the movement, wholly spiritual, asked by Bishop Perry.

The implication that Christian religion is on trial is contained in the message.

Canon Raymond L. Wolven, chaplain to Bishop Freeman, conducted yesterday's services, which were attended by clergy from the diocese of Washington and Maryland.

4,000 Inspect Model Home

Post's New Display House Visited by 2,000 on Opening Day.

Yesterday's spring-like weather doubled visitation to The Washington Post's first model home presentation in the new year. More than 4,000 persons viewed it during the first week of its exhibition. Fully 2,000 inspected it on the opening day.

The Post's new display house is in Colonial Park, adjacent to Alexandria. The beautiful residence was constructed by R. L. Kane Co., Inc., and is owned by Charles Henry Smith. Kenton D. Hamaker, of Clarendon, Va., was its architect. The home is furnished by Hutchison's, Inc., and the draperies and curtains are by J. F. Ligon. It will be open for inspection Sunday and daily from 11 a. m. until 10 p. m. until further notice.

To visit the home, drive over Long Bridge, then turn right on the upper road to Alexandria and on to Colonial Park, entrance of which is marked by two brick columns of colonial design. Turn into the entrance and proceed to the summit of the hill.

Another route is over Memorial Bridge, turning left at Arlington Cemtery and continuing straight to Russell road, or the upper road to Alexandria, then turning right to Colonial Park.

Razor-Brandishing Trio Robs D.C. Man in Alley

Threatened by three colored men armed with razors and revolvers, Frank Brown, of 327 Seventeenth street northwest, yesterday was robbed of his overcoat, a billfold and a small amount of cash, he reported to police.

Brown said he was walking through an alley in the downtown section when the trio accosted him.

Scared Youths Miss Big Haul At Ship Office

Nervous Gunmen Flee With $70, Overlook Large Sum in Safe.

Two nervous young gunmen entered the general agent's office of the Norfolk and Washington Steamboat Company on the Potomac waterfront yesterday afternoon, held up Charles Moulden, the chief clerk, scooped $70 in currency from a drawer and fled, leaving several thousand dollars in a safe.

Posing as potential passengers, the youths asked Moulden about rates and then requested change for a dollar bill. As the clerk approached the cash drawer in front of the visitors, one pulled a gun, ordered Moulden back to a far wall, and the other rifled the drawer.

"That's enough," the youth with the gun quavered, while his companion was stuffing his pockets with currency,—"Let's go!"

Moulden, from a widow, watched the thieves jump into a sedan on the opposite side of the street. The machine started immediately, convincing Moulden and police there was a third man in the party.

Both youths wore "zipper" jackets, one brown, the other blue, Moulden told police. One wore a grey felt hat and both blue trousers. They spoke with a southern accent. Their car had green tags. They were last seen on M street southeast.

Drink With Strangers Costs Clothes and Cash

Edgar E. Williams came here from Richmond, Va., several days ago—but he doesn't think much of the reception he received.

Williams told police yesterday he met two strangers in a restaurant at Ninth street and New York avenue northwest and was invited to join them in "a few drinks." He awakened in an other downtown restaurant, Williams reported, to find his overcoat, an extra suit of clothing and $15 in cash missing.

House Selects 2 on D. C. Body

Committee Completed by Naming Carpenter, Ellenbogen.

Personnel of the House District Committee has been completed with approval of the appointment of two new members, Representative Randolph Carpenter, of Kansas, and Representative Ellenbogen, of Pennsylvania, both Democrats.

The two new members probably will get assignments on the public utilities subcommittee, which has two vacancies, and the streets and police-firemen subcommittees, each of which has a vacancy.

Carpenter is 39 and Ellenbogen 33. Both are lawyers. The latter is a graduate of the University of Vienna, Austria.

Woman Injured in Auto Crash on Sixth Street

Injured when her automobile collided with another, Miss Anne Fishman, 25, of 523 Randolph place northwest, was taken to Providence Hospital yesterday. Physicians said she suffered a possible fractured right leg.

James Hunter, colored, 27, of 222 K street northwest, was driving the other car, police said. He was not hurt.

Citizens Asked to School Meeting on Finances

Why do school officials get gray hairs?

A better answer than any barber could give will be furnished District citizens tomorrow night when they study the 1935 school budget, now before Congress. The occasion is the annual conference on school financing between citizens and the school officials. Interested citizens are invited to attend. The meeting, scheduled for 8 p. m., will be held at the Franklin School.

Tuberculosis Institute Here Opens Feb. 5

Noted Leaders in Fight on Plague Will Lecture in 12-Day Session.

The next Institute for Tuberculosis Workers, conducted by the National Tuberculosis Association, will be held here February 5 to 17, under auspices of George Washington University. The Washington association has arranged for the institute with the idea of emphasizing the dangers of tuberculosis and to enlist and train more persons in the fight on the disease.

Mrs. Ernest B. Grant, of the association here, said the institute program covers the field of tuberculosis work, and each subject will be discussed by an expert of National reputation. Persons enrolling for courses will be required to give their entire time daily during the institute.

The institute will be conducted by Dr. Philip P. Jacobs, director of publications and extension service of the National association. He is extension lecturer on public health at Columbia University.

Dr. White to Speak.

Among the men and women to appear on the program are:

Dr. William Charles White, president of the District Tuberculosis Association, the chairman of the medical research committee of the National association, who will speak on "The Medical and Scientific Basis of the Tuberculosis Movement."

Dr. H. E. Kleinschmidt, of the National Tuberculosis Association staff, and Dr. H. W. Hetherington, of the Henry Phipps Institute of Philadelphia, on the "Child and the Tuberculosis Problem."

Dr. Victor F. Cullen, of the Maryland State Sanatorium, on "The Treatment of Tuberculosis."

Dr. William C. Fowler, District health officer, on "Relationships—Official and Nonofficial."

Dr. Prentiss William, president of the District Medical Society, on "Relationships-Medical."

Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody superintendent of the District Municipal Tuberculosis Hospital, on "Case-Finding."

Writer on Program.

Dr. J. F. Rogers, of Washington, on "Child Health Education."

Miss Gertrude H. Bowling director of the District Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, on "Public Health Nursing and Tuberculosis."

Dr. Elijah Allen, director of Howard University Health Service, on "Tuberculosis among Negroes."

Several courses connected with educational publicity and organization will be presented by Dr. Jacobs. Attendance is open to persons from other sections and already applications have been received from New York, Pennsylvania and Florida.

Police Surprise Raid Uncovers Crime Arsenal

Brass Knuckles, Bludgeons Found When Bluecoats Smash Way in House.

A varied assortment of deadly weapons, including criminal instruments described by police as used in nearly every known type of violence, was seized yesterday when a special raiding squad battered their way into a house at 118 F street southwest.

Led by Lieut. C. P. Cox and Detective Sergeant Howard Ogle, the squad surprised more than a score of persons in the house, many of whom attempted to escape.

All exits were blocked. Trapped in one room several in the crowd dropped knives, guns, razors and other weapons. One man was seized before he could get rid of a gun. He said he was John Newman, colored, 40. He was charged with carrying concealed weapons.

The gun, police said, was more than 100 years old, and four barrels, each capable of firing independently.

Included in weapons confiscated was a set of brass knuckles, with dagger attached; an old flint-lock revolver, several stilettos, folding daggers and an assortment of knives, revolvers and bludgeons.

Scholarship Extended For Student at Yale

Robert A. Mattern, of Chevy Chase, a third-year student at Yale, was yesterday notified by the Yale Alumni Association of Washington that the scholarship he won in 1931 will be continued for his senior year.

Mattern graduated from St. Alban's School here the same year he entered Yale. Earlier he attended local public schools.

Taneytown Church Card Party.

A card party for the benefit of St. Joseph's Church at Taneytown, Md., will be held at Southern Dairies plant, First and M streets northeast at 8:30 tonight.

Mine Relief Workers End Unity Session

Three-Day Conference Stresses Methods of Aiding Poor.

Federal Agencies Join in Studying Welfare Program.

A conference of more than 70 field workers among poverty-stricken coal miners, and Federal agencies devoted to relief activities, closed yesterday under the auspices of the American Friends Service Committee.

Three days were devoted to discussion of poverty, idleness, starvation, disease and human suffering among miner's families in bituminous coal areas.

To unify the point of view of widely separated workers, committee members, representatives of public and private agencies and interested laymen was the purpose of the conference, which was addressed by speakers headed by Dr. M. L. Wilson, director of the subsistence homesteads division of the Department of Interior.

"Out of two and one-half years of experience in the bituminous coal areas has come an intensified feeling that the problem presented in this field is one which affects us all," said Olga A. Jones, of the coal executive committee yesterday.

Panel Discussion Held.

Saturday's session of the conference was given over to a panel discussion in which the following participated:

Grace Abbott, chief, U. S. Children's Bureau; Robert E. Bondy, director, disaster and civilian relief, American Red Cross; Jacob Baker, of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration; Bess Goodykoontz, assistant to the U. S. Commissioner of Education; James Meyers, Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America; Louise Stanley, chief, U. S. Bureau of Home Economics; J. C. Wright, assistant commissioner for vocational education; Mordecai J. B. Ezekial, economic adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture, and Bernard G. Waring, chairman, coal section.

Clarence E. Pickett, chief of the subsistence homestead division of the Department of the Interior, presided.

Henry J. Cadbury Speaks.

Speaking yesterday at the closing session at the Friends Florida Avenue Meeting House, Henry J. Cadbury, chairman of the American Friends service committee, told workers of the importance of their services.

"Despise not the littleness of your tasks, but think of yourselves as units in a great whole," he said.

Field workers have carried on a program of instruction among miners in Kentucky, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Members of the coal executive committee are:

Bernard G. Waring, chairman; Henry Tatnall Brown, William C. Biddle, Eleanor Stabler Clarke, Henry J. Cadbury, Clarence E. Pickett, executive secretary of the American Friends service committee, and Olga A. Jones, director of the coal section.

CommunityChest Names New Trustees Tonight

Community Chest agencies and contributors will be equally divided on the new board of trustees to be elected at the annual meeting tonight at the Willard Hotel.

The program will include music by the Northeast Boys' Club band. The new board of trustees will consist of 240 persons. Each of the agencies will elect one board member and one staff member, and the Chest organization will name 120 trustees representing contributors. Newbold Noyes, president of the Chest, will preside.

Girl Class Leader, 12, to Graduate

SARA ANNE RAPP,

12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond E. Rapp, valedictorian at Macfarland Junior High School, where she will graduate January 30.

She Aspires to Become News Writer After Her College Career.

Introducing this year's youngest valedictorian in District schools—Sara Anne Rapp, aged 12.

She will graduate from the Macfarland junior high school January 30, three years ahead of the average age for leaving junior high. Sara Anne is so precocious, according to H. P. Safford, principal of the school, that she was allowed to skip a whole semester in junior high, an experience she had also known in elementary school.

Sara Anne, however, isn't any candidate for the prodigy class. She is a perfectly normal, well balanced girl, good in all subjects, fond of play and not out to start a new cult or revolutionize life in any other way. In fact, her present ambitions are centered on the conservative vocation of journalism.

Like most people who do things a little better than anyone else, Sara Anne is modest. She had just had her hair washed when interviewed yesterday, and the reporter found her as difficult to interrogate as a soldier on sentry duty.

She will go to Roosevelt High School, it was learned from her mother, Mrs. Raymond E. Rapp, of 727 Quebec place northwest, where she will take regular college preparatory course. Where she will go after that hasn't been definitely decided, but it will be college and she will specialize in journalism.

At the commencement exercises at Macfarland next Tuesday, Sara Anne as valedictorian, will make a brief speech. She was chosen for the class office, Mr. Safford said, because of her good record as an all-around student.

Man Dying, 2 Hurt In Crash of Autos

Victim's Neck Feared Broken; One Driver Held.

One man is near death in Casualty Hospital and two other persons were treated for minor injuries yesterday, following an automobile accident near Fourteenth street and Maryland avenue northeast.

Peter Harris, 36, of 3220 Twelfth street northeast, was admitted to the hospital with a possible fractured neck. He was a passenger in the machine of his brother, Joseph S. Harris, 35, of Brentwood, Md. The latter and his wife, Mrs. Rose Harris, 29, were injured slightly.

Earl E. Bishop, 32, of 44 Randolph place northwest, the other driver, was held at Ninth Precinct station pending the outcome of Peter Harris' injuries.

2 Seized 3 Hours After Knife Holdup

Victim Who Lost $5 Says Pair Robbed Him.

Less than three hours after a holdup early yesterday, two men were arrested by Fourth Precinct police, identified by the victim and charged with robbery.

Shortly after 2 a. m. Isaac Milton Jordan, of 451 Eighth street southwest, told police he was robbed of $5 by two colored men with a knife. He was accosted at Sixth street and Virginia avenue southwest, Jordan said.

Police arrested two men giving the names of Walter Murray, 23, of 804 First street southwest, and Joseph William Clark, 28, of 434 Six-and-one-half street southwest.

Capital Rum Dealers Promise Model Set-Up

Prospective dispensers of liquor and wine in Washington formed an association at the Occidental Grill yesterday and pledged themselves to make the Capital a model city under repeal.

Full cooperation was promised the District Commissioners in keeping out undesirables and enforcing the regulations. The following officers were elected: Milton S. Kronheim, president; H. C. Reimer, vice president; A. B. Wakenight, treasurer, and Irvin Mosco, secretary.

Hines Backs Cost Figures On Veterans

Disabled Plan to Fight in Congress Against "Cruel Injustices."

Gen. Frank T. Hines, head of the Veterans' Administration, yesterday came to the defense of his cost estimates of the American Legion's 4-point legislative program. He declared Legion criticism of the estimates are "wholly uncalled for."

"Had representatives of the American Legion seen fit to ask for the bases of the estimates they would have been gladly furnished, and I am sure the present controversy would have been unnecessary. Being confident the estimates are sound, it will be my purpose to reiterate and substantiate them," the administrator said.

The Legion, Gen. Hines added, "has not available to it the bases of the estimates nor the technical experience which making of the estimates requires."

Legion Hits 'Trick Statement.'

A bulletin issued by the National legislative committee of the Legion, quoting National Commander Edward A. Hayes, characterized Hines' cost estimates as "a trick statement."

Gen. Hines, in a letter to Hayes yesterday, said the special purpose of the bulletin appeared to be not only to attack the Veterans Administration estimates, but to infer they were intentionally high and aided "opponents of veterans' measures in the campaign of veterans' defamation."

"I take exception to the tone of this special bulletin," Gen. Hines wrote, "and to the ulterior motives which it ascribes to the Veterans Administration. I also take exception to the lack of integrity it implies upon those conscientious employees of the Veterans Administration whose responsibility it is to determine the effort of changes in legislation upon our appropriation requirements."

Economy League Speaks.

Support of the President's budget was asked in a letter sent to all members of the Senate by Henry H. Curran, director of the National Economy League, in which he asked rejection of "the demands of organized minorities."

"In particular we ask you," the letter said, "to refuse the demand of the American Legion that you give money to veterans who were not hurt by the war and to widows of veterans whose deaths were not due to the war.

Disabled Plan Campaign.

"The American Legion speaks for less than one-fifth of the World War veterans," said the Curran letters, "and speaks for nobody else."

J. W. Mcueen, national commander of the Disabled American Veterans, issued a statement last night declaring the "most determined drive ever conducted by the Disabled American Veterans" will begin this week before Congress to remove the "cruel injustices being suffered by the service connected disabled."

Peace Society to Hear Miss Jeanette Rankin

Miss Jeanette Rankin, former representative from Montana and first woman member of the House of Representatives, will address the Chevy Chase Society for Fostering International Peace, at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church house tomorrow night.

The Chevy Chase Society was formed as a result of the recent Council on the Cause and Cure of War held here. Tomorrow night's meeting is one of a series.

Man Beaten in Quarrel On Downtown Corner

Beaten by an unidentified assailent, Harry L. Baker, 58, of 1110 Trinidad avenue northeast, yesterday was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Baker was walking near Thirteenth and H streets northeast, when he was accosted. An argument ensued, police were told, and Baker was attacked. He suffered a possible fractured rib and lacerations.

Religion Points Path to Peace, Says Educator

International Good Will Is Progressing, Declares Dr. Richmond.

Expressing belief that international good will is in the making, Dr. Charles A. Richmond, former president of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., spoke yesterday morning at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church on "A New Understanding."

"Today the best seller in Germany is 'The Life of Christ,'" he said.

"No machinery, no codes, no man in Washington can rid us of the misunderstandings, greeds and inequalities that have bred strife since the beginning of man's history," said Dr. Richmond. "This can be done only by the conversion of the people to Jesus Christ.

"Our system has failed. In spite of our electricity and airplanes, we can not evolve a plan to live in harmony. Wars have torn at society since its origin, and they will continue to do so as long as we try to stifle them permanently by preaching peace and manufacturing guns and poison gas.

"'Liberty is a stinking corpse,' says Mussolini. Young Germans know no more glorious death than by a French bullet. Russia won't stop fighting until all captialists are dead. One European military school teaches its pupils to infect the enemy's drinking water with typhoid germs."

Dr. Richmond ridiculed efforts to settle international differences through conferences where all the delegates were suspicious.

"No nation can be self-sufficient today," he continued. "The family of nations is a reality. Conversion of the spirit of the people to one of love is necessary to brotherly harmony; to lift us out of our economic and political morass; to bridge the gap between those who have too much and those who have too little; to get rid of the monster, greed."

Congressman Gets Trolley Complaints

Black Hears Car Service to Capitol Is Poor.

Complaints against the street car service of the Capital Transit Co. have reached the ears of Representative Loring Black, jr., of New York, chairman of the public utilities subcommittee of the House District Committee.

Black said yesterday that criticism had been directed particularly against the irregularity of the service from downtown Washington to the Capitol.

Inside Story of Prohibition's Defeat Told in Shouse's Files

Library of Congress to Preserve Saga of Wet's Victory.

The complete story of the collapse of national prohibition in the United States is to be preserved in the Library of Congress, Jouett Shouse revealed yesterday in his final annual report as president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

All of the files of the association, covering the period from before completion of ratification of the eighteenth amendment to the proclamation of repeal, have been made available to the library.

Librarian Herbert Putnam, according to Shouse, "expressed a real desire to have them."

Credited to Navy Officer.

The president's last report is designed as "a convenient handbook of the repeal movement and an invaluable guide for future reference when inquiries are undertaken as to how repeal was carried to its final, triumphant conclusion."

Inception of the repeal movement, on the day after the World War Armistice was signed in November, 1918, is credited by Shouse to Capt. William H. Stanton, U. S. N., retired.

"Intensive organization and acute political vision" which functioned in the closing months of the repeal fight to bring victory "a year sooner than otherwise might have been possible or even reasonably anticipated," is described by Shouse in his report.

Drys Outsmarted.

Shouse and Joseph H. Choate, jr., president director of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, acting then as chairman of the voluntary committee of lawyers for repeal, "outsmarted the antirepealists by having a model convention and election bill prepared in advance of submission of the twenty-first amendment by Congress, for the guidance of legislatures which never before had been called upon to deal with such a problem."

The report claims repeal "was advanced by at least two years through persuading the 'lame duck' Congress of 1933 to submit the proposal instead of waiting for an extra session of the Seventy-third Congress. At the time the repeal resolution was put to the States by Congress the legislatures of approximately 40 States were in session, most of them not meeting again regularly until 1934. If the Congressional resolution had not been passed when it was, legislative acts would have been delayed in so many States that repeal could not possibly have been accomplished in 1933 and probably not before 1935."

She Shoots Field Goal and Holds Bausch Without Score.

Capital Tossers Draw Away as End Nears; Mercury Wins.

BABE DIDRIKSON and her All-American basket ball team came to town yesterday and met the Heurich Reds, local pro outfit, who went to town and defeated the girl athlete and her troupe, 19 to 16.

It was a gala occasion, this basket ball game, as the undefeated Reds played to a capacity George Washington Gym audience, pressed Jim Bausch, all-round sports star and Olympic champion, into the money class as an added attraction to their line-up, and defeated the Babe's team which has won 57 in 63 starts.

To the many who bulged the Colonial court, the girl wonder-athlete was a distinct surprise the way she held Jim Bausch, her former Olympic team mate scoreless during the time she "played" him. And Jim is no slouch of a basketeer. And to top this off, she sunk a pretty basket from the center of the floor, that failed even to touch the cross-knotted cords as it plopped through the hoop.

Plays Half of Game.

Miss Didrikson played throughout the first 13 minutes of the first half and wound up her performance in the last seven minutes of the game. The score book showed the Texas athletrix spearing one field goal in six tries and muffing her lone charity heave, awarded her the first minute of play.

Big, gaurlike Jim Bausch played stellar ball and when the enthusiastic audience turned to eye the home team, after Babe left the floor, the Kansan was the center of attraction. Early in the session, the Olympic star and the Babe displayed a rare gesture of the hardwoods, a feat strictly the repertoire of adagio finales.

With Bausch in possession of the ball, Babe got a vice-like grip on the big fellow's shoulders. There followed three quick body turns and Didrickson left her feet and went whirling about in the air like the propeller of an auto giro. It would have been a great act for M. Turner's rassle card.

The visitors got off to an early lead that reached 9-1 proportions before ten minutes of the first half was used up. But then Duke Croson, giant blonde, Heurich center, and Bosey Berger, whipped through a pair under the basket, which brought the local five within striking distance of overhauling the troupers. Moon Evans and Berger sunk a pair in rapid succession to shoot the Reds into the lead, 9-8. Berger and Evans came through again and Frank Darby, substitute for the Babe, scored a beauty from the center of the floor and the half ended with the Reds leading 14-11.

Evans Makes Shots.

At the start of the second half, Evans came through with a trio of foul shots to vault the score, 17-11. Miss Didrikson returned to the fray and calmly potted her lone shot to bring the score to 17-13. Bergen flipped a brilliant heave from the side center territory to wind up his team's scoring. Frank Shimek tallied once and Dick Butzon's charity fling closed the scoring of the game.

In the preliminary tussle, the Mercury quintet came from behind to defeat the Heurich Flashes in a hard, torrid battle. Vermillion, Merc's star forward, carried off the scoring honors with 8 points. The Heurich team led at the half, 11-9.

Johnson Will Head A. A. U. Committee

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Winfree Johnson, of the Public Welfare and Recreational Association in Washington, was named today by President Avery Brundage as chairman of the playgrounds committee of the Amateur Athletic Union. Johnson was vice chairman of the committee, which was headed by J. B. Lemon last year.

Particular importance attaches to the committee this year because of efforts being made to have public works funds appropriated for playground instruction. There were 34 committees, having a total membership of more than 600, appointed at the same time.

Girl Olympic Star to Go Into Vaudeville In England After Making 3 Talkies in U. S.

Golf Her Major Weakness, Babe Didrikson Says in Visit Here.

By Chick Kenny.

SHE smoked a cigarette once and week. Yes, she thinks she will play basketball for another season, maybe. She plans to make three talkies, the collegiate type, you know, and after these movies have been completed she expects to embark on a vaudeville career in England—sometime this summer.

So says Babe Didrikson, super girl athlete whose basketball team, the All Americans, played the local pro quintet on the George Washington University gymnasium yesterday, and lost, 19-16.

Much has been written of the exploits of Miss Mildred, how she yhipped the Olympic field in her favorite events and how the national body of the A. A. U. up and retired her from the amateur rank of competing girl athletes, because she scrawled her Jane Doe across a document idolizing a pea-green roadster, that turned up in the magazines, and for which she failed to receive even a string of beads (wampum—indian lucre).

Carries Rabbit's Foot.

But there are other things about Babe Didrikson. Did you know that she carries a rabbit's foot, semi-encased in brilliant orange, red and blue beads, that an admirer sent her during her stay in Los Angeles at the Olympic games? And did you know that she thinks her kid brother, Arthur—she calls him "Bubba" one time and Mobey Dick the next—is going to be a great star, an all-around one at that?

Bubba is just 17 now and was the whirlwind in the backfield of his high school team the past year. And if the University of Texas ever plays around here the year after next, that kid Didrikson at quarterback is her brother—don't forget that.

Declares She Was Stale in '32, But Went Ahead and Set Records.

The Babe, who would rather play golf than eat (so she says), spent all of last summer practicing basket ball with her team in an athletic club gym in Dallas, but this year it will be different. After her motion picture contract is over—she will make one in New York, and two on the Coast—she will take the cross the Atlantic to England. Here a fat contract awaits her for a sojourn behind the two-a-day footlights. If she clicks, she says, she's set. If not, "I may be seeing you here next year with my lads."

Was Stale in 1932.

One startling bit of information she made public yesterday. She had gone stale by the time the Olympics came around in 1932. Competing in Chicago in the trials and working her way across the continent by way of the discus, high jump and hurdles—had competely sapped up her championship self and she didn't come through as she had hoped.

Now can you beat that?

And she broke records in the 8-meter hurdles and javelin throw and tok a second in the high jump

Not bad for a young girl, even if she does have two managers—she didn't then.

Southeastern Led By Alabama Five

Kentucky, Idle, Drops Back in Conference Race.

Atlanta, Jan. 21 (AP).—The crimson flag of Alabama was attached to the No. 1 position in the Southeastern Conference basket ball race today.

While Kentucky, last year's champion and tied with Alabama for the lead a week ago, was idle from conference competition, the Crimsons won a skirmish from Tennessee, 44 to 31, and edged out front with five wins to Kentucky's four.

Louisiana State improved its ranking by taking a pair from Tulane, winning the first in a hard fight, 29 to 25, and easily whipping the Greenies in the second, 48 to 26.

Georgia Tech jumped into a tie for third position with Vanderbilt by throwing Sewanee for its sixth straight loss, 40-39.

The standings of the teams:

Boys Club Loses in Final Period to Richmonders, by 33-26 Count.

SHOLL'S CAFE won another and the Boys Club varsity went down to defeat in yesterday's twin basket ball bill at the Washington Boys Club.

Sholl's crushed the Carlisle, Pa., Barracks quintet, 68 to 18, in the curtain-raiser, while the Rotary Boys Club five of Richmond, Va., downed the local Boys Club, 33 to 26.

Strengthened by the addition of Everett Russell, George Washington frosh star, the Boys Club led the Rotary Five at the half, 17-11.

Richmonders Rally to Win.

The visitors, with a tricky blocking and fast-passing attack, made every shot count during the first 10 minutes of the second half. Weis and Sherman, with 11 and 8 points, respectively, led in scoring.

Lucas and Kiesel shot 7 field goals each for Sholl's.

French Race Feature Annexed by Lord Byron

Nice, France, Jan. 21 (AP).—S. J. Unzue's Lord Byron ran away with the Grand Prix de Nice, 4,400-meter racing feature, here today, winning by 15 lengths from Simon Guttman's Saint Briac, with C. Perrin's Dark Martel, third. The winner paid 38 francs 50 centimes for 5.

Londos Works Here After 8 Months

Zaryoff Match to Give Chance to Compare Greek With Browning.

ONE of the moot questions in the minds of rassle addicts throughout the country—and in the cities, too, for that matter—is which of the several title claimants is the best. Washington fans never will know as far as first-hand knowledge is concerned, fo rit is a certainty that bouts of this kind, if they are ever staged, will be held in New York, Chicago or Boston, where larger crowds are assured.

Promoter Joe Turner has done the next best thing, however, in bringing Jim Londos here in the Auditorium rasslefest Thursday night and in matching his against County George Zarynoff, who was the last man Jim Browning, who also calls himself the rassle king, met here.

Three weeks ago, Zarynoff substituted for Ernie Dusek and he gave Browning more than he was looking for. Twice near the end, he had Browning taking counts of five and four, but after 52 mintes of work, Browning finally nipped the Ukrainian with his deadly legscissors.

Londos Long Absent.

Londos, recognized as champion in 9 States to 14 who give the honor to Browning, has not shown here in eight moons. Not being as large and powerful as is Browning, he should find Zarynoff a mighty tough foe. The latter is quite strong, can take plenty of punishment, is as tricky as they come, and is as slippery as an eel. And Capital City cash customers, who have been losing sleep trying to figure out whether Londos or Browning is the better, may be able to get a good line one way or another by comparing Zarynoff's showing against each.

Dick Shikat, a former title claimant, meets George Manich in the semifinal, while other bouts listed call for Ernie Dusek to take on young Vic Christy, Paul Boesch to exchange holds with Barefooted Scotty McDougall and Vanka Zelesniak to try to out-knee the villain, Jim Clinstock.

Lightweights in Spotlight This Week

NEW YORK, Jan. 21 (AP).—The lightweights hold the center of the boxing stage this week to the almost complete exclusion of the various other classes.

There is Barney Ross, of Chicago, the lightweight champion, meeting the Veteran Billy Petrolle from Duluth, at the New York Coliseum, Wednesday, in an overweight match. There is the delayed return bout between Tony Canzoneri, of New York, former lightweight titleholder, and Cleto Locatelli, of Italy, who holds the European championship in the division. This is scheduled for Madison Square Garden, New York, Friday. Finally, there is Frankie Klick, the Californian, who recently won the rather synthetic junior lightweight title by a surprising technical knockout of Kid Chocolate. He meets Frankie Wallace, Cleveland 135 pounder, at Cleveland tomorrow. The Canzoneri-Locatelli bout is 12 rounds. The others 10.

Gives Away Five Pounds.

Ross will have to give away about five pounds to the crafty Petrolle in their nontitle bout and may find the going a bit tough. The odds, as usual, ride with the titleholder. Canzoneri outpointed Locatelli in the Italian's first bout in the United States, but Cleto made it close enough for them to be rematched. Then Tony was injured and Locatelli filled in the date for their fight by taking a decisive but unimpressive decision from Jack (Kid) Berg. Canzoneri hopes to gain a third title bout with Ross, who deprived him of the championship last year, by whipping Locatelli this week.

Bouts on the week's National schedule include:

Monday—At Cleveland, Frankie Klick, San Francisco, vs. Frankie Wallace, Cleveland, lightweights, 10; at Holyoke, Mass., Steve Carr, Meriden, Conn., vs. Joe Kaminski, Nanticoke, Pa., 10; at Quincy, Mass., Tony Shucco, Boston, vs. Al Rodrigues, Quincy, light-heavyweights, 10; at Albany, N. Y., Kid Kaspar, Burlington, Vt., vs. Joe Gochman, New York, middleweights, 8; at Syracuse, N. Y., Harry Fuller, Buffalo, vs. Werner Wilsch, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., middleweights, and Bob Moody, Boston, vs. Pietro Corri, New York, heavyweights, each 8.

Tuesday—At Jacksonville, Fla., Eddie Burl, Alexandria, Va., vs. Ray Schneider, Jacksonville, featherweights, 10; at West Palm Beach, Fla., Eddie Houghton, Philadelphia, vs. Cowboy Frankie Edgren, Cheyenne, Wyo., heavyweights, 10; at Seattle, Wash., Andy Bundy, Portland, Oreg., vs. Clever Sison, Manila, featherweights, 8, and Ford Smith, Kalispell, Mont., vs. Frank Van Hee, Fort Orchard, Wash., heavyweights, 6; at Los Angeles, Baby Arismendi, Mexico, vs. Mark Dias, Manila, featherweights, 10.

Wednesday—At New York (Coliseum), Barney Ross, Chicago, vs. Billy Petrolle, Duluth, Minn., lightweights, 10 (nontitle); at Oakland, Calif., Billy Wallace, Cleveland, vs. Ray Stice, Oakland, lightweights, 10; at Baltimore, Pete Nebo, Key West, Fla., vs. Lou Raymond, Baltimore, lightweights, 10.

Friday—At New York (Madison Square Garden), Tony Canzoneri, New York, vs. Cleto Locatelli, Italy, lightweights, 12; at Philadelphia, Ken Overlin, Norfolk, Va., vs. Johnny Pilo, New York, middleweights, 10; at Milwaukee, Frankie Battaglia, Winnipeg, vs. Sammy Slaughter, Terre Haute, Ind., middleweights, 10, and Talt Littman, Cudahy, Wis., vs. Paul Pironne, Cleveland, light-heavyweights, 8; at Fort Worth, Tex., Tony Herrera, El Paso, vs. Lou Avery, Tulsa, Okla., welterweights, 10.

Junior High Coaches To Form Association

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—A West Virginia Junior High School Coaches' Association is to be organized at the first annual State junior high school basket ball tournament February 23-24 at the Dunbar High School at Dunbar, W. C. Noyes, tournament director, has announced.

Any junior high school athletic coach in the State will be eligible for membership, Noyes said. Officers will be elected at the initial meeting and rules and regulations drawn up.

Wilson's Elks Score.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Getting revenge for a previous defeat in Cumberland, Md., Hack Wilson's Elks Club floor team won a fast game from the K. of P. team of Cumberland here, 34 to 28. Hensell, of the locals, scored 18 points for individual honors.

Pitt Names Hartwig '34 Football Captain

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Charles Hartwig, of Benwood, W. Va., and regular guard of the University of Pittsburgh football team, was appointed captain of the 1934 Pitt football team.

He entered the university in 1930 and became a substitute guard on the freshman team that year. He received an injury in 1931 which kept him out of both football and the classroom. In 1932 he became a regular guard and the past season was rated one of the best linemen in the country, a unanimous choice on the all-opponents teams chosen by the teams which met the Panthers.

Experience Is Hope of Loughran

Challenger Is Not Awed by Superior Weight of Carnera.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 21 (AP).—For Tommy Loughran—a couple of years back they said he was through and now he's fighting for the world's championship—the time-honored phrase about experience being the best teacher will be his motto against Primo Carnera when they clash in Florida next month.

Stretched out on a rubbing table after his daily gym workout, the usually silent Loughran gave some indication of what he expects will be sitting in his corner in the forthcoming battle.

"What I'm counting on," he said in that husky, restrained voice of his, "is the experience I gained in bouts against truly great men of the ring.

Learned From Greb.

"One of them was Harry Greb. He died, you know. I fought him six times and he had everything. Things I learned in my bouts with him are going to help me against Carnera."

Here's another angle Tommy is taking on the fight. One of the big questions the fight faithful are asking each other is what Loughran, at about 187 pounds, will do if the Italian giant starts bringing his enormous weight advantage to bear in close.

"I'll take care of that," was Tommy's prompt statement. "He may have 60 pounds on me, or he may have 70, but I'll venture to say my arms are as strong as his when they are used for that sort of thing."

Has Strong Arms.

Apparently that was no idle boast. For it is recalled that when Jack Dempsey was training at Atlantic City for his first bout with Gene Tunney, Tommy was one of his sparring partners, and the former king of the heavyweights said at that time that Loughran had one of the strongest pair of arms for "roughing it."

"No, I'm not worrying about Carnera mauling me," Tommy went on. "I've been in the ring with men just as tall and as heavy as Primo."

Tommy had planned to leave for the South tomorrow, headed for his training headquarters at West Palm Beach, but he said he may be delayed in starting until Tuesday or Wednesday.

Yale Grad Seen New Grid Coach

New York, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Yale will carry on its home coaching tradition by having an Eli graduate as football head coach in 1934, it was learned semiofficially tonight.

Despite the recent campaign by alumni for an "outside" coach to boost Yale out of the football doldrums, Yale's board of control and Malcolm Farmer, manager of athletics, now are limiting their consideration to four Yale men.

They are not considering outsiders, such as Harry Kipke, of Michigan.

Two of those under consideration are Rego E. Root, the 1933 coach, who has not been reappointed, and T. A. D. Jones, of New Haven, who coached at Yale a number of years ago. Identities of the other two possibilities remained a mystery to Eli Alumni in the New York district.

Announcement of the new coach is not expected to be made for more than a week. It is expected that his complete staff of assistants will be lined up before his appointment is made public.

Edinburg F. F. A. Five Gains District Finals

Edinburg, Va., Jan. 21. (Spl.)—Edinburg High School Future Farmers of America basket ball team, champions of Shenandoah County, defeated the Dayton F.F.A. five, of Rockingham County to win the honor of representing both counties in the district finals at Winchester next Saturday. The Edinburg boys won over Dayton, 34-23.

The Edinburg F.F.A.'s have won seven games and lost one. They defeated Mount Jackson Fire Company, Woodstock town team, Toms Brook F.F.A., Dayton F.F.A. twice and divided a twin-bill with New Market F.F.A.

Shepherdstown Victor.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Shepherdstown High's basket ball combination, showing midseason form, defeated Berkeley Springs High here 19 to 10, breaking a string of six victories for the visitors. The locals took an early lead and were never headed.

OUTSTANDING in yesterday's soccer results is that credited to Mitchell's Store, whose 7-0 defeat of the Senators is truly one of the surprises of the season so far. In extenuation it should be said that the Senators were victims of some bad "breaks," which undoubtedly affected their morale considarably and the score materially.

Midway through the first half, their clever inside left, Emil Koennel, wrenched himself on the heavy ground and had to be assisted off the field. This caused a rearrangement of the entire team, Irving coming to full back and E. Burdette going into goal. And soon after the start of the second half, Graham and F. Wilson were ordered off for disputing a decision made by the referee, and the remaining Senators could not cope with the speedy and confident playing of the home team.

Mitchell's Get Good Start.

The winners began with a great dash and scored two goals within the first ten minutes, both from corner kicks and both headed through by Bailey, but for the remainder of that period the Senators had somewhat more of the play, Ordey having to extend himself on many occasions to prevent a score. At the interval, Mitchell's led, 2-0.

The Senators pressed for a few minutes after the resumption, without beating Ordey, and then Mitchell's men assumed control. Burdette's agility kept them from scoring—his save of a penalty kick being spectacular—but eventually, after Graham and F. Wilson had been banished, Shelton converted a center from Lewis after 20 minutes had gone. From then until the finish, the winners were never threatened and scored four more goals in spite of Burdette's stubborn defense.

R. Mitchell, Stack anad Bailey were always prominent for the winners, while the best of the Senators were Graham, M. Wilson, Avon, L. Koennel and, of course, Goalkeeper Burdette.

British Beat Brandywine.

British United, with their 6-3 win over Brandywin, improved their standing in the league table. They had a 6-goal advantage at the half and coasted through the second period, showing a decided improvement over recent games in their combination and shooting.

The German-Americans disposed of the Hispano-Americans, 5-0, on the Monument field, in a game that was well played on the part of both teams. It was, in fact, the best game that the losers have yet shown.

Contrary to expectation in Montgomery County, Marlboro experienced no great difficulty in overcoming Rockville, the final count being 3 to 0. This evened the series between these old rivals, Rockville having won the first game, also by a 3-goal margin.

In the junior organization, only one game was played, that being won by Rosedale, which finished on the long end of a 3-2 score. Their foes, the Dux A. C., were not much in the picture in the opening half, but came back strongly in the second period and were pressing hard when the game ended.

Reds May Sign Shotton As Coach, Is Reported

Philadelphia, Jan. 21. (AP)—Reports have been revived in local baseball circles that Burt Shotton, former manager of the Phillies, would be taken on by the Cincinnati Reds.

One report said Shotton, recently succeeded by Catcher Jimmy Wilson as Phils pilot, has been offered a job as coach with the Reds and that announcement of the appointment may be made in a few days.

Shotton had two years of his contract yet to run when he was ousted as Phils' manager, and the local club is expected to pay him the difference between the salary on his contract and that he will get in a new job.

Covelli Named to Take DeGrasse's Place Against Sarron at Portner's Tomorrow

Young Boxer Primes for Miller

May Meet Harder Foe in Birmingham Battle Than He Expects.

Approval or Rejection of Erwin Expected Sometime Today.

FRANKIE (KID) COVELLI, of New York, has been designated to receive by proxy the whoopla punches of Pete Sarron, originally intended for Pete De Grasse at Portner's tomorrow night. De Grasse withdrew from his ten-rounder with Sarron Saturday without explanation or apology.

Approval of Covelli as an opponent has not been obtained from Sarron's manager, Jimmy Erwin, who has been absent from the city for several days. Efforts to communicate with Erwin proving unavailing, there is nothing for the Portner's promoters to do but wait until he returns to town to see whether he will allow his charge to fight Covelli.

Runner-Up Amateur.

Covelli is just 20. He first sprung into more or less National prominence in 1931 in the eMtropolitan Area amateur championship, in which he was runner-up.

Since 1931 he has trounced Varias Milling, Al Roth, Pete Hayes, Sidney Lampe and foungt a sizzling draw with Lou Feldman, who is rated No. 2 among the featherweights.

Covelli is boxing N. B. A. featherweight champion Freddie Miller at Madison Square Garden in two weeks and has, it is believed, accepted the bout with Sarron for a "warm-up." Instead of being "warmed-up" to rthe Miller match, he may be "burnt up," if Sarron lives up to his usual form in upsetting outstanding fighters.

It will be recalled that Miller himself accepted a match with Sarron quite confident that he was meeting just another "home-town clown." Before the final round against the Syrian sizzler, the N. B. A. champ had been forced to extend himself to the limit—and at that he barely nosed out the opposition.

Training Faithfully.

Sarron is training faithfully for the coming encounter, which, if accepted and won, he believes, may swing wide the doors of Madison Square Garden to him. Should he best Covelli decisively, there would seem little left for the Garden to do but give him the chance against Miller instead of Covelli.

Definite approval or rejection of the contest by Erwin is expected on his return to Washington some time this afternoon or evening. In the event Erwin refuses to allow Sarron to fight Covelli, the entire card for htis week probably will be canceled.

Two sixes and two fours will round out the program.

Water Polo Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the District Water Polo Association at the Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock tonight to arrange final details of the water polo schedule for this winter. Any interested parties are invited to attend.

Philip d'Aubigny, a thirteenth century Christian Crusader, died while in the Holy Land and was buried beneath a stone in front of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. The stone, which was set flush with the paving as shown in the above drawing, has served as a paving block since then, and thousands of persons—tourists, pilgrims, soldiers—have walked, many of them unknowingly, across the Crusader's tombstone.

One of the greatest medical fees ever paid was paid for one of the simpler services of the physician. Catherine of Russia paid $50,000 as the medical fee to a physician who inoculated herself and her son against smallpox. In addition to the fabulous fee, the physician received $10,000 as traveling expenses and a pension of $2,500 for the rest of his life.

There are nine different classes of crime which are punishable by death in the United States. Among them are treason, murder, arson, piracy, robbery of the mail and kidnaping. England, on the other hand, punishes only murder and high treason by death.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Tropical Park Race Track, Jan. 21,

We are going to have a 2-year-old named Syzygy, providing the monicker meets with the approval of Register F. J. Klees, of the Jockey Club. Syzygy means absolutely nothing to me, but I'm told that it's a good English word and appears in the unabridged dictionaries. You can use your own pronounciation. Which reminds of other sticklers in race horse names. There was Houyhnhnm, a steeplechaser, which tied the tongues in Maryland; Huitzilopochti, named after an Aztec god, which was several times a winner in the old days. Some day I shall go deeper into the subject of naming race horses. But not tonight, Josephine. Yes, I had one winner today. BILL.

First Race—Jim Crawford appears ready to keep up the string of short-priced horses that have won on the opening race. His recent winning effort was a sizzler. Bank Holiday and Black Birder to complete the money picture.

Second Race—Everfair turned in a fine race for us last week. We can hardly expect the same odds tomorrow. However, this one is as keen as that exhibition and should get home in front. Kibitzer is not consistent but is dangerous among these. Canon Law for the show.

Third Race — Haggerson has slowed up in the closing stages of two races. Might improve enough to hang on tomorrow and take the main end of the purse. Happy Anne disappointed us last out but is the one to beat. Hasty Belle for what's left.

Fourth Race— Let's try to make Don Guzman win at short odds. He seems to have an ideal spot here and his recent victory points to top condition. Representative won his last but moves up several notches. Scream likes the mile and could be the upsetter.

Fifth Race—Black Harmony gets the Bennings call in this. Drops weight and will have Bobby Jones to ride. Sainted and Croon are both speedy and will have something to say about the money distribution.

Sixth Race—Volta Maid finds a race to her liking here. Gets in with only 102 pounds and Hunter will ride. Waterway is sharp and ready to run, I'm told. Should take the place award from Major General.

Seventh Race—I'm going to take a shot at Darkling. This one is at tops now. Gets a route he favors and will be a good price. Fort Dearborn and Bub McFarland for the other places.

Eighth Race—Lucky Jack has been running well of late and, providing this race is used, will get a crack at the main end of the pay off Grannys Trade and Lauretta Nash for the rest.

Court Officials Meet

The approved basket ball officials of the District will meet tonight at 7 o'clock, at the office of C. A. Metzler, 1106 Vermont avenue.

Virginia's Nine Opens Season March 28

21 Games Are Scheduled; Drissell, D. C. Boy, Is Co-Captain.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Twenty-one games have been listed for Virginia's baseball nine this spring, according to Thomas M. Carruthers, assistant athletic director.

The season will open on March 28, when the University Club, of Trenton, N. J., comes to Lambeth Field, and will conclude on May 9 and 10 with a two-game series against West Virginia. Eleven games are to be played within the Southern Conference.

The Cavaliers will take three trips during the spring, including one northward to play Princeton, Drexel, Maryland and the Navy, and one through North Carolina that will include games against the University nine in Chapel Hill and in Greensboro.

Two Captains Again.

The Virginia team will have two captains again this year. They are Homer Drissell, of Washington, D. C., outfielder, and Preston Luck, of Middleburg, Va., pitcher. Gus Tebell will coach the squad for his fourth season. The complete tentative schedule:

March 28, University Club, of Trenton, N. J., at home; 30, Drexel, at home.
April 3, Vermont, at home; 5, William and Mary, at home; 7, Maryland, at home; 10, North Carolina, at home; 12, Princeton, at Princeton; 13, Drexel, in Philadelphia; 14, Navy, in Annapolis; 15, Maryland, in College Park; 18, Virginia Military Institute, at home; 21, William and Mary, in Williamsburg; 23, Virginia Military Institute, in Lexington; 24, Washington and Lee, in Lexington; 27, Washington and Lee, at home; 30, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, at home.
May 2, North Carolina State, in Raleigh; 4, North Carolina, in Chapel Hill; 5, North Carolina, in Greensboro; 9, West Virginia, at home; 10, West Virginia, at home.

8 Games Booked For County Fives

Series Contests Feature in Montgomery County.

Montgomery County tossers are booked for eight games this week, contests scheduled on every day but Monday and Wednesday, with the climax on Friday, when three league games and an outside battle are on tap. Silver Spring, Bethesda, Rockville and Gaithersburg have two games each, with the other schools having a lone encounter.

On Tuesday Gaithersburg entertains Mount Rainier to open the week's play, with Laurel and Rockville mixing on Thursday. Bethesda battles the strong Georgetown Prep quintet at Leland and Maryland School for the Deaf on Friday. Friday's series games see Silver Spring traveling to Rockville, seeking second place in the standings; Damascus and Gaithersburg clashing in the latter's stronghold, both with one defeat and out for blood, and Sherwood visiting the weak Poolesville team.

The Mount St. Joe's dribblers will invade Silver Spring for a return contest Saturday night.

Alumni Scholarship Awards to 78 at Yale

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 21 (AP). The award of alumni scholarships totaling $32,866 to 78 students, among them several prominent athletes, was announced tonight by Yale University.

Earl H. Nikkel, of oJes, Colo., football star and captain of the basket ball, and Karl D. Warner, of Woodbury, Conn., captain of the track team and Olympic runner, were among the athletes honored. Other athletes in the list included David L. Livingston, of Honolulu, Hawaii, swimming ace; Stewart N. Loud, of Royal Oak, Mich., diver; Fitzhugh Quarrier, of Short Hills, N. J., a crew man; B. Courtney Rankin, of Lowell, Mass.; Walter A. Marting, of Marion, Ohio, and Mather K. Whitehead, of Westfield, N. J., football men.

The scholarships range in value from $100 to $1,000, the average approximating $425, and are maintained by most of the Yale Alumni Associations in the United States.

Martinsburg Fives Win.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—The local high school boys and girls floor teams made a clean sweep against teams of Paw Paw High School at Paw Paw, the girls taking the opener, 49 to 11, and the boys the second, 28 to 10.

Maryland Five Unbeaten In Southern Conference

Noses Out V. P. I. for Third Victory; South Carolina Beats Clemson in Season's Debut and Looms as Title Threat.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—While North Carolina, Maryland and Duke fattened their totals in the victory column, South Carolina's favored Gamecocks made an impressive debut in the Southern Conference basket ball race last week.

The Gamecocks, late in starting the season and slow in showing their wares against Clemson's Tigers in the opener Friday, found their stride in the second half to outpoint the Bengals, 41 to 15.

North Carolina's White Phantoms, another of the Tarheels' traditionally fine basket ball teams, flitted through Virginia and V. M. I. teams for impressive victories and first place in the league standing with six consecutive triumphs.

Maryland Keeps Slate Clean.

Meanwhile, Maryland, three times victor by slender margins and Duke's only conqueror within the loop, again found trouble in whipping the much mistreated Virginia Tech quintet, which went down battling last night, 34 to 32. It was Chase's field goal—just a moment before the timekeeper's gun—that broke the deadlock and enabled the Old Liners to hold their perfect record.

South Carolina's triumph over Clemson stamped the Gamecocks as the team to lick for the conference title. Although they had been expected to subdue the Bengals, it was the ease with which the task was accomplished that showed the power of "Rock" Norman's six-footers.

Clemson, tripped previously by Carolina, Carolina State and Duke, played stubbornly at the outset, holding the defending champions scoreless for the first five minutes. Then after Dana Henderson, rangy center, broke the ice the Gamecocks, gaining momentum slowly, led 14 to 6 at the intermission and came back after the rest period to pile up an overwhelming margin. Henderson scored 15 points to match the combined efforts of the opposition.

Three Victories for Duke.

Duke's Blue Devils, still irked about that unexpected upset by Maryland, advanced to within striking distance of the leaders by giving North Carolina State its first loop defeat and then whipping Virginia Military and Virginia decisively. The Cavaliers in a close guarding game last night tied the score at 14-all soon after the intermission but the Devils, with the injured Jim Thompson injected into the lineup to steady them, forged ahead to win handily.

Examinations breaking into the basketball season will hold the loop card to five games this week but two of the leaders face tough tests. Carolina may have to play its best basket ball to whip North Carolina State at Raaleigh Wednesday while Virginl's Cavaliers, still looking for a victory, are conceded a chance to upset the Old Liners at Charlottesville Friday.

Other games on the program will pit the Cavaliers against N. C. State at Raleigh tomorrow night and Virginia Tech against North Carolina at Chapel Hill Friday and N. C. State at Raleigh Saturday.

Richmond Five Leads State In Wins

Two Other Quintets Also Unbeaten by Virginia Opposition.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—The University of Virginia's fast-stepping Spiders today boasted the only unbeaten basket ball team among Virginia's dozen contenders, but there were two other combinations still unwhipped by State opposition.

Emory and Henry fell from the unconquered list last night after a brilliant stand against a University of Tennessee quintet that triumphed, 32 to 31. McPherson's field goal in the closing seconds of play turned the trick after a nip and tuck game that saw the lead change frequently.

Tennessee, although good enough to stop the Wasps, couldn't hold Emory and Henry's great Glen Roberts in check. The lanky center, although closely guarded tossed in six field goals and then made good eight foul shots for an evening's total of 20 points.

Richmond Winner.

Meanwhile, the University of Richmond Spiders trimmed Virginia Military's Cadets, 32 to 20., Richmond, however, found the going tough in the first half and held only a 13 to 12 margin at the intermission. With Elmore and Leverton setting the pace, the Spiders piled up a comfortable margin in the closing period. Coach Pitt, substituting frequently, sent 11 Spiders into the game.

Neither the Wasps nor Washington and Lee's Generals, deadlocked with the Spiders in the State race, played any Old Dominion teams last week and neither has any part in a lean basket ball crd coming up for the current week.

Lynchburg's Hornets remained fast on the trail of the leaders in the State race, defeating Hampden-Sydney, 33 to 23, last night to chalk up their fourth victory against one defeat.

Beaten in Seven Games.

Virginia's "Big Four" representatives who went avisiting last week found the going exceedingly rough with the Old Dominion quintets defeated in seven attempts. Virginia's Cavaliers dropped decisions to North Carolina and Duke, and Virginia Tech dropped three in a row to Catholic University, Georgetown and Maryland.

Virginia Military, although victor over Virginia, its ancient rival, 35 to 33, n one of the season's big upsets, suffered overwhelming defeats at the hands of North Carolina and Duke. The Cadets' triumph over Virginia, one of the courageous exhibitions of the year, came after the Military lads had trailed 2 7to 9 at the half.

The standings of Virginia teams follows:

Alex. High Five Plays Twice This Week

Return to Eligibility of Birrell Adds Strength to the Twins.

ALEANDRIA, Va., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—Benny Birrell, star center of the Alexandria High School basket ball team, has made up his scholastic deficiencies and will appear in the Twins' lineup this week. Birrell, who is a tall lad, will greatly aid the local scholastics in their home-stretch drive. The present team is small and some height added to the squad will come in mighty handy.

Coach Given's cagers will visit Herndon Tuesday, and the Roosevelt five here Friday. Victories in these engagements would help make the Twins' win column more presentable.

Lee-Jackson Five Busy.

The Little Generals of Lee-Jackson will face real opposition this week, meeting the Washington-Lee High School quintet on Tuesday and the Oakton High team Friday night. Tuesday's game will be played in the afternoon on the Ballston court. Coach Jack Watt's Lee-Jackson basketers will be out to avenge a defeat dealt them by the aggregation from Arlington County earlier in the season.

Oakton High School will invade the Duke street stronghold Friday night, encountering the Little Generals in a Fairfax County championship tilt. Lee-Jackson is the present champion and is leading for 1934 honors.

The sextets of the two schools will meet in the preliminary.

New Dartmouth Coach And Aids Visit Hanover

Hanover, N. H., Jan. 21 (AP).—Dartmouth's new football coaches slipped into Hanover today without fanfare and tonight were in seclusion at the home of President Ernest Hopkins.

Head Coach Earl "Red" Blaik, and his assistants, Harry O. Ellinger and Andrew J. Gustafson, left the train at Lebanon, 7 miles from here, and were driven to the Hopkins home.

The new mentors met a group of faculty and undergraduate members of the Athletic council, college administration leaders and Phil Glazer and Jack Hill, retiring and new football captains, but the under graduates of the college have yet to glimpse the men hired to revive Dartmouth football.

Stocks Renew Strong Upturn During Week

Trading Is Most Active Since July; Advances Set Record.

New York, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—The stock market turned active and strong this week. Trading was the most active since late July, while prices advanced to the highest levels since September 19.

Railroad shares made the best showing, although all groups participated in the rise with the exception of the wet stocks, and they rallied slightly late in the week.

Sugars and other issues with a Cuban angle rose sharply as indications pointed to early United States recognition of the new Cuban regime. Rubbers were given a whirl; motors regained popularity; utilities had a fairly good week; oils picked up; chemicals, steels, aviation issues were in demand, and miscellaneous issues were higher.

Gains Range to Ten Points.

Gains for the week ranged to more than 10 points in the active list and considerably more in the inactive issues. Volume was so heavy that tickers lagged behind in several sessions.

Impetus for the rise was furnished by President Roosevelt's monetary message to Congress.

Wall street interpreted the message as clarification to some degree of the monetary tangle. The President said the present would not be the right time for revaluation and therein agreed with many monetary experts.

Business Indices Gain.

Meanwhile business indices made further gains in many sections. The car loadings report was not so good as the previous week, but it made a fairly good showing with the corresponding week of 1933.

Electricity output was sharply higher and it made the best percentage gain over a year ago of any week since that ended September 30. Bank clearings were down slightly. Steel production and automobile production made gains.

Volume of stock trading crossed the 3,000,000 share mark in several sessions. There was considerable outside buying and some demand from foreign sources. The bond market was very active and its strength in turn reacted favorably on the stock list. Then, too, it was making way for issuance of the huge Government financing which soon will be announced.

Steel Takes Lead.

Steel shares assumed leadership of the market for a time, with United States Steel crossing 35. Then a long list of groups were pushed ahead one by one. Finally, on Friday the whole list resumed its rise on a large scale. Pressure lifted from all sections and a better tone was noted throughout the market.

Traders were still doubtful if the market had gained sufficient ground to warrant further advance without running into profit-taking. However, the future outlook for business gains through Government spending on a large scale left the impression the market would continue to move higher unless hampered by legislation now contemplated by some Congressmen.

Soviet Envoy Talks To Nation on Radio

Troyanovsky Asks More U. S. Collaboration.

Hope for a continuance of the "valuable collaboration" of the United States in the industrial development of Soviet Russia was expressed by Ambassador Alexander Troyanovsky in a Nation-wide radio address last night.

"The people of Soviet Russia are deeply interested in the United States," he said. "They admire particularly American achievement in science and engineering skill. We have been fortunate in that a number of your technical men have brought their skill to us, to assist in our development. We expect this valuable collaboration to be continued."

He declared the maintenance of peace is the most important task before the world today.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Success of President's Order Rests Upon What the Federal Trade Commission Decides Is "Fair Competition" Under a Recovery Program.

By Ralph West Robey.

President Roosevelt's move in the direction of preventing monopolistic practices under the NRA should help considerably to clarify the atmosphere. The specific cause of the action, presumably, is the desire to protect small business organizations. As such it is an answer to the recent charges of Senators Borah, Nye and Glass that NRA codes were driving small firms out of business. Whether this current move will be an adequate answer is a different matter. The order itself is not an assurance that it will be.

In other words all that has been done is to make the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice available for the adjudication of complaints involving monopolistic practices under NRA codes. Heretofore such decisions have been left to the National Recovery Administration, and granting this organization held that the practice complained of was permitted under the code, there appeared to be nothing that a small organization could do to protect itself. In a sense, therefore, the National Recovery Administration, wittingly or not, effectively has provided a means for getting around the antitrust laws.

Possibilities May Not Have Been Visualized.

Whether this result was visualized by those who drafted the National industrial recovery act last April and May, and whether it has been the intention of those in charge of the codes, are open questions. Certainly the act itself does not suspend the antitrust laws. Quite the contrary, it upholds their principles and the NRA is charged with the responsibility of preventing monopolistic practices.

At the same time it should be remembered that when the NIRA was being considered by Congress it generally was interpreted by business leaders as giving them greater freedom to restrain competition. In large measure, and this was clearly recognized at the time, this was the basis upon which they supported the act. Without such a possibility they would have opposed the bill with vigor, for it was quite obvious that it would result in heavy burdens being placed upon them in the way of shorter hours and increased wages.

When it came to the question of drawing up codes, accordingly, representatives of business acted upon the basis of this understanding and interpretation. Some of the first codes submitted were almost fantastic in this regard. In these cases it appeared that those who had drafted the code were working upon the hypothesis that they had an open field and now could combine for production control, price fixing and marketing, to any degree they liked.

Vigorous Fight Made Against This Attitude.

Fortunately such an attitude was fought with vigor. Most important in this opposition was labor, for labor thought that the NIRA was its field day, rather than the field day of industry. The consumers' council also was presumed to be in the fight, but from the start it appears to have been treated somewhat like the proverbial stepchild. Final decisions always seem to have grown out of compromises between the demands of industry, on the one side, and labor on the other side.

The net result has been that in many instances an industry, in return for assuring shorter hours and higher wages for labor, has been given authority to follow practices of production control, price fixing and marketing agreements that are directly contrary to the antitrust laws. Necessarily, and this must have been foreseen by the large industrial units, much of this has worked against the interest of the small firms involved. In consequence we have been brought face to face with the question of whether we are to let the small units be driven to the wall because of these practices, or whether it is possible to get the advantage of cooperation and at the same time have fair play.

President Roosevelt, in his current order, indictes that he thinks cooperation with fair play is possible. Senator Nye is not so sure. The answer, it seems to me, will depend upon, first, the promptness with which complaints are passed on by the NRA to the Federal Trade Commission, and secondly, upon the attitude of this commission on what constitutes "fair competition" under an emergency recovery program.

Cotton Buying Forces Prices To High Level

Week's Trading Is Marked by Lighter Selling in Southern Area.

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—The favorable reactions of practically all markets to the President's monetary message and the advance in the domestic gold price, was reflected by active general buying in cotton at the beginning of the week.

May contracts which had closed at 11.15 on the previous Saturday, were rushed up to 11.65 before the close of Monday, or the highest price touched since last summer and about 2½ cents per pound above the low record of the season. Heavy general realizing was encountered at this figure, with the desire to take profits increased by later rallies in the dollar.

Very little Southern selling developed, but there was sufficient pressure to send May off to 11.18 during Thursday's trading or about 47 points off from the best. Indications for an improving technical position then made their appearance and the market showed a steadier tone today on trade buying and covering or replacing by recent sellers. May rallied to 11.50 and closed at 11.45 tonight compared with 10.95 at the close of the previous Friday.

With December contracts up to or above 12 cents, the opinion was expressed in some quarters that cotton under existing trade conditions might have discounted a "sixty-cent dollar." The demand from both domestic and foreign trade sources which had been extremely active during the beginning of the week, also appeared to be tapering off, and reactionary sentiment which developed was encouraged by the action of foreign exchange rates and reactions in the stock and grain markets.

Californians Here Form New Society

Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations, was elected president of the California State Society when the society was organized anew at the Raleigh Hotel Saturday night.

Four State representatives were named vice presidents. They are Frank H. Buck, John J. McGrath, William E. Evans and George Burnham. Other officers are: Vice presidents, Walter C. Burke and Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Gertrude Scott; historian, Dr. Anna D. Peck. Three elected members on the board of governors are Representative Harry L. Englebright, Walter Measday, Maj. Edw. E. Odom.

Maj. Horace T. Jones was appointed chairman of the finance committee; Howard Crandall, chairman of the constitution committee, and Mrs. W. C. Burke, membership chairman.

Brazil Restores Equilibrium Of Nation's Coffee Production

Growers Receive $200,000,000 in Three Years and 26,000,000 Sacks Are Destroyed as Government Accomplishes Curbing of Crop.

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 21 (AP).—After three years of battling against drowning in a sea of coffee berries, Brazil has "restored statistical equilibrium," for its principal product, the Federal Coffee Control Department has announced tersely.

Behind the declaration is an epic three-year fight, toughest of the country's long struggle with overproduction, in which more than $200,000,000 were paid out to buy up coffee, and in which more than 26,000,000 sacks—132 pounds each—were destroyed by burning and dumping into the sea.

The destruction was more or less the total production of Brazilian competitors for those years.

Good Export Year.

The coffee department's statement came at the end of a good export year and the fastest 12 months of coffee destruction since Brazil started the program in 1931.

Said the statement:

"Statistical equilibrium has been restored, at least during two years, owing to the withdrawal of all non-exportable surplus of the Brazilian production. Now, in the coming restful 24 months, may the national coffee department draw its attention to the problem of conquering and enlarging markets, so that the possibly large crop of 1935-36 will meet with better and greater export possibilities."

The reference to an expected restful 24 months is due to the fact that the 1933-34 crop, a bumper one of almost 30,000,000 sacks, is well in hand, and the new crop coming up in July is expected to be moderate. Brazilian coffee generally alternates fat years and moderate years, hence the new crop, if normal, should be around exportable proportions. The next bumper crop, in the normal cycle, will come up in July, 1935.

15,000,000 Sacks Exported.

Brazilian coffee exports in 1933 topped 15,000,000 sacks, slightly surpassing the previous best year of the past decade with the exception of 1931, when the coffee-wheat swap with the United States Farm Board, subnormal production by competing countries, and exceptional weakness of the Milreis, pushed exports to 17,850,000 sacks.

During the past year Brazil destroyed almost 14,000,000 sacks of surplus coffee.

Destruction and exports meant about 29,000,000 sacks out of the way.

Brazil started its heaviest fight on its surplus problem in February, 1931, after expensive valorization schemes and increasingly large surpluses. At that time the stock on hand was 30,000,000 sacks, with a 27,000,000-sack crop coming up in July. The government bought up retained stocks.

Coffee Council Formed.

Early in 1931 a cooperative coffee council was formed and started on the surplus in June, 1931, by burning and dumping it into the sea. The coffee council got rid of an average of 23,000 sacks daily, but after it was decreed out of existence in February, 1933, the new coffee department pushed elimination to about 39,000 sacks daily.

In the meantime, official agencies have been buying up the farmer's coffee steadily, having, to mid-December, purchased 49,500,000 sacks since February, 1931, for more than $200,000,000.

Last September 30, the latest audit said, coffee stocks under control of the Federal Department amounted to onlly 17,800,000 sacks, a moderate figure compared with some of the past years.

Brazil, which produces about 75 per cent of the world's coffee in bumper crop years, and as low as 50 per cent in moderate crop years, strikes an average of about two-thirds of the world's supply.

Green Old Age.

In ancient times, in days of yore, men lived five hundred years or more, according to the sacred scribes who wrote the annals of the tribes. They went their way and didn't heed the drastic rules we moderns read, and worry over night and day, to keep some fell disease away. They violated every law that Sanitation ever saw, and kept on living right along as though their conduct wasn't wrong. There were no modern bathtubs then, and weary and perspiring men would journey to some horse pond near, and wash themselves, say once a year. No diet sharps were then about, to scold a man for eating kraut; men ate whatever they desired, such things as could be bought or hired, and doubtless, at that distant date, full many a man was overweight, and every time he ate he felt he'd need elastic in his belt. His waistline was a foot too wide, and still he lived until he died. If there were dentists in those times, they don't survive in prose or rhymes; men wore the teeth that nature gave until they teetered to the grave. Now we must have our teeth drawn out, if we have chilblains, flu or gout; the wise old patriarchs declined to have their jawbones undermined, and still they lived to beat the band, with broken rules on every hand.

Senate Group Set to Limit Life of Gold Revaluation

Coalition Will Seek to Classify Measure as an Emergency.

Young Sees Threat To Federal Reserve

Uncontrolled Inflation Is Discounted by Yale Professor.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Substantial revision of President Roosevelt's gold revaluation bill will be urged, with good prospect of immediate success, when the Senate Banking and Currency Committee meets at 10:30 a. m. today in executive session to consider the measure on which it has held hearings for a week.

The first effort of a strong coalition of Democrats and Republicans on the committee will be to amend the bill to make it an emergency measure, with its provisions expiring on proclamation of the President, or otherwise, when the depression is terminated. Such a change would satisfy many of the objections now made to the measure.

This coalition also will press to alter the bill so as to take out of the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury sole jurisdiction over the proposed $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund. It is probable that control over the operation of this fund will be placed in the hands of a committee, including the Secretary of the Treasury, a representative of the Federal Reserve system and a third officer of the Government.

The Probable Line-Up.

It has been difficult to pin down committee members on their attitude toward the bill, but the best available information is that at least six Republicans and four—possibly six—Democrats favor revising the Administration bill in one or more particulars. There are 12 Democrats and 8 Republicans on the committee.

Although it appears the move to revise the bill will be successful in committee, it will meet defeat in the Senate unless President Roosevelt accedes to the alterations. The voting in the committee will be close, but in the Senate the odds in favor of giving the President whatever he wants will be overwhelming, it is believed.

In any event, it now appears that consideration of the bill in the Senate will not be the perfunctory matter it was in the House on Saturday. The Senate, which may not get the bill until the end of this week, may debate it for several days, with the Administration leaders in the position of urging rejection of one of their committee's reports.

Another fight seemed to be brewing when Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, announced he would offer his 16-to-1 silver remonetization bill as an amendment to the gold revaluation measure. He made this announcement after

Spain Releases 4 Americans

Bowers Asks Pardon for Quartet Accused of Beating Guard.

Palma, Mallorca, Jan. 22 (AP).—Four Americans sentenced to six months and a day imprisonment for attacking a civil guard were released from custody today by order of the Spanish government.

The Americans—Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Lockwood, West Springfield, Mass.; Roger F. Mead, of New York, and Edmund A. Blodgett, of Stamford, Conn.—were taken into custody yesterday following a decision of the supreme court at Madrid, which found them guilty of the assault charge of which a military tribunal previously had acquitted them.

Madrid, Jan. 22 (AP).—Ambassador Claude G. Bowers, of the United States, asked the Spanish government today to pardon four Americans held in jail in Palma, Mallorca, because they "insulted" a civil guard.

Norfolk Woman Injured in Mexico

Shrine Chief's Wife Suffers Broken Ankle.

Houston, Tex., Jan. 22 (AP).—Mrs. John N. Sebrell, of Norfolk, Va., wife of the imperial potentate of the Shrine of North America, was in a Houston hospital today with a broken ankle.

On a train about 50 miles out of Mexico City, en route to Houston, Mrs. Sebrell made a misstep and was injured.

Dr. Mundy, American physician at Mexico City, took an airplane, caught the train and accompanied Mrs. Sebrell to Houston.

U. S. Launches Ten-Billion Bond Drive

First Issue Due in Day or Two; Reserve's Aid Pledged.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

President Roosevelt last night called in Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., Gov. Eugene Black of the Federal Reserve Board and other fiscal advisers to launch the first financing operation of the New Deal's unprecedented money program.

With the full backing power of the Reserve System, pledged anew at the conference of district governors, the first issue of the "recovery loans" upon which the President is depending for $10,000,000,000 by June 30 is expected to be announced in a day or two.

Both Mr. Morgenthau and the Federal Reserve governor made reassuring statements during the day, evidencing the feeling of officials they will not encounter serious trouble in marketing the offers, which the Administration is planning along orthodox lines.

Morgenthau "Very Comfortable."

The Treasury Secretary described himself as "very comfortable" over prospects, while Gov. Black issued a brief statement to the effect that the reserve governors, after considering the President's program, gave "assurance of full cooperation" at a meeting last Saturday.

Beyond that, officials remained as tight-lipped as ever over actual details of the program. It was generally understood, however, that the Treasury would depend in large measure upon relatively short-term issues, with the Federal Reserve Banks standing by to lend support in any sag in the market.

Cheerful as they were as to ultimate success, the President's monetary advisers recognized the immediate need for more cash, daily impressed upon them more forcibly by the billion-a-month drain on the Treasury. Yesterday's report, listing figures for Saturday, showed its balance had dropped to $566,303,233.

Issue Likely to Exceed Billion.

Hence, officials planned to go ahead with the first issue irrespective of delay in the President's gold bill, which, among other things, was drawn to enlarge the Treasury's ability to borrow. The supposition was the first flotation would be from

Cigarette Blamed In Fire Fatal to 3

Two Sisters, Infant Perish in Huntington, W. Va.

Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Authorities today blamed a cigarette, dropped on a couch by a party guest, for a fire which swept the house of Donald Ritter here, causing three deaths.

Mrs. Ritter, her daughter, Jeanne, 10 months old, and her sister, Mrs. Gwendolyn Keifer, 24, were smothered by fumes and smoke. All were sleeping Sunday when the fire crept through the house.

Ritter was at the home of a friend.

U. S. Is Ready To Recognize Mendieta Rule

Formal Avowal Today; Latin Nations May Join in Move.

Recognition of Cuba became a certainty yesterday when President Roosevelt advised the diplomatic representatives of 18 Latin-American nations this Government is prepared to act immediately.

Although the new Mendieta government has been in power only five days in Havana, reports indicate such wide support that officials believe no further hesitation is necessary. With the army, navy and all political factions except the extreme left-wingers behind Carlos Mendieta, establishment of law and order is considered assured.

Forecast as imminent the day Mendieta was sworn in, recognition will formally take place today or tomorrow. The delay, if any, will be to permit representatives of other American governments to advise their home offices of this country's intentions in case they desire to act simultaneously.

Consults Other Nations.

Although not intending to be bound by the actions of other governments in this hemisphere, President Roosevelt wished to consult with them before taking the step. He consulted them last summer before breaking off relations, and is understood to feel his "neighborly" policy calls for a similar gesture now.

Revision and possible abrogation of the Platt amendment, the permanent treaty which governs Cuban-American relations and permits intervention under certain circumstances, is likely in the near future. Senator King (Democrat), Utah, introduced a resolution before the Foreign Relations Committee yesterday to this end.

New Deal in Sugar.

A new deal in sugar is also on the books, it being recognized here that the strongest Cuban government can not last without an opportunity to effect economic improvement. Either a downward revision of the 2-cent per pound tariff to approximately 1½ cents, or a quota of some 1,700,000 tons on a preferential basis, is likely.

Mexico, Ecuador and Colombia have already recognized the Mendieta government, and Chile is understood to be taking the step immediately. Mexico operates on recognition matters under the so-called Estrada doctrine which calls for relations with any government and no questions asked as to responsibility, stability or method of gaining power.

U. S. Presses For German Bond Reply

President Calls Luther to White House on Interest Cut.

Trade Warning Hinted After Berlin Ignores Two Notes.

By Kendall Foss.

President Roosevelt summoned the German Ambassador, Dr. Hans Luther, to the White House yesterday in an effort to get an answer to official quertions asked three weeks ago about interest payments to American holders of German bonds.

Two notes were dispatched to Berlin by the State Department, one on January 2, the other on January 19. The notes were termed "representations"—one degree milder than a protest. Neither has been answered.

Exception was taken in the two communications to German plans to reduce interest payments from 75 per cent to 65 per cent of the amounts due for the half year ending next June 18. Attention also was called to the fact that Dutch and Swiss holders of such bonds are being paid in full. This is held to be discriminatory.

Ambassador Luther, emerging from his session with the President, said they had talked about all kinds of things in the broadest possible way.

Nazi Talk Avoided.

Asked if this included Nazi activities, Dr. Luther hastened to add: "No, no. Economic problems exclusively."

Later, Stephen T. Early, the President's secretary, announced:

"President Roosevelt talked with the German Ambassador about payments due Americans by German states, municipalities and corporations, which payments now pass by decree to the German treasury. The President asked definitely that American creditors be given the same treatment as the creditors of other nations. In addition, the President told the ambassador of his desire that commercial relations be stimulated between the United States and Germany."

Undersecretary of State Phillips, who sent the two notes to Berlin, was present at the meeting. Apparently it was made quite clear to the German Ambassador that this Government does not intend to let things ride.

Bond Repurchase Coup Reported.

Particularly displeasing to Administration circles is the fact that some of Germany's limited supply of foreign exchange is being used, it is said, to repurchase bonds on the American market. These bonds are seriously depressed in value, largely, it is felt, because of the refusal to pay interest in full.

It is believed some $250,000,000 worth of various issues have been repurchased—for approximately $60,000,000. This sum more than covers interest requirements. Hence the inability to understand why Germany is unable to pay a single cent of interest more than she is offering.

A creditors' meeting with the Reichsbank in Berlin is scheduled

Fugitive Slain, Trio Captured

Two of Seven Who Broke Kansas Penitentiary Still at Large.

Paola, Kans., Jan. 22 (AP).—A posse today shot and killed a convict, tentatively identified as Bob (Big Boy) Brady, a life termer, and captured three others of the seven who escaped over the walls of the Kansas Penitentiary Friday.

Sheriff Joe Achey of Miami County said the three identified their slain confederate as Brady. The three were believed to be Fred Cody, 33, bank robber; Tommie McMahan, 20, robber, and Benjamin Young, 19, motor car thief.

A fifth, Charles Clifton McArthur, 29, was arrested in Kansas City yesterday.

The two at large are believed to be Jim Clark, reputed coleader with Brady in the break, and Frank Delmar, 30, a convicted slayer. They are thought to be in Oklahoma, where two of the convicts made their way in the motor car of Lewis Dresser, school teacher, who was abducted near Lansing and released near Pawhuska, Okla.

Traylor Is Worse; Put in Oxygen Tent

Chicago Banker, Victim of Pneumonia, Sinks.

Chicago, Jan. 22 (AP).—Melvin A. Traylor, candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination two years ago, rested beneath an oxygen tent tonight as physicians sought to check the spread of pneumonia.

The condition of the 55-year-old banker took a sudden turn for the worse today and lung and heart specialists were called. Dr. William R. Cubbins said the infection had spread through the left lung.

Mr. Traylor is president of the First National Bank.

Roosevelt's Cleanup Hits High Offices

Committeemen Holding U. S. Jobs Must Quit One or Other.

Campaign on "Backdoor Influence" Gains in Congress.

By Raymond Clapper.

The Roosevelt political clean-up campaign moved into a new zone yesterday. It was made known that Federal office holders who also are members of the Democratic National Committee would have to give up one place or the other.

Agitation against back-door influence in Washington also gained headway in Congress.

Senator James Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, introduced a bill to prohibit Senators and Representatives from lobbying before Government departments. The White House is favorable to far-reaching legislation of this nature, and prospects today were that action would result from the numerous pending proposals.

Meantime, Postmaster General James A. Farley was awaiting the return to Washington, probably today, of Arthur F. Mullen, Nebraska National committeeman, who is engaged in practice of law here.

It was indicated Mr. Farley is prepared to use his persuasive powers to bring Mr. Mullen into harmony with the new Administration policy, which also frowns on National committeemen representing clients before Government departments.

Mullen Shows Fight.

Mr. Mullen has shown some disposition to resist such pressure. His friends in Nebraska have laid down a barrage of telegrams to Mr. Farley insisting he be allowed to remain on the committee. Several hundred such telegrams have been received at the Postmaster General's office. They were sent to the Democratic National Committee headquarters to be acknowledged on behalf of the chairman.

The delicacy of Mr. Farley's position in attempting to carry out the Administration policy is becoming greater daily. But he has given no indication that his impending retirement as Democratic National chairman or as New York State chairman is imminent.

On the contrary, the Postmaster General, while silent in several languages on that subject, is now deep in plans for smashing the influence of Tammany Hall and building a new pro-Administration Democratic set-up in his own home State. The death of John H. McCooey, anti-Administration Brooklyn leader, the last major ally of the Tammany chieftain, John F. Curry, has unexpectedly cleared the way for faster action in this direction.

High Officials on List.

The new Administration policy of removing Federal office holders from the Democratic National committee is expected to apply to the following:

Horatio Abbott, of Michigan, collector of internal revenue at Detroit.

Dudley Doolittle, of Kansas, manager for the Federal Land Bank at Wichita.

W. A. Julian, of Ohio, treasurer of the United States.

Jed C. Adams, of Texas, member of the Board of Tax Appeals.

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, of Wyaming, director of the mint. Mrs. Ross also is vice chairman of the National committee.

Another one of those affected is Mr. Farley's own First Assistant Postmaster General, W. W. Howes, who is South Dakota National committeeman.

Mr. Adams said later he had offered his resignation when he accepted the Federal post last May,

U. S. Investigates Graft In CWA, Relief Jobs As Scandals Threaten

Dr. Wynekoop Wins Mistrial; Fear Death

"I'll Rest and Get This Over With," Sick Woman Says.

Chicago, Jan. 22 (AP).—The shadow of death over the defendant—elderly, emaciated Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop—brought an end today to her trial in the Wynekoop murder mystery.

Judge Joseph B. David decided the danger of Dr. Alice slumping over in death at her counsel's table, a fate that threatened her at least twice in court, outweighed the demands of justice that she continue on trial.

He ordered a juror withdrawn from the box, declared a mistrial and ended the case after the enigmatic woman doctor had responded to the urging of her family and lawyers and added her voice to theirs in asking for a postponement.

She knew from her own store of medical knowledge, accumulated in 40 years of practice, she said, that death might come at any moment from heart disease.

Informed that a mistrial had been declared, Dr. Alice leaned back on her bed in jail infirmary, smiled and said:

"Thank God, this will give me a chance to rest."

She turned to Matron Mary Kennedy and added:

"I want to thank you all for the kindness you have shown me. I want to thank lots of other people for their decency to me. Now I am going to rest so I can get

NRA Designs Credit Relief For Employer

Johnson Names Two Aids to Help Businesses Hurt by Codes.

As Senator Gerald P. Nye continued to fling heated criticism at the National Recovery Administration for its failure to protect the small business man, Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson announced yesterday he was taking "definite action" to absolve the small man's financial problems.

Johnson appointed Division Administrator A. D. Whiteside and Col. Robert Hiester Montgomery, recently appointed chief of the NRA Research and Planning Division, to work out methods by which credits can be extended to the employer who is struggling to keep his chin above water because of increased costs under NRA.

Mr. Whiteside and Col. Montgomery, said Johnson, will act as his special assistants on credits and finance, "in regard to those provisions in codes which have to do with or which affect costs and selling prices and those phases in the administrative provisions of codes insofar as they may relate to costs and prices."

Formulate Credit Aid.

"Mr. Whiteside will study the effects of codes upon the credit and the financial structure of members of the various industries and trades and will endeavor to formulate methods of financing to liberalize the extension of monetary credit to the manufacturer, wholesaler, retailer and consumer. He will be particularly concerned with the problem of smaller businesses where the difficulty of obtaining credit may be one of the severest handicaps in competition with larger enterprises."

The recovery administrator's statement came after a visit to the White House as Senator Nye, on the Senate floor, was charging Gen. Johnson had departed "from the actual truth." The North Dakota Republican, who has been engaged in a highly spiced verbal battle with the NRA chief, was discussing the latter's statement in a New York speech that he (Nye) had refused Gen. Johnson's request to serve on

$33,000,000 Voted for Full Treaty Navy

Two House Committees Join Administration in Building Plan.

By Robert C. Albright.

Two House committees yesterday joined the Administration in a drive for a "full treaty Navy, built and building," by the expiration of existing limitation agreements in 1936.

For the first time since World War preparedness days, sentiment for a Navy "second to none" swept the House. Three members took the floor to demand "equality with the best."

Simultaneously, the House Appropriations Committee recommended $33,619,334 for "increase in the Navy," a rise of $1,200,000 over budget estimates, and the House Naval Affairs Committee opened hearings on the $380,000,000 Vinson bill for treaty strength by 1939.

Ayres Makes House Plea.

"Under the leadership of President Roosevelt, we will sit at the next conference table with a full treaty Navy, built and building," Chairman W. A. Ayres, of the Navy Appropriations subcommittee, told the House.

"We may have some over-age tonnage in the destroyer category. We will have replacements for much of it under way. In my judgment, in no other way may we look to continued limitation or to reduction within the existing limitations."

Chairman Carl Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, predicted Japan will ask parity with the United States and England three years hence.

Roosevelt Support Pledged.

"Japan has made it clear that she is dissatisfied with any limitation below the strength permitted to the United States and Great Britain, and it seems likely she will refuse to continue the present ratios after "Stealing," "Rake-Offs" on Contracts Laid to Politicians.

Keenan Will Head Wide Investigation

Administrator Seeking $850,000,000 More to Carry On.

The Department of Justice will investigate widespread reports of graft and "stealing" in local and State administration of both CWA funds and relief funds, Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief director, revealed yesterday.

Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General, who has had charge of some of the major prosecutions conducted by the Government, will be in charge. Keenan said he had been in conference with Hopkins and that Hopkins had requested a wide investigation.

At the same time, Hopkins revealed he is seeking appropriations totaling $850,000,000 to carry on CWA and relief work. He indicated Congress may be asked to make these appropriations directly, rather than through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Of the total, $500,000,000 would be for direct relief and $350,000,000 for CWA.

Worried by Graft Reports.

Administration officials are worried about graft reports and are going to use every effort to stamp them out. It was said the move is intended to forestall revelations of scandals in various localities.

The difficulty in both the CWA and the direct relief organization arises in local organizations, it was said. It was revealed that letters and telegrams complaining of "stealing" have been arriving almost daily. In every instance an investigation is being made through the relief organizations and through the Department of Justice.

In some cases it has been found that relief money has been directly misappropriated. In other instances local politicians or others with influence have received "rake-offs" in the purchase of supplies. In many instances, it was said, local political organizations have dictated the giving of CWA jobs and of relief. This practice, it was said, was not confined to one political party.

Drastic Shakeup Indicated.

That there will be numerous shakeups in the State and local relief organizations also was indicated. It was intimated that in one

Long's Power At Stake Today

New Orleans Tense After Bitter Campaign; 300 Guard Polls.

New Orleans, Jan. 22 (AP).—In an atmosphere thick with charges and counter-charges of bribery, graft, corruption and plots for trickery at the polls, candidates for New Orleans municipal posts for the next four years tonight rested their cases with the voters.

Under protection of 300 citizens, sworn in as special officers with super-police powers, the city hoped for a peaceful election tomorrow in contrast with the gale of vituperation which marked the campaign.

Threats from the State administration to call out the National Guard for the primary, and from the city hall to swear in 10,000 police if this was done, inspired the "special guard of 300." Under agreement signed by all factions, the guard will be directed by an arbitration board of seven, representing all interests, who will use the guard to handle any emergency.

The figure of United States Senator Huey P. Long, Louisiana political boss, loomed large. Only a month ago, he broke an alliance with the city hall old regulars and left his desk in Washington to come back to New Orleans and throw a straight Long ticket into the field, challenging the organization which dominated, for years before Long held his first public office.

Higher Wages to CWA Workers Anger Union Men in Navy Yard

The union wage scale paid by CWA and PWA in the Washington Navy Yard has made regular skilled workmen dissatisfied with their lower wages, N. P. Alifas, president of District 44, International Association of Machinists, disclosed at the Navy appropriations hearings.

Copies of the hearings before the House Appropriations Committee, released yesterday, reveal that highly skilled machinists in the Washington Navy Yard receive only 88 cents an hour, minus the 15 per cent cut and a half-day weekly furlough.

Workers assigned to the Navy Yard by CWA and PWA, however, have been paid $1.10 an hour, the union wage scale. The regular employes consequently are agitating for a scale equal to that paid temporary workers.

The American Federation of Labor also feels the difference in pay "should be leveled up," Alifas said, "and we, of course, are suggesting that the first step in leveling up should restore whatever has been taken away.

"These men are not actually getting 88 cents an hour. That is the base rate, and from that is subtracted the half day per week that they lose on the furlough, the 15 per cent cut on the remainder. So the 88 cents per hour is only a nominal rate, while the CWA rate of $1.10 per hour is an actual rate, from which these deductions are not made."

Mobs Storm French Chamber, Cry 'Down With Chautemps!'

Paris, Jan. 22 (AP).—Hundreds of determined rioters, throwing torpedoes, stones and other missiles and shouting "Down with Chautemps," battled police for two hours today in the vicinity of the Chamber of Deputies.

Between 700 and 1,000 were arrested, but most were released after questioning.

A cabinet crisis was predicted in chamber lobbies as a result of continued atacks on the government since the Stavisky scandal, growing from the collapse of the Bayonne pawnshop, revealed December 30.

Premier Chautemps was in the chamber within hearing of the clamor outside.

Royalists, protesting the Stavisky affair, charged police on guard around the chamber.

In another demonstration, against pay cuts in the Chautemps' budget-balancing measures, a crowd tried to reach the city hall, but several thousand police blocked the streets. Store windows were smashed and traffic blocked.

Bus loads of rioters at the chamber were taken to police stations. Among them was Maurice Pujo, Royalist leader.

Satan Has His Day As Sunday Suffers

Devilish Toothache Raises Cain With Evangelist.

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Billy Sunday headed for Elmore today to see a dentist about a devilishly annoying tooth, having completed a two-week soul-saving campaign that even his best friends agreed was one of the mildest bouts with Satan he ever engaged in.

There were few of those violent outbursts that made his listeners feel he was dissecting the evil one before their very eyes and his concluding engagement at Calvary Baptist Church yesterday was placid.

Atterbury Goes On Stand Today In Mail Probe

Expected to Reveal Rail Relationship With Aviation Firms.

By Martha Dalrymple.

William Wallace Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., will appear before the Senate air mail investigating committee today to explain in detail the financial interest his railroad has in various aviation companies.

In addition, Atterbury will probably be queried about the relationship between the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Hudson-Manhattan Tunnel Co., of which former Postmaster General Brown is chairman. Brown, charged by witnesses before the committee of dictating the award of Government mail contracts during his tenure of office, became affiliated with the tunnel company the day after he left the Postoffice Department, March 4, 1933.

Investigators for the committee sought to gain access to the books of the Hudson-Manhattan company last week, but were refused by officials of the company. Subsequently, Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the committee, introduced in the Senate a resolution to empower his group to call for the books of companies even indirectly connected with the aviation industry.

Neither Summoned.

The entire question of whether Brown and his former assistant in the Postoffice Department, W. Irving Glover, both of whom have been charged by witnesses with having ordered their office records burned, shall appear before the committee, remains unsettled.

Neither has been summoned officially by the committee, although the Republican minority claims it will insist the two former Republican officials be called. Black and his majority followers on the committee indicate they are loath to summon Brown and Glover because of the chance that voluntary testimony would waive their immunity from criminal procedure under Federal statute.

Other witnesses of the day will be A. J. Ball, traffic manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and John H. Orgill, Cleveland attorney, who has been mentioned in previous testimony in connection with correspondence from Brown regarding mail contract awards.

The committee, in recess since Thursday, has been studying the mass of evidence presented last week tending to show excessive rises in value of certain air-line stocks and fat salaries and fees paid officers during years their lines were receiving Federal subsidies in the form of mail contracts.

During the years 1926-33, affiliates of the United Aircraft and Transport Corporation received a total of $40,174,412, or 45.88 per cent of the total domestic subsidies granted by the Government.

Fabulous Profits.

For a total investment of $500 in the Pratt and Whitney Co., three men have testified that, by a series of stock dividend payments and mergers, they have made a total cash profit on their limited stock holdings, plus salaries, bonuses, and directors' fees, of $20,705,722.

In addition to this, today they still hold stock which, valued at the current market price, is worth approximately $3,345,000.

If, on May 1, 1929, at the height of the market, these same three men had sold their stock for which they paid an initial $500 their profits would have reached $72,739,793.

Forced Out of Business.

Chairman Black, during the testimony of the three officials of companies which enjoyed Government mail contracts, interspersed their testimony with that of various independent air line operators who offered evidence to show how they had been forced out of business when they failed to receive mail awards.

Black, who has talents as stage manager, always drew out evidence that those whose profits had been great had not had much practical aviation experience, while the small independent operators had worthy records as World War aviators, and had pioneered most of the routes which were later awarded to lines belonging to what Black consistently refers to as the "aviation trust."

The chairman introduced figures in the records to show that of the $113,682,645 total domestic and foreign air subsidies granted by the Government in the years 1926-33, $87,564,998 was for the domestic service.

Three Firms Get Lion's Share.

Of this latter figure, a total of $81,197,304, or 92.74 per cent of the total domestic subsidies, was paid out to companies affiliated with three holding companies, the United Aircraft & Transport, the Aviation Corporation and North American Aviation.

Further broken down, the tabulated figures show that the United Aircraft received $40,174,412, or 45.88 per cent of the total domestic grants; the Aviation Corporation, $18,342,273, or 20.95 per cent, and North American, $22,680,619, or 25.91 per cent.

Maj. R. W. Shufeldt To BeBuried Today

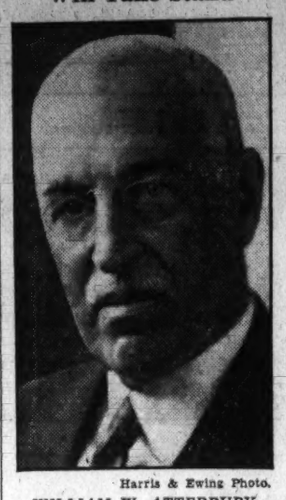

Services for Author and Scholar Set for 2 P. M.

Funeral services for Maj. Robert W. Shufeldt, retired, Civil War veteran and author and scholar, who died Sunday, will be held today at 2 p. m., in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Maj. Shufeldt served with Federal forces in the Civil War and in the campaign against the Sioux. He was placed on active duty from January 9, 1918, to January 9, 1919.

Maj. Shufeldt had lived in Washington more than 50 years. The family residence is at 1350 Eighteenth street. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. A. L. Shufeldt, of Dupont Circle.

Johnson Acts To Give Small Business Credit

a board to hear small business men's complaints. The proposal, according to Nye, was that it should be a sort of "Congressional liaison committee."

"I straightway told Johnson I couldn't accept until Congress had had an opportunity to pass on the matter," said Nye. He added that Johnson had said NRA was "nobody's business but his own and that we Senators didn't know the first thing about business."

Big Business in Saddle.

"When I observe what things business has resorted to in the last 15 years," he went on, "maybe I don't know anything about business, but I'm not going to concede I have no right to criticize things done under NRA. Big business is in the saddle by reason of NRA codes more than it has ever been before."

The code for electrical manufacturers, he said, was an example in support of his argument. The Senator asserted that the General Electric Co., "a pirate organization," had written the code and was administering it. He declared that hearings on charges by independents had been previously postponed and "lo and behold, now I hear that the hearing has been postponed until February 8."

"Why hasn't NRA invited Samuel Insull to come back and administer the utilities code?" demanded the Dakota Progressive, who had charged on Sunday that NRA "stool pigeons" were tipping off big business about small manufacturers' complaints of unfair trade practices.

Suggests Nye Read Law.

At the White House Gen. Johnson, who was accompanied by Donald Richberg, NRA counsel, was asked about this statement of the North Dakotan. "I suggest Senator Nye study the law," he replied. "Complaints do not go to the code authorities, but to the compliance boards which are outside." (Senator Nye also charged that these boards were under big business dominance.)

Another questioner asked the administrator if he liked the Presidents recent Executive order which stated that complaints against unfair trade practices could be handled by the Federal Trade Commission or the Department of Justice, after passing through the Recovery Administration.

"I ought to like it," answered Johnson, "I wrote it."

On the subject of the recovery act itself he declared: "I'd like to see this law given a real test and, while some amendments may be necessary, I would prefer to meet the problem of helping small business without legislation. Some of these codes have been in operation for only three months. Let's give it a real test."

The announcement about "definite action" on the financing of smaller businesses was not elaborated upon. Since the recovery act was drawn, this problem has been a thorn in the side of the Administration. It has been charged that business, by being forced to raise wages before it had increased profits, was putting the economic cart before the horse. The small man, who has been brought to the ragged edge of bankrupty by the depression, in many cases saw no way to raise wages without going under.

It has been noted that the "chiselers" who signed up for the Blue Eagle and then lost it for breaking their promises, have been in virtually every case the managers of small enterprises.

Rumors Mention RFC.

From time to time there have been reports that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would endeavor to reach the "little fellow" with loans to tide him over until his profits caught up on his costs, but nothing has been done.

Luck Favors Two Boys, Now Police Hunt Them

Washington police yesterday were asked to look for Victor Baldwin, jr., 15, of Forestville, Md., who, according to Maryland authorities, bet 2 cents in a numbers game, won $16, and "took a trip."

Baldwin, missing from Maryland Park High School since last Thursday, was said to be in company with an unnamed schoolmate who also played the game, bet 5 cents, and won $28.

Graft in CWA, Federal Relief Probed by U. S.

Following the conference of Hopkins with Justice Department officials, it was revealed that a grand jury investigation of CWA activities in California had been ordered at Los Angeles. The investigation of CWA activities is following the same lines as the PWA investigation. A grand jury inquiry into the activities of CWA in Iowa is being conducted in Des Moines.

Officials yesterday freely admitted there was considerable "stealing" in relief administration work. With one posible exception, however, it was said this "stealing" has been on a small scale. Officials expressed themselves as more concerned over the number of places in which graft is being reported than in indiactions that there had been any major graft.

Rosevelt to Ask Billion.

Hopkins 'estimate that $850,000,000 would be needed for CWA and for direct relief followed President Roosevelt's revelation that he is ready to ask Congress for an emergency appropriation of $1,166,000,000 to carry on the CWA and the Civilian Conservation Corps. Of ths amount, it was indicated, $300,000,000 would be used for the CCC.

The appropriation for the Civil Works program is expected to last unfil May. Hopkins said the relief appropriation probably would have to last "from now on." He said he would make no prediction about what is likely to happen after May. He said the Government will continue its plan of matching local relief money with Federal money.

Hopkins added that when the new CWA money is available the 30-hour week, which was cut recently, will be restored to CWA workers. However, he indicated that States would be held down to their quotas. He sent out orders to 14 States telling them to reduce the number of men on CWA pay rolls immediately. In each instance the State had exceeded its quota. The orders will result in more than 250,000 men being removed from the pay roll.

Jobless Put at 9,000,000.

Hopkins said he estimated the present number of unemployed at about 9,000,000. He said 4,000,000 of these are engaged in civil works and 2,000,000 are on relief. He said of the total about 2,000,000 are farmers or tenant farmers who are not ordinarily counted among the unemployed. About 3,000,000 persons are among the normally unemployed, Hopkins said, estimating that this number was not working in 1929.

"Which still leaves CWA," Hopkins said, "with 4,000,000 men to look after."

The following reductions were ordered in the number of Civil Works employes: Wisconsin, 81,000; Arkansas, 20,000; Maine, 1,500; Minnesota, 8,500; New Hampshire, 1,500; Oklahoma, 1,500; Texas, 45,000; Utah, 1,000; Washington, 10,000; West Virginia, 16,000; Kentucky, 8,000; Ohio, 46,000, and Michigan, 16,000. Illinois was ordered to cut to 200,000, but the number removed was not indicated.

Watt Approved For Promotion

Former Shipping Board Head Slated to Be Rear Admiral.

Capt. Richard Morgan Watt, former chairman of the U. S. Shipping Board, was approved for promotion to the rank of Rear Admiral by President Roosevelt yesterday on the recommendation of a selection board of the Naval Constructors Corps headed by Rear Admiral Washington L. Capps.

Capt. Watt has been on duty in the office of the superintending constructor at the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., Kearney, N. J., since September, 1933.

From 1910 to 1914 he was chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair with the rank of rear admiral. During the World War he was on duty as industrial manager at the Navy Yard, Norfolk, and was awarded the Navy Cross. He served as shipping board chairman in 1921 and subsequently as senior member of the Navy Section of the Army and Navy Munitions Board here.

Capt. Watt was born at York, Pa., in 1872.

Moorman Heads New B. & O. Office

Appointed General Agent in Washington.

Daniel L. Moorman, assistant general passenger agent for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in Washington, yesterday was appointed general agent to head the new passenger office here.

Connected with the railroad for more than 30 years, Mr. Moorman came to Washington five years ago. He has been in charge of Presidential journeys frequently.

R. E. Coleman, city passenger agent in Washington, will become division passenger agent to succeed W. C. Stotler, who is being transferred to Philadelphia.

U. S. Amity Desired, Japanese, Diet Told

Foreign Minister Hirota "Regrets" Criticisms by Soviet; Sees Pu-Yi's Ascension Paramount to Oriental Peace; No Agreement With League.

Toyko, Jan. 23 (Tuesday).—Foreign Minister Koko Hirota told the Japanese diet today that "between Japan and the United States of America there exists no question that is intrinsically difficult of solution."

He asserted that Japan "fervently desires American friendship."

At the same time he said "it is most surprising and regrettable" that Soviet Russia should direct "unwararnted criticisms against Japan."

He told the legislators the Japanese government believed "proper adjustment of the tri-partite relationship between Japan, Manchukuo and the Soviet Union was of paramount importance to the tranquillity of East Asia."

Places Manchukuo First

The foreign minister gave the question of Manchukuo, the nation which Japan created in Manchuria, first place in his address.

He referred pointedly to the withdrawal of Japan from the League of Nations last year, giving as his reason "that there was no agreement between Japan and the league on the fundamental principles of preserving the peace in East Asia."

He also referred to the approaching coronation of Henry Pu-Yi as Emperor of Manchukuo.

"This," he said, "is a matter of congratulation, not for Manchukuo alone but for the peace of the Orient and of the world."

He brought the Soviet Union into his speech in close sequence to his discussion of Sino-Japanes relations. He said even after the creation of Manchukuo, there had been a "thorough mutual understanding" between Japan and Russia.

Russian Attitude Changed.

On the basis of this understanding, he said "no difficult question was encountered." Now, he said, "the attitude of the Soviet Union toward Japan seems to have undergone a change of some sort," which he described as "most surprising and regrettable."

The foreign minister informed the legislators flatly:

"Japan is certainly setting up no new military establishments along the Manchukuo and Soviet frontiers, Moscow propaganda notwithstanding."

The discussion of relations with Russia ended on a note of optimism, for he said:

"I am sure that before long the Soviet Union must come to appreciate fully the true intentions of Japan."

Then he turned directly to the question of relations with the United States and said:

On United States Break.

"I am confident that the United States will not fail to appraise correctly Japan's position in East Asia."

"Temporary estrangement" of the peoples of Japan and the United States was brought about, he asserted, by the outbreak of "the Manchurian incident. But, he continued, he believed America would come to realize "Japan's role as the stabilizing force in East Asia."

The salient points in Minister Hirota's address follow:

"The Japanese government was obliged to serve notice of withdrawal from the League of Nations on March 27, last year, because the Manchurian incident and questions regarding the state of Manchukuo showed there was no agreement between Japan and the league on fundamental principles of preserving the peace in East Asia.

"At the time when the decisive step was taken, his majesty the emperor graciously issued a rescript pointing out clearly and precisely the path this nation should henceforth pursue. It reads:

Respects Independence.

"'Now that Manchukuo has been founded, our empire deems it essential to respect the independence of the new state and to encourage its healthy development that sources of evil in the Far East may be eradicated and enduring peace thereby established.

"'It is our desire to promote mutual confidence between our empire and all other powers, and to make known the justice of its cause throughout the world.'

"I am convinced that if we all unite in our endeavors to act in accordance with the wishes of our august sovereign the world will surely come to realize the fairness and justce of Japan's position, and bright will be the future of our empire.

"Personally speaking, in obedience to the imperial message, I am determined to use every ounce of my being to carry out our national policy by diplomatic means in interest of world peace.

"Manchukuo, thanks to the tireless labors of his excellency, the regent, and of government authorities, and also to the whole-hearted assistance and collaboration extended to her by this country, true to the spirit of the Japan-Manchukuo protocol, has been making steady progress along all lines of her constructive work.

Monarchy Decision Near.

"Moreover, a decision is about to be made on the establishment of a monarchical regime which has been so eagerly awaited by all her people, and which will go far to solidify the foundations of Manchukuo as a young independent nation.

"This is a matter of congratulation, not from Manchukuo alone, but for the peace of the Orient and the peace of the world. I think it behooves our government and people, always mindful of the imperial rescript, to exert their efforts unremittingly in assisting the healthy growth of the new state.

"The Japanese government has serious responsibilities for the maintenance of peace in East Asia and has a firm resolve in that regard. But what is more essential in the matter is the stabilization of China herself.

"Our government sincerely hopes for the political and economic rehabilitation of China. It hopes that she will be enable to unite with Japan in performing the obvious mission of both Japan and China—to contribute through mutual aid and cooperation to peaceful development of their part of the globe.

Ready to Meet China

"Should China appreciate our true motives and give tangible signs of sincerity on her part, Japan would be glad to reciprocate and meet her more than half way in a spirit of good will. It is gratifying to note that North China, under control of the Peiping political committee, remains comparatively quiet.

"Meanwhile we are watching, not without grave misgivings, the activities of the Communist party and the increasing rampancy of "Red" armies in China.

"It is most surprising and regrettable that the Soviet Union should recently take to broadcasting at home and abroad, through the press and other channels, unwarranted criticisms directed against Japan, and circulate exaggerated stories about aggravations of this or that situation evidently for political and diplomatic purposes.

"Japan has consistently preserved her fair and equitable attitude toward the Soviet Union throughout the years past, before and after the Manchurian incident.

"Indeed, it is only as a part of the above mentioned friendly policy that Japan has undertaken since last June to act as an intermediary between Manchukuo and the Soviet Union in their negotiations on the proposed transfer of the North Manchuria Railway.

Desires American Friendship.

"Far from having any thought of picking a quarrel with America, Japan fervently desires American friendship. At the same time I am confident that the United States will not fail to appraise correctly Japan's position in East Asia.

"Only for a time following the outbreak of the Manuchurian incident, public opinion in America was aroused against Japan, bringing about something like temporary estrangement of the two peoples. It is hardly necessary to reiterate that Japan is actuated by no ulterior motive other than her desire to establish enduring peace in East Asia.

"Therefore, if only America will clearly perceive the actual condition of the Orient and realize Japan's role as a stabilizing force in East Asia, whatever emotional tension may yet linger between the two peoples is bound to disappear.

"I sincerely hope that the two great nations across the Pacific will, in view of their important relations, commercial and otherwise, continue to join forces in cultivating their historical friendship and good understanding so as to keep the ocean forever true to its name.

British Amity Unshaken.

"Japan's traditional amity with the British Empire remains unshaken, even to these times. I believe the two sea powers occupying geographically similar key positions, one in the East and the other in the West, can effectively serve the cause of universal peace through sympathetic appreciation of their respective stands and whole-hearted collaboration in all quarters of the world.

"That our negotiations with India, an important member of the British Empire, over knotty problems of commerce have now been substantially concluded is a source of gratification on both sides.

"What is needed between the nations is the abandonment of bootless jealousy and antagonism, and reinforcement of the sense of unity and mutual interdependence. However, international trade barriers, instead of decreasing are fast multiplying.

"In the light of what I have already stated it is impossible for me to deny that our foreign relations are now, and will be in future, beset with many serious problems. However, the path of a rising nation is always strewn with problems.

"As long as our people are united and well prepared to face courageously whatever difficulties may arise, and as long as we retain our composure and sobriety and 'stray not from the path of rectitude and in action always embrace the golden mean,' I am confident that Japan has nothing to fear and her future will be full of hope."

Saving on Legal Staff Planned

Virginia Committee to Urge Concentration Under Attorney General.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Richmond, Jan. 22.—Large salary savings would be effected by placing all State legal counsel under the attorney general, Senator T. Russell Cather, of Winchester, told the Senate courts of justice committee today.

Mr. Cather is head of a subcommittee to tighten provisions of five measures calling for legal talent centralization. Committee members assured the Winchester senator they would vote a favorable report on the proposals.

With eight instead of two assistants, Cather declared, the attorney general could perform most of the State's legal work and remove the necessity for special attorneys. The assistants would be paid from $3,000 to $5,000 a year.

Under the present set-up, Cather added, conflicting opinions often are reported by State attorneys.

"It's ridiculous," he said, "when two departments tell the public to do altogether different things."

Senators Cecil Connor, Leesburg, and Robert O. Norris, Lively, are on Mr. Cather's subcommittee.

1936, when the current agreement expires," he said.

Other developments were:

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt testified the Vinson bill, providing a $380,000,000 five-year construction program, has the full support of the President, as hearings opened before the House Naval Affairs Committee.

The House Appropriations Committee, in reporting a $284,747,244 Navy supply bill, went beyond budget recommendations to recommend $1,200,000 for commencing three 6-inch cruisers.

Representative Vinson predicted his committee will order a favorable report on the Vinson bill today, after hearing testimony by Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations.

War Within Year Foreseen.

Outlining attempts at disarmament under Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, Representative Fred Britten, ranking Republican member of the Naval Affairs Committee, declared "statesmen of the world say within 12 months there will be a war, and we can not keep ourselves out of it."

Construction funds in 1935 appropriations, together with the proposed $380,000,000 expansion, are in addition to the $238,000,000 already allotted out of recovery money for construction of 32 ships and 22 vessels now being built out of regular approopriations.

Out of all ships built or appropriated for since the Washington Conference, the United States had 36 units, Great Britain 113 and Japan 128, as of December a year ago.

U. S. Slipping, Says Vinson.

Representative Vinson said in the light cruiser, destroyer and submarine classes, the United States has "slipped to fifth place, and a very poor fifth, at that."

"We are a peaceful people, and would much prefer never to be drawn into war," he said.

"At the same time, one can not fail to take note of the tense situation that exists throughout the world and it would be foolhardy not to make reasonable preparations."

The $284,747,244 Navy appropriations bill, reported yesterday, paradoxically was $23,922,318 under current appropriations. It provided, however, for an increase of 2,800 enlisted men to man new ships, over and above the present 79,000, and for 1,000 more marines. It provided about $4,000,000 to bring the fleet from the Pacific to the Atlantic in April.

Japanese Gesture Here Stirs Envoys

Tokyo Diplomat Leads in Greeting Troyanovskys.

Diplomatic circles buzzed last night when Toshihiko Taketomi, Japanese Charge d'Affairs, stole a march on his colleagues of the corps and took the lead in entertaining the newly arrived Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky.

The Japanese Charge d'Affairs and Mme. Taketomi knew the Troyanovskys in Tokyo, where the latter spent five years representing the Soviet Union. Thus the dinner was in the nature of a renewal of an old friendship as well as a gesture of international courtesy which did not go unremarked.

It will be recalled the Taketomis were the only members of the diplomatic corps to appear at Union Station when Ambassador Troyanovsky arrived. Old hands were not surprised, however, for it is an old tenet of diplomacy that the most scrupulous courtesy must be exercised precisely where international relations are the most strained.

Inquest Called on Death Of Ilchester Man

Catonsville, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). An inquest into the death of Bernard C. Porter, 45, of Ilchester, Md., auto accident victim, will be held Thursday night before Acting Coroner H. C. Andreae.

Porter was killed here Sunday night while walking on the Frederick road. Robert C. Harper Carroll, jr., alleged driver of the auto, has been summoned to the inquest.

Elevator Boy Held To Jury in Thefts

William Van Kleet, 19, an elevator operator at the Earle Building, facing charges of housebreaking in Police Court yesterday, waived a preliminary hearing and was held for action of the grand jury under $3,000 bond.

Van Kleet was arrested last week following a reported series of thefts from offices in the Earle Building. Police said the loss included bonds, securities and radios, totaling $2,000.

Sharp Revision Of Peery's Tax Plans Impends

But Governor Still Seeks to Raise $1,000,000 More for Schools.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 22.—Sharp revision of Gov. Peery's new tax program tonight was believed near.

Friends reported the governor contemplated changes in methods of raising new revenue, but still intended to demand an increase of more than $1,000,000 annually in school funds. Details were not forthcoming.

Democratic leaders discredited rumors that Gov. Peery would use his influence with the General Assembly for a general sales tax.

Several senators and delegates have announced opposition to nine additional taxes with a potential annual yield of $1,161,000, proposed by the Governor in his inaugural message. The criticism caused Peery to confer with advisers.

Income Tax Rift Looms.

Members of the Assembly Finance Committees have been particularly disturbed by suggestions of the Governor for tightening State income tax laws, including lowering of exemptions for married men from $2,800 to $2,000 and for single men from $1,250 to $1,000.

Passage shortly by the Senate of a Congressional redistricting bill seemed assured when Senator Saxon Holt, Newport News, the author, pushed through an amendment eliminating an emergency clause, which would have made the measure effective immediately. Instead, it would become operative in June or in ample time to govern fall elections.

Mr. Holt explained he had been assured of sufficient votes for Senate approval without the emergency provisions, which would have required a three-fourths vote.

Two Districts Untouched.

The Senate also adopted amendments placing Goochland and Fluvanna Counties in the fourth district.

The proposal must be sent to the House, where drastic amendments were anticipated. The bill would leave intact the old first and second districts; Goochland from the third and Cumberland and Fluvanna from the tenth would be added to the fourth; Wythe would be transferred from the ninth to the fifth; Craig, Botetourt, Alleghany and the City of Clifton Forge would be shifted from the tenth to the sixth; Appomattox, Buckingham, Nelson, Amherst, Rock Bridge, Augusta, Bath, and Highland; and the cities of Staunton and Buena Vista would be transferred from the tenth to the seventh; White, Albemarle, Madison, and Greene, and the city of Charlottesville would go from the eighth to the seventh.

Senator A. P. Staples, Roanoke, announced he would introduce a Senatorial redistricting measure. Co-sponsors may include Senator Aubrey Weaver, Front Royal, and S. L. Ferguson, Appomattox.

through with this business as soon as possible."

Burdine H. Gardner, of Indianapolis, father of the slain Rheta Wynekoop, said:

"I have little to say about this now. What I think is that it's a hell of a business when a person claims to be sick to get away from the law. Every Tom, Dick and Harry will do it now."

Judge David's ruling ended the first trial of the celebrated murder mystery—which began with the discovery of the defendant's daughter-in-law's slain body on Dr. Wynekoop's operating table.

Death Hovers Near.

Under the mistrial ruling, Dr. Alice must remain in the county jail until she recovers sufficient strength to again stand trial—or until death removes her from the jurisdiction of the court. Dr. Wynekoop, her family, and several physicians said they believed death was not far away.

Defense Attorney W. W. Smith said he would make a motion in a day or two asking that she be admitted to bail and sent to a hospital.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty said the State would oppose such a motion.

Jewish Veterans Hold Installation Tonight

The Washington Post of Jewish Veterans will meet at 8 p. m. today at the Jewish Community Center to install officers. Installation will be conducted by Harry Jacobs, of Newark, N. J., National senior vice commander in chief. Dr. Ivy Pelzman succeeds himself as post commander.

Samuel Dickstein, of New York, will speak.

Jailed Again

Four Go Back for Plot Hatched in Cell.

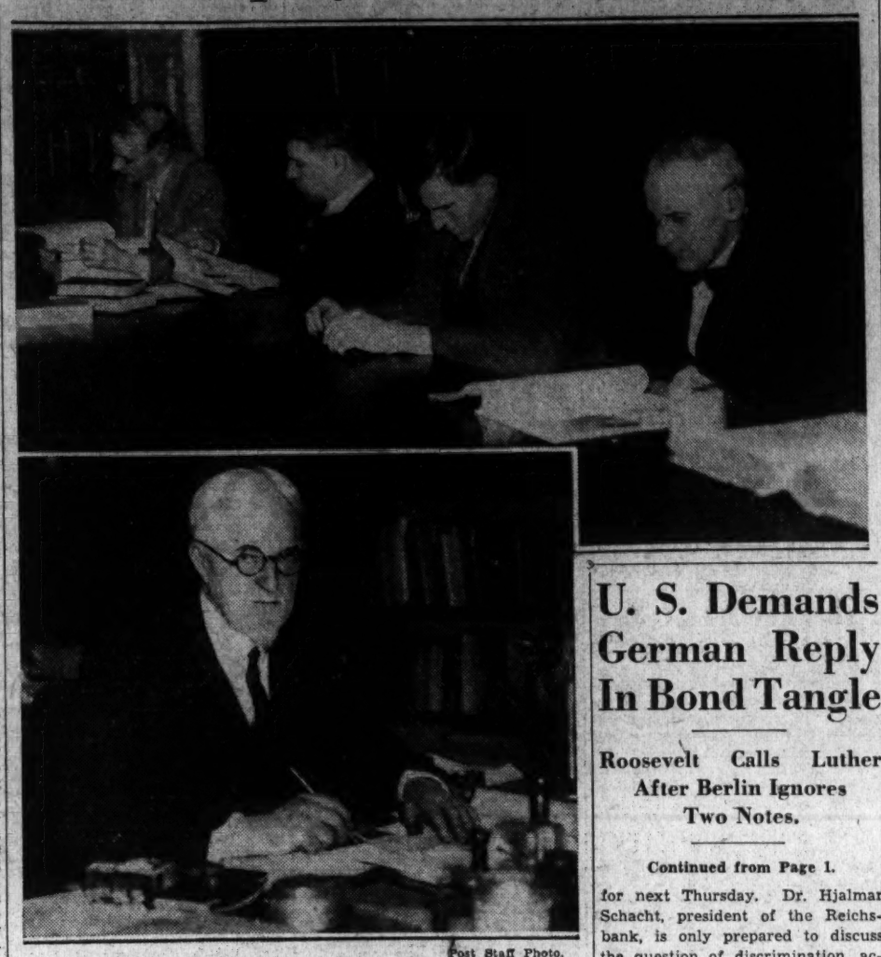

Easton, Pa., Jan. 22 (AP).—An alleged conspiracy to defraud the mother of a fellow prisoner today sent four men back to the jail where, it was asserted in court, their plans were made.

John and Jeremiah Kirtzler were sentenced to serve four months each and Keith Blakwell and Dennis Walters, both of Virginia, were ordered to serve two months.

Mrs. Emma Walter, Bethlehem, whose son Franklin is serving a prison sentence for issuing bad checks, was the intended victim.

It was charged that Kirtzler, posing as an attorney, asked Mrs. Walter for $68 to cover other checks he said had been issued by her son. The arrests followed.

Library Aids Idle to Find Work And Employed to Better Fill Jobs

Effort Made to Meet Greatly Increased Demands on Technology Division in Face of Dwindling Facilities.

(This is the second of a series of eight articles on Washington libraries.

By Felix Bruner.

The Public Library, in spite of its extremely inadequate facilities, plays a big part in the lives of thousands of Washington people.

With the pression and the consequent unemployment and shorter working hours for those who are employed, thousands have turned to the library for inexpensive recreation. Other thousands have gone to the library to improve their knowledge, the better to obtain or to hold jobs.

One of the most popular sections of the library is the technology division. In this division are kept books, magazines and other publications relating to business and technical subjects. It contains books on various trades and handbooks of various professions.

"The staff," said Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian, "has made every effort to meet needs of those who are unemployed and trying to use the library to fit themselves for a job, as well as of those who are reading to improve their efficiency. The reading room is constantly filled with intelligent men apparently unemployed.

Requests Varied.

"Requests for material on the laying of parquet flooring, auto painting with a spray gun, frog farming for swamp land in Florida, formula for making a pliable paint for use on cloth, boiler construction, valve setting and stationary engines show the library is helping to meet the problem of making a living in a practical way. Besides books on trades, there are many requests for books on business, popular science and investments."

The circulation in this division last year was 49,751, an increase of 12 per cent over the previous year. This is the largest circulation in the history of this division, except for two war years, according to Dr. Bowerman. The number of reference questions was 2,100.

"The outstanding characteristics," Dr. Bowerman said, "noted in the year's work were the tendency of readers toward greater specialization, demanding a more specific type of information, and their necessity for finding new markets for old products and new products for old markets. Inquiries for information on air conditions, new methods of refrigeration, and utilization of waste products for commercial purposes show the new trends in business and industry.

Home Industry Growing.

"That many persons are turning to home industries to supplement family incomes is shown by requests for material on home candy making and sandwich making on a large scale, and equipment in home cellars for mushroom growing.

"On different occasions two policemen came with requests for suggestions for ways to help unemployed wanderers, many of whom are skilled workmen, and were given lists of books on trades. A man expressed his appreciation to the division by saying that from help obtained here he had made an automobile polish now used throughout Washington."

The technology division, however, is only a small part of the library service. Last year the total home circulation from the library and its branches was 2,630,717. This number, large as it is, was greatly limited by the restricted number of books available and by the lack of any kind of library facilities in most Washington neighborhoods.

The growth of library service is shown by contrast between 1929 and 1933. The registered users of the library in 1929 numbered 72,419. In 1933 the registered numbered 116,844, a 61 per cent gain in readers. In 1929 the home circulation was 1,561,621 volumes, the gain up to 1933 being 68 per cent.

Appropriations Slashed

Yet, in spite of this gain, appropriations for the library have been cut.

Library readers slowly are turning from fiction to other subjects. The percentage now stands about 50 per cent fiction and 50 per cent other subjects. In 1929 it was 55 per cent fiction and 45 per cent other subjects.

The effect of economic and monetary discussions is shown plainly by an increase of 151 per cent in the demand for books on economics, education and political science. The increase in the demand for biography was 132 per cent, history 121 per cent, philosophy, psychology and religion, 102 per cent, and fine arts and crafts, 92 per cent.

One of the surprising facts about library statistics is the large number of books borrowed by children, in spite of the fact that libraries are accessible to less than half the children of Washington. This indicates, perhaps more than anything else, the necessity for more branch libraries where children can borrow. Last year children borrowed 1,227,876 books. In six years the circulation to children increased 77 per cent; 53 per cent from library agencies which have received no increase in staff during those years.

"When better times return," Dr. Bowerman said, "the children of Washington have something more coming to them. These circulation figures give no idea of the immense amount of personal work with children nor of the advisory work with parents and teachers.

Benefit to School.

"The belief of parents and teachers in the efficacy of books is shown by visits and letters. One public school principal stated that in a survey of the reading in three buildings under her supervision she had found that the problem-children in school and out were non-readers. Just what this means in responsibility for the library and the community is evident. In addition to the pleasure and education given children by reading, the effect on character should cause thought in the community and stimulate efforts to supply this safeguard to the many neighborhoods now without childrens' rooms."

These facts and figures are present to show just how much the people of Washington appreciate library service, a service, in spite of the large amount of work being done, that is not available to everyone because of lack of facilities. In a future article the manner in which the library is reaching into the schools in spite of insufficient facilities will be described.

Road Work Lags In Bristol Region

$29,723,835 Estimated as Needed for Completion.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Almost $30,000,000 would have to be spent within the next ten years to complete the primary system of roads in the Bristol district of the Virginia State highway department.

The State highway commission at its January meeting approved an estimate of $29,723,835 by engineers as needed to place the district's roads in condition to handle traffic efficiently and safely.

Sixteen typewritten pages were needed to list the estimated requirements of the Bristol district which, under the prevailing manner of allocating construction funds, has lagged behind districts where topography made for cheaper building costs.

Committeemen Holding U.S. Jobs Must Give Up One or Other.

but that Mr. Farley had declined to accept it.

"I am willing to serve if needed, but I am also willing to retire from the National committee at any time," Mr. Adams said. "I sent in my resignation when I was appointed to the Board of Tax Appeals, but it was not accepted. Mr. Farley knows how I feel and that I shall be glad to withdraw at any time. The resignation is still before him."

Trouble in Texas Blamed.

Factional troubles in Texas were understood to have caused Mr. Farley to insist upon Mr. Adams remaining in the National committee. It had been planned to make Vice President Garner the National committeeman, but plans went askew due to stormy cross-winds which blew up when the Texas Democrats attempted to get together.

Mrs. Ross, through her secretary, sent word that she had no comment.

Administration leaders were discreetly silent as to whether National committee members now in Congress should be governed by the same rule. The Adminstration prefers to let them be guided by their own consciences. One of these is Mrs. Isabella Greenway, Congresswoman from Arizona and an intimate friend of the Roosevelts.

If Orman W. Ewing, of Utah, will resign from the National committee, he probably will be given a Federal post. Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, said last night that Mr. Ewing had appeared before the Federal Trade Commission representing a Utah gold mining company. At the Federal Trade Commission it was said Ewing had appeared as attorney of record at a hearing concerning Gold Producers, Inc.

Ewing Issues Denial.

Mr. Ewing said he had not appeared as attorney of record in any case before the Federal Trade Commission. He said he had been asked to advise the attorney, George D. Neilson, representing Gold Producers, Inc., regarding some aspects of the case, but that if his name appeared as an attorney it was without his knowledge or consent.

"I have never received a fee for handling any matters before Government departments," Mr. Ewing said. "I assisted in the gold case because Utah friends wrote me and asked me to lend a hand."

Senator Steiwer, commenting on the Ewing case, urged legislation to prevent persons of political position from appearing before Government departments. Chairman King of a Senate judiciary subcommittee said he expected to call a meeting today to consider the Vandenberg bill to prohibit National committee members and officers from accepting Federal appointments under the Treasury and forbidding them from attempting to influence any Government official. Senator Borah also has pending a bill to prohibit Senators and Representatives from accepting cases involving the Government or concerns operating in interstate commerce.

But it remained for Senator Byrnes, an Administration insider, to press the agitation to the point where it began to hurt. His bill would prevent Congressmen from going to Government departments to urge payment of claims, granting of contracts or making of awards.

Wants Them on the Job.

"It would give members of Congress time to study legislation instead of forcing them to leave the Capitol and travel all over the city acting as lawyers, brokers and salesmen," Senator Byrnes said.

The bill might well carry a short title reading, "An act to prohibit members of Congress from acting as messenger boys and to encourage the practice of statesmanship in Congress."

Senator Byrnes pointed out that many heads of departments must be confirmed by the Senate. He said many officials charged with administration of public funds are appointed on recommendation of Congressmen. Members of Congress, he added, also have the power of appropriating funds for extension or contraction of activities administered by these employes. Of course, nobody would intimate that anything like blackmail was possible under such a set-up, but the fact is that when a Congressman on a important committee wants action from a Government bureau or official he usually gets it. No bureau chief wants to go before an appropriation committee and ask more funds from some member whose errands he has refused to do.

Law Now Prohibits Pay.

"The law," said Senator Byrnes, "now prohibits a Congressman from receiving a financial consideration for representing a person in any claim against the Government or in procuring a contract. The object of my bill is not to limit the income of the public official, but to prevent the use of political influence. There is no difference if the political influence is used in order to secure political support instead of money.

"No claimant really wants a Senator or Representative to present the facts or the law to the department. He generally has a lawyer to do that. What he desires is the political influence of the Congressman."

Senator Byrnes would fix a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment up to three months for any member who represented a person before a Government department seeking payment of a claim, a loan or a contract involving public expenditure.

This proposal for putting Congress under a code of fair-trade practice was received with mixed feelings around the Capitol, for it touched a tender spot.

King Explains Situation.

"Many Senators frequently receive requests from constituents asking their aid in obtaining payment of claims, pensions or other such matters," said Senator King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate judiciary subcommittee considering the Vandenburg antilobbying bill. "I received one such request today and it is my intention to urge whatever obligation the Government has in this case."

Many members privately lament that so much of their time must be given to running errands for constituents. One senator said yesterday he had visited three departments that day, spending nearly three hours on minor chores for his constituents. In one case a senator said he sometimes made eight or ten calls a day. Others delegate most of this work to secretaries. Sometimes department officials go to the offices of the senators and congressmen.

Recently a member of the House Appropriations Committee telephoned the War Department to inquire about a certain minor matter and within an hour two brigadier generals were waiting in his anteroom with brief cases and thoroughly obliging dispositions. After all, the Army has a hard enough time getting anything past the hard-boiled chairman of the Military Affairs Appropriations subcommittee, Representative Ross Collins, of Mississippi.

Some members complained that the Byrnes bill would prevent them from looking into cases involving veterans' affairs, homestead claims, tax difficulties and other such matters. One cited a claim that had been gathering dust for two years. The aggrieved constituent turned to his senator and obtained immediate action.

U. S. Demands German Reply In Bond Tangle

for next Thursday. Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, is only prepared to discuss the question of discrimination, according to cables. He does not wish to talk about the newly revised interest rate nor the matter of repurchase of bonds at low values.

Presumably an effort to obtain a broader discussion of all aspects of the foreign bond situation was one of the purposes of the meeting yesterday between the President and Dr. Luther.

Trade Angle Signifieant.

Significant is the last sentence of the White House statement bespeaking this country's desire for a more flourishing trade with Germany. Inasmuch as the balance of trade is favorable to the United States, reprisals to force full payment of interest are out of the question. But bait can be held out in the form of better trade prospects—providing Germany listens to American desires on the interest question.

Britain, with an unfavorable balance of trade, is in a position to threaten sequestration of German balances in London. This is the method used by Switzerland and Holland to enforce full payments. Unable to apply effective pressure, the President pointed to future trade possibilities to accomplish the same end.

Many Germans were pleased to learn President Roosevelt had called in Dr. Luther. Assuming the President spoke rather firmly, they pointed out this can scarcely fail to have some influence on Dr. Schacht. The dictator of Germany's finances has in the past paid scant attention to warnings from the German foreign office to the effect that his actions still further alienate the world toward the third Reich.

A less ruthless tone may be looked for in Berlin as a result of yesterday's rather unusual step—the summoning of an ambassador when the answer to a cabled question is deemed unduly delayed.

Increase in Food Fund Denied Navy

Swanson Points in Vain to Higher Prices.

The Budget Bureau overruled allowances for increased cost of food and other commodities during the next fiscal year in the Navy appropriations bill reported to the House yesterday.

The Navy asked 45 cents per man for its enlisted personnel's daily food budget, instead of the 38.05 cents allowed by the Budget Bureau, published hearings disclosed.

"No allowance has been made for increase in the cost of rations, fuel or other materials, and frankly I do not know what the Navy Department would do should any or all of these commodities rise in price," Secretary of the Navy Swanson told the committee.

Pneumonia Kills Baby After Brain Operation

Baltimore, Jan. 22 (AP).—Billy Koecher, 6-month-old Racine, Wis., baby, who had been brought to Johns Hopkins Hospital for a brain operation, died yesterday.

After an operation by Dr. Walter E. Dandy, noted brain specialist, the baby developed pneumonia and his condition was serious for several days. He was suffering from hydrocephalus.

Attack on Boy And CCC Riot Stir Yorktown

Lad, 9, Seriously Injured; Campers Protest Arrest of 10.

Yorktown, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Yorktown is quiet today after a disturbed week-end which saw a small boy seriously wounded by an unindentified Negro and the York County Jail surrounded by a grumbling group of CCC workers, who sought to release ten of their number held for breaking into a boathouse.

Officers with bloodhounds hunted the man who fractured the skull of Alfred Moore, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ferguson, and threatened the boy's 12-year-old sister. Physicians say he has an even chance to recover.

The attack occurred Saturday afternoon when Alfred was sent into a nearby thicket to obtain a piece of rope. Attracted by screams of his sister a few minutes later, the parents ran into the woods. The girl told them a Negro had attempted to grab her. Looking farther, they found Alfred's cap and following a trail of blood they found the boy in a stump hole.

Meanwhile, ten CCC workers, charged with breaking into the boathouse at the Navy mine depot near Yorktown, had been placed in the county jail. Hearing of the arrests a crowd of their coworkers surrounded the jail. They shouted for the release of the 10 men and threatened to tear down the jail.

Camp officers hurried to the scene and, after a conference with civil authorities, took the prisoners back to the camp and the crowd dispersed. Today CCC workers are confined in camp.

Suvich Returns to Rome.

Rome, Jan. 22 (AP).—Fulvio Suvich, under secretary of state, returned today from Vienna, and soon will report to Premier Mussolini on his conversations with Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria.

Yorktown Area Projects Show Fast Progress

Schedule Exceeded for Cleanup Work; Rat Drive Starts.

Yorktown, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Colonial National Monument officials here today said the activity on five subprojects in the Yorktown area, financed by CWA funds, "demonstrated how well public money can be used and to what good effect."

Activities here have been confined thus far to clean-up work, elimination of fire hazards and preservation of valuable timber. Because the men not only have done all work outlined for them but have exceeded the schedule, new objectives probably will be added.

Old fortifications in the Great Run area have been cleaned of briar and bramble, the Yorktown Creek and Ballard Creek properties have been cleared and some transplanting accomplished.

The Great Run area covers 50 acres of woodland and swamp. Already 20 acres have been cleared.

The York River shoreline, storm-ravaged last August, is being cleaned up and excavations made on the sites of historical buildings have resulted in important finds.

New Rat Drive Launched.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—The Civil Works Administration which successfully waged war on mosquitoes in many Virginia localities will go "big game" hunting this week in a war on rats, to curb Brill's disease, a type of typhus fever.

The campaign, under Col. French Simpson, medical director of the United States Public Health Service, in charge of the Government quarantine station for Hampton Roads, will embrace Norfolk, Newport News and Portsmouth. The work will employ 54 men for two or three months at 45 cents an hour.

Fredericksburg Jobs Stop.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Plans to hire 800 men to construct a high school stadium and 40 men to improve the city park have been abandoned here on orders from National Administrator Harry L. Hopkins that no additions are to be made to working forces until further notice.

The new 24-hour week order will govern local projects, while research employes of the Battlefield Park historic staff, a Federal project, have been placed on a 15-hour week.

Danville Assessors Named.

Danville, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Judge Henry C. Leigh has appointed C. Maurice Flinn and Pryor G. Ragland to assess real estate in Danville this year. The assessment, taken every four years, will be the basis of tax computation in 1935.

Some lowering of the assessment is expected owing to the fall in the "fair market value" of real estate and this is expected to lower the city's tax revenue.

7,338 Still Lack Jobs.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—A check of the rolls of the National reemployment service for the Lynchburg district showed 7,338 persons registered but still out of work as last week ended. There were 538 placements in the past week, mostly in civil works projects.

The unemployed are distributed as follows: Lynchburg, 2,331; Amherst County, 1,460; Bedford County, 1,231, and Campbell County, 2,136.

Many Transients Aided.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—The first two months' activity of the Bristol Transient Bureau ending today turned Federal funds totaling $4,755.25 into cash drawers of Bristol merchants. This money provided food, shelter, clothing, and medical attention for 1,359 transient men, 163 women, 71 children, and 31 resident families. House-to-house begging has noticeably decreased.

Bristol, Tenn., CWA workers last week received $4,259.24; in Bristol, Va., the total was $4,747.61, and in Kingsport, Tenn., $4,823.25.

Valley Farmers Plan Loan Body Tomorrow

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Farmers from Frederick, Clarke, Shenandoah, Warren and Page Counties will meet here Wednesday to establish a local production credit association as a branch of the Federal Farm Credit Administration.

The association will secure Federal loans for crop production. Representative farmers of the five counties will constitute the officers and directors.

Building Gains At Penal Farm

Maryland Group Nearing Completion; Power Plant Begun.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). The permanent farm buildings at the State penal farm at Roxbury, near here, are nearing completion. The buildings are being constructed of stone, steel and concrete by inmate labor.

Excavations also are in progress for five residences of staff members, including Superintendent Hal T. Kearns. The staff members have been living in farm homes which were there when a group of farms were purchased by the State three years ago.

Permanent buildings completed in the farm group include the horse barn, two cow barns, pen barn for young stock, feed building, two silos, corn crib, two bull pens and root cellar. The latter has a capacity of 20,000 bushels and it is there that vegetables grown on the farm are stored. The dairy barn, which will have modern equipment for pasteurizing the milk used by the 200 inmates, and making butter and cheese, is nearly finished.

Ground also has been broken for a farm power plant.

Clarke Race Body Has $1,504 Fund

J. T. Lindsey Reelected Horse Show Head.

Berryville, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—A balance of $1,504.09, the largest in years, was reported by the treasurer at the annual meeting of stockholders of the Clarke County Horse and Colt Show Association.

There were 362 out of a possible 542 shares represented. H. C. Warden, chairman of the meeting, was elected delegate and G. H. Levi, alternate, to the annual meeting of the State Horse Show Association Friday in Warrenton.

John T. Lindsey was reelected president, H. C. Warden, vice president and A. B. Hummer secretary-treasurer of the association. The following directors were elected: John T. Lindsey, H. C. Warden, A. B. Hummer, K. N. Gilpin, E. A. Lindsey, G. H. Levi, Capt. Ewart Johnston, W. Lodge Bowles and L. H. Bell, manager.

Virginian Dies, Noose on Neck; Suicide Scoffed

Family Fears Widower Met Foul Play; Coroner Starts Inquiry.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). In the face of family insistence that their father did not commit suicide, City Coroner John E. Coles last night began investigation of the death of J. Isaac Posey, 72.

Posey's body was found at his home yesterday with a noose around his neck, the rope being attached to a bedstead. Relatives declared the distance between the point where the rope was secured and Posey's body was insufficient to have brought death by hanging.

A report was being checked that Posey, a widower, planned to be married yesterday. Relatives also said $62 found in Posey's clothes did not represent the full amount believed in his possession.

Posey is survived by five daughters, Mrs. Hannah Austin, of Dumfries; Mrs. Carrie Pursay, of California; Mrs. Estelle Kendall, the Misses Flossie and Genevieve Posey, and three sons, Joseph, Samuel and James, all of Fredericksburg.

Nine Armory Jobs Delayed

Maryland Guard Officers Hear CWA Projects Are Suspended.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Plans to improve nine armories of the First Regiment, Maryland National Guard, commanded by Col. D. John Markey, of Frederick, have been suspended temporarily, it was announced here today following the annual midwinter conference of the 64 officers of the regiment.

The announcement was made by Brig. Gen. Milton A. Record, attorney general, who added he believed Congress will appropriate money later to resume CWA armory projects.

In addition to Gen. Record, guests were Col. Oswald McNeese, former adjutant general of Louisiana; Lieut. Col. D. M. Cheston, and Capt. G. M. Tydings, Baltimore, Regular Army instructors.

Col. Markey, who presided, outlined administrative and training policies of the regiment. He said the regiment is fully staffed. There are 475 assigned reservists with the regiment, making a total strength of 67 officers and 1,586 men. Attendance at drills for 1933 was 90.59 per cent.

Shore Resort Sold at Auction

Foreclosure Sale Brings $120,000; New Plans Due Soon.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Real and personal property of the Annapolis Roads Co., operators of Annapolis Roads, resort near here, was sold under mortgage foreclosure proceedings today to the Equitable Co., of Baltimore, for $120,000.

Officials said a statement concerning the future of the resort would be made within a few days.

The property which includes 342 acres of land, club and tennis buildings, nine-hole golf course, and other buildings, sold for $110,000, while $10,000 more was paid for chattels equipment.

The Equitable Co. recently instituted proceedings for foreclosure, claiming a large amount of interest, as well as principal, were overdue. The Armstrong Co. sought to block the sale through an injunction, but this move was denied in circuit court.

Carroll County Housing Report Due Saturday

Survey of Rural Needs Is Nearly Done; Canvass of Cost Soon.

Westminster, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). The farm housing survey being conducted in Carroll County by the Bureau of Home Economics probably will be completed Saturday. The survey of repairs and improvements needed in rural homes will cover 2,000 houses, 1,800 of which have been visited already by field agents.

Surveys of 1,000 other homes are being made in Carroll and Talbot Counties. The surveys will include the homes of 10 per cent of the total rural population.

Miss Agnes Slindee, home demonstration agent of Carroll County, said the cost of the repairs will be secured in a second survey within two weeks, covering 200 of the homes now being inspected.

Jobless Women Listed.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Registration of unemployed women in Hagerstown and Washington County was started today by the National Reemployment Bureau, Women's Division.

Razing Hospital Planned.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—The Alleghany County Commissioners have submitted to the county CWA committee the project of razing the vacant Western Maryland Hospital building. The brick and other material will be salvaged and the lot graded.

The vacant structure has been set afire several times by trespassers, and the January grand jury, Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka and other city officials have recommended that the building be razed as a fire menace to nearby property.

Many Projects Under Way.

Piedmont, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Establishment of CWA sewing rooms for Mineral County women in Piedmont, Keyser, Ridgeley and Elk Garden has been approved.

A stone-base storm sewer at Ridgeley is another project. The county stone quarry has been turned over to R. A. Gibson, CWA administrator, who has put men to work getting out stone.

A farm housing survey, a Federal project, will be undertaken shortly. A survey is under way to locate the abandoned mines in the county, which will be sealed.

A garden project has been approved. A retaining wall will be constructed at the Dixie School in Frankfort District.

Mayor T. D. Campbell, W. H. Fredlock and John F. Rose were appointed a committee to suggest CWA projects to be undertaken in Piedmont.

Russell Gets New Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). R. J. Russell, director of the Federal Emergency Food Relief Administration for West Virginia, has been named assistant to William N. Beehler, State civil works administrator. The food distribution work in the State is well under way.

W. W. Smith Goes To Missouri Post

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Warren W. Smith, of Masonton, Preston County, has gone to Kansas City, Mo., to assume his new duties as assistant quartermaster general in the National headquarters of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Smith formerly was State commander of the V. F. W. Lately he worked in the office of Representative Jennings Randolph, of Elkins, in Washington and also served as a Senate attache.

One of the youngest members of the A. E. F., Smith served 29 months in the Thirty-eighth Division as a bugler and was discharged at the close of the war at the age of 18.

3 Jail Breakers Returned to Cells

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Captured at Brunswick, Md., Clyde Demoss, 28, and Howard Shaw, jr., 18, who broke jail at Grafton January 4 after slugging the jailer and taking his keys, are back in the same jail.

Both were being held on a charge of breaking and entering a Grafton drug store. They will now be tried for the crime of escaping.

Edward Streets, 47, of the Laurel Creek section in Barbour County, who broke out of the Barbour County Jail at Philippi some time ago, is back, having been recaptured at Petersburg, where he had found a job in a coal mine. He has a misdemeanor charge against him.

Rotary Vice President At Bristol Tomorrow

Bristol, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—The Bristol Rotary Club will be host Wednesday evening to Dr. Herbert Schofield, of Loughborough, England, vice president of Rotary International, now on a tour of the United States.

Dr. Schofield is in Virginia this week.

Adams Drafts Plan to Lower Property Taxes

Finds Real Estate Carries 64% of School Burden.

Richmond, Jan. 22 (AP).—Delegate Berkely D. Adams, of Charlotte, is drafting a report of the State Economy committee, in which he will offer a plan to relieve the real estate taxation burden in Virginia.

He has calculated that real estate carries nearly all the cost of local government and that localities pay 76.5 per cent of the total cost of public free schools.

Real estate carries 64.2 per cent of the public school burdens, he claims, and State subjects for taxation pay only 23.5 per cent.

Not all members of the committee agree with these calculations, but they have agreed that "glaring inequalities" exist under Virginia tax laws and that they benefit most corporations and rich individuals.

Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax, committee chairman, has endeavored to reconcile Mr. Adams' basic report with another report by State Tax Commissioner Morrissett.

"Everybody is saying now the public school responsibility is a joint one between localities and the State, and that the constitutional command that the Assembly provide public schools is followed by a section providing for cities and towns to levy school taxes," Mr. Adams said.

"All this is very well, but nobody says what proportion the State and localities should bear. I think anyone will admit that real estate is carrying more than its share of the burden. I think, in brief, that schools should get at least $6,000,000 more from tax sources outside of real estate.

Hopewell Judgeship Not Yet Acted Upon

Hopewell, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—The term of Judge Thomas B. Robertson in corporation court expires February 1 but action on the seat has not yet been taken by the general assembly.

Judge Robertson, judge of this court for 16 years, is a candidate to succeed himself.

Recently the Hopewell Bar Association indorsed Archer L. Jones, former commonwealth's attorney, for the judgeship. Mr. Jones also has been indorsed by Senator W. O. Rogers, of Waverly, and Delegate J. Howard Holleman.

Ouster proceedings against Judge Robertson in the legislature of 1932 failed.

Dr. P. M. Bikle, 89, Once Dean, Buried

Gettysburg Educator and Minister Long Ill.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). The funeral of Dr. Philip Melanchton Bikle, 89, educator, author and dean emeritus of Gettysburg College, who died Friday at Gettysburg, were held today from the college chapel.

Dr. Bikle was a native of Smithsburg, Washington County, Md. He was a graduate of Gettysburg College and was ordained a Lutheran minister in 1869. He was vice president of Lutherville Female Seminary from 1870 to 1873, and professor at Gettysburg College and dean from 1889 until 1924, when he retired. He also was editor of the Lutheran Quarterly and was president of the Maryland Synod some years ago.

Dr. Bikle has been in failing health since 1931, when he was injured in a fall. He was the last of a family of eight brothers. Four sons survive.

Man, 85, Ends Life Fretting Over Tax

Z. E. Zimmerman Dead in Frederick Son's Home.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Fretting because he believed the Government was investigating to learn why he had not paid an income tax, Zachary E. Zimmerman, 85, retired farmer, hanged himself to the bedpost yesterday at the home of his son, Harry F. Zimmerman.

He had been ill and suffered from mental depression for some years. It is said he tried to take his life some time ago. Magistrate D. Guy Motter, acting coroner, gave a verdict of suicide.

He is survived by four sons, William B. and Harry E. Zimmerman, this city; Linwood E. Zimmerman, Howard County, and Fred W. Zimmerman, of Sykesville, and three daughters, Mrs. Joseph A. Jamison, this city; Mrs. Herman Witter, Doubs, and Mrs. Kate M. Zimmerman, at home. The funeral will be tomorrow with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mrs. Eliza Joyce Dies in Annapolis

Heart Attack Fatal; Rites Tomorrow.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Mrs. Eliza J. Joyce, 90, widow of Cyrus N. Joyce and a member of a prominent Anne Arundel County family, died of a heart attack today at her home.

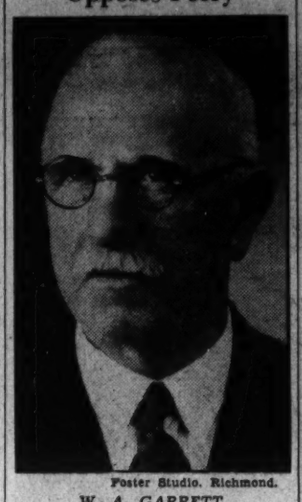

Funeral services will be held from the residence at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday, and interment will be in Cedar Bluff Cemetery.

Mrs. Joyce was a daughter of Edward and Mary Collinson, of South River. She is survived by three sons, Dr. J. Burch Joyce, Cyrus N. Joyce and Dr. J. Collinson Joyce, and two daughters, Mrs. R. Tilghman Brice and Mrs. Walter C. Munroe.

Twentieth Child Born.

Breckenridge, Tex. (U.P.).—Dave Roberson has become a proud father for the twentieth time. A 6-pound son was born recently to his second wife.

Opposes Peery

Foster Studio, Richmond.

W. A. GARRETT,

veteran of the Virginia State Senate Finance Commmittee, who has broken with the Peery administration on plans to increase taxes in order to swell school appropriations. Senator Garrett represents the city of Danville and surrounding territory.

Valley Lutherans Going To Roanoke Convention

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—All Lutheran churches of Shenandoah County will be represented at the 105th annual convention of the Lutheran Synod of Virginia which opens tomorrow in Roanoke. The convention will continue through Friday.

Delegates from Shenandoah County are: Emanuel Lutheran Church, Woodstock, the Rev. J. P. Derrick and George R. Santmiers; Shenandoah parish, the Rev. P. E. Shealy and Bryan Hepner; Toms Brook parish, the Rev. A. R. Shumate and E. R. Miley; Edinburg parish, the Rev. B. F. Dasher; Mt. Jackson parish, the Rev. C. J. Rice and E. Z. Dingledine.

West Virginia Debates Again On Home Rule

Doringer Bill Renews Old Log-Rolling Issue in Legislature.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Although many home rule bills have been introduced in the West Virginia Legislature and have been consistently defeated, Delegate Fred L. Doringer (Democrat). of Marion County, has introduced another at this session. Members heretofore have desired to retain the charter rights for log-rolling purposes.

The Doringer measure would give broad authority for any town or city of more than 2,000 inhabitants to frame a new municipal charter. Upon a petition of 10 per cent of the voters, councils could submit a proposal for a commission to draft a new charter at the next regular election after adoption of the ordinance.

The ballots would bear the names of candidates without party designation. Candidates for the charter commission would be nominated on petitions of not fewer than 10 per cent of the voters, but not requiring more than 1,500. A majority vote would be required to elect commission members with the 15 receiving the highest number of votes constituting the charter commission. Provision also is made for minor amendments to any existing charter.

Much Time Now Lost.

Doringer's measure is being studied by the House committee on Counties, districts and municipalities. One reason advanced for adoption is that too much time is consumed in the Legislature at every session in squabbles over local charter changes. A recent instance was the prolonegd fight over the Charleston charter bill, which finally was vetoed by Gov. Kump.

The redistricting bill affecting its own membership that has been passed by the House of Delegates would retain the present House membership of 94. The changes in representation provide for a reduction in eight rural counties and an increase in six industrial counties.

Kanawha County's representation would be increased from 6 to 8, Logan County from 1 to 3, Mingo County from 1 to 2, Raleigh County from 2 to 3, and McDowell and Cabell Counties, from 4 to 5 each. Counties that would have their delegates cut from 2 to 1 are Berkeley, Braxton, Jackson, Mason, Preston, Randolph, Roane and Wetzel.

Sales Tax Urged.

Bills authorizing municipalities to levy sales and privilege taxes for current expenses have been introduced by Delegate F. M. Peters (Democrat), of Mercer. Both were drawn by the West Virginia League of Municipalities and introduced at the request of Mayor A. G. Martin, of Fairmont, president of the league.

The sales tax measure would empower any city to levy up to 1 per cent on the annual gross business of any person or organization selling at retail. The companion measure gives authority to assess a tax for the privilege of engaging in any business or profession.

Senator's Trial Opens, Divorcee Key Witness

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 22 (AP).—With an attractive divorcee as the State's key witness, the trial of State Senator William H. Herner, accused of soliciting a $1,500 bribe, opened today.

Attorneys for Herner, chairman of the powerful Senate finance committee, moved to quash the indictment, but there were no arguments on the motion, and Judge Dana Reynolds overruled it.

Virginia Synod Luther League Opens Meeting

Delegates Are Convening at Roanoke; Black Will Speak Wednesday.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Delegates from Virginia, Eastern Tennessee, and West Virginia were arriving here today for the 105th annual convention of the Lutheran Synod of Virginia, which convenes for the eighth consecutive time at St. Mark's Church tomorrow.

Dr. J. J. Scherer, of Richmond, president, will deliver the convention sermon. Business sessions are scheduled in the morning and afternoon.

Arthur Black, of Washington, will speak Wednesday. Other speakers that day and evening are Dr. F. C. Longaker, Roanoke College, and the Rev. Raymond L. Markley, of Lynchburg.

Thursday afternoon, a memorial service is scheduled, with Dr. John A. Morehead, of New York; Dr. C. M. Teuferl, of Staunton; Dr. Charles J. Smith, of Roanoke, and the Rev. T. H. Shuey, of Staunton, as speakers.

The Rev. H. A. MacCullough, jr., of Chattanooga, will speak Thursday night, and Dr. M. E. Thomas, of Baltimore, Friday. Adjournment is expected Friday night. Choirs of St. Mark's Church, College Church, Salem, and the Virginia Heights Church, Roanoke, will furnish music during the convention.

CCC Men Enjoy New Electric Lights

Chancellorsville Unit Has Many Improvements.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—The members of the CCC camp at Chancellorsville are enjoying the recently installed electric lights, hot and cold showers and improved water and heating service.

One of the members remarked that the men will now "have to sit on the fence in spare time thinking up things to complain about."

All gaps in the ranks having been replaced by local recruits, the camp's personnel is now 198, or close to its full strength of 200 men. Officers in charge are Capt. D. K. Mumma, Lieut. Malcolm and Lieut. E. H. Toney. Two noncommissioned officers at the camp are expected soon to be returned to their commands.

Republican Club Reorganized.

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—The Young Republican Club, of Mineral County, has been reorganized and will sponsor social functions, such as dances, card parties and banquets. It is planned to establish branches in the county at various towns.

New Link Begins Soon For Alleghany Road

Clifton Forge, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Construction of the new link in Route 60 in Alleghany County will be started in 30 days. Sharon Church has granted right of way through the church property, and condemning of the rest of the right of way will begin at once.

The new bridge across the Cowpasture River near Sharon has been provided and the contract will be let soon.

McKown Wins Court Position In Berkeley

Kump Names Democrat to Settle Tie Vote for Judgeship.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—After 14 months of legal maneuvering, J. C. McKown, Democrat, today was on the verge of taking his seat as third member of Berkeley County Court, a post for which he and William M. Johnson, Republican, contested in the 1932 election, with a tie vote.

Acting under a legislative statute passed last week, Gov. H. G. Kump today notified McKown of his appointment.

McKown's appearance in the court is expected to break a political deadlock between the other two members, W. R. Keller, Republican, and John Ellis, Democrat, which has prevented organization of this year's work.

The two-man court finished out 1933 under the presidency of Keller after Johnson, filling an unexpired term, retired when the Supreme Court ruled the men were tied and that, therefore, there had been no election.

McKown is a farmer, business man and former sheriff of this county. Some years ago he was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Senate. When he qualifies the county court here will be Democratic for the first time since 1918.

Car Forces Policeman Into Ditch, Then Flees

Danville, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Police today were seeking an unidentified man said to have driven his automobile deliberately toward Motorcycle Policeman W. A. Newell, forcing him into a ditch and lacerating his foot severely.

The officer and eyewitnesses said the car driver drove at him, then escaped.

Hagerstown Man Robbed.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Frank E. Gack told police two men jumped on his car on the Country Club road on the outskirts of the city, took his pocketbook containing $20 and disappeared.

Wounded Men, Alleged Killers, In Bristol Jail

Bausell and Son Injured in Fatal Fight; Drivers Accused in Deaths.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Under murder indictments in the fatal shooting of T. E. Cornett and daughter, Mrs. Virginia Cornett Bausell, January 13, at Rural Retreat, Va., Henry F. Bausell and son, Bernace K. Bausell, were transferred by ambulance yesterday from Trigg's Hospital to the local jail.

The wounds they suffered in the fatal gun battle having improved sufficiently to permit the transfer, their jailing was on a court order by Judge Horace M. Sutherland, of Wythe County Circuit Court.

The Bausells were accused as the aftermath of a shooting affray at the Cornett home, which they said started over a disagreement whether the Bausells or the Cornetts should have custody of a child of Bernace and his estranged wife.

Two Motorists Accused.

Abingdon, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Two manslaughter charges arising out of pedestrians' deaths on the highway headed the list of cases which Commonwealth's Attorney Fred C. Parks presented to the grand jury of Washington County Circuit Court here today.

Howard Campbell is accused in the death of William Heath, young Lodi, Va., farmer who was struck down by an alleged hit-and-run driver at Glade Spring. Charles Burnett is charged in the death of Pat Leonard, 20, of Bristol, fatally injured by a motorcycle as he walked along the Barytes road.

R. W. Helbert is under indictment charged with shooting William Price, his brother-in-law, January 11, in an altercation at the former's store at Holston. Va. Wiley Wise also indicted, is accused of shooting his wife in the thigh.

Other major cases include a charge of criminal asault against Cass Taylor and a double charge of arson and larceny against Catherine Nowlin, Negro cook for W. N. Neff at Abingdon. The woman confessed, police said, to having stolen two diamond rings and other articles from the Neff home, then setting it afire. The rings were recovered. Mr. Neff is a member of the Virginia Legislature

Judge E. T. Carter, of Scott County, is presiding over the court for Judge John J. Stuart.

All Rum Cases Convicted.

Danville, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—The Pittsylvania County Circuit Court set a record last week by convicting all of the 30 csaes on the docket involving the State liquor law.

For months, there had been a tendency to be lenient with liquor law violators in view of the moribund conditions of the State enforcement act.

$5,300 in Confederate Bonds Found in Virginia Relics

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Several interesting relics of the past have turned up recently to remind citizens anew of Fredericksburg's historic background.

Three Confederate States of America bonds, all issued in 1863 to George Butzner, grandfather of W. W. Butzner, local attorney, were discovered. They are 6 per cent certificates for $3,000, $300 and $2,000, and were to mature in 1893 and 1898. Though Confederate currency is not rare, these bonds are said to be scarce.

A tabulation of votes cast in a "viva voce" election in Falmouth of seven town trustees on May 1, 1858, taken when 21 qualified voters turned out to announce orally the men of their choice, was found among some old papers by W. D. Reamy. The poll, held at Green & Scott's office, was certified by Duff Green, collector, and W. P. Conway, justice of the peace.

An interesting letter, written 103 years ago by the Rev. John Clark, has been found in the library of the late James O. Lee, of Stafford. The Rev. Mr. Clark educated himself to the Baptist ministry and served as pastor of White Oak, Woodbridge, Chappawamsic and Front Royal churches.

Ship-Building Loans Halted By New Policy

Of 126 Millions Owed U. S. 40 Millions Overdue, Bureau Reports.

A more strict policy regarding Government loans for ship construction was announced yesterday in the first public statement by Henry H. Heimann, newly appointed director of the Shipping Board Bureau.

In view that $126,000,000 still is outstanding on $145,000,000 loaned by the Government, no new construction loans will be made for two or three months.

Of the $126,000,000 still due, $40,000,000 represents balances from companies in arrears in their payments.

Differential Studied.

Relative to the Senate's investigation into ocean mail contracts, Heimann pointed out:

"A thorough study of the mail contracts, as well as all other contracts now in effect with the bureau is to be made. There is also to be a continued study of differential between American and foreign shipbuilding and operating costs, which is of basic importance in any consideration of a Government subsidy policy."

While recognizing the principle of aiding the American merchant marine by subsidies in the form of mail contracts, the bureau will, in the future, make a distinction between those concerns needing Government aid and others.

"There will be initiated a policy of requiring greater financial responsibility on the part of those seeking Government aid before execution of contracts," the statement continued.

Compromise Policy.

"There is an excess of tonnage in the industry now, and the Government desires to adhere to a policy that will stabilize rather than disturb the industry."

A compromise between further involving the Government in ship operation and its complete withdrawal is announced in conclusion:

"In keeping with existing legislation, it will be the policy of the Shipping Board Bureau to gradually relinquish operation of ships either directly or indirectly when and if this can be accomplished with equity to the Government. However, should it be necessary for the protection of the Government's interest to go further into ship operation to protect Government obligations, such action will be taken, though in that event it should be a temporary expedient."

Roosevelt Move to Grasp McCooey Post

Tammany to Be Politically Isolated If it Loses Brooklyn Power.

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Restriction of Tammany Hall's domination of the city's Democracy to Manhattan was seen today as permanent party members predicted a Roosevelt supporter would be named to succeed John H. McCooey, as Brooklyn leader.

It was partly through McCooey, Brooklyn leader for almost a quarter of a century who died yesterday, that Tammany retained its grip in the five boroughs.

Tammany, wakened by the sweeping victory of Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, was already threatened with a fight for existence—with Postmaster General James A. Farley and Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn, heading the anti-Tammanyites.

Brooklyn May Go Independent.

Persons prominent in party councils expressed the belief that with the death of McCooey, the Wigwam and John F. Curry, its leader, will be politically isolated. Brooklyn, with the largest voting strength in the city, was expected to revert under new leadership to independence.

Under a leader satisfactory to the National Administration Brooklyn is expected to become an important part of the State organization.

The fight to oust Curry and to reorganize Tammany from within, which had already gained momentum, is expected to come to a quick climax.

Farley and Flynn Strengthened.

With the death of McCooey, party heads believed Farley and Flynn would be materially strengthened. Flynn, the only important city leader who backed President Roosevelt for the nomination in 1932, probably will be named National committeeman to succeed McCooey.

Four prominent Democrats were mentioned to succeed McCooey and three were regarded as Roosevelt-Lehman backers. The fourth, Frank V. Kelly, who stood with McCooey in backing John P. O'Brien for reelection as mayor last year, was satisfactory to Farley, leaders said.

However, Postmaster Frank J. Sinnott was said to be the Farley favorite. The others mentioned were Sheriff Frank J. Quayle and Alderman Kenneth F. Sutherland. All three deserted McCooey last November to support the mayoral candidacy of Joseph V. McKee, backed by Flynn and Farley.

Farley's Power Valuable.

Prominent party members asserted Farley would be in a favorable position to influence election of the new leader by reason of his power to dispense Federal patronage. They called attention to the dearth of patronage for the Brooklyn organization caused by last fall's losses.

The new leader will be chosen by the Kings County executive committee. With the chairmanship of that committee goes the county leadership. It was not expected a meeting would be held for a month. Meantime, a committee probably will be named to exercise a stop-gap leadership.

Annulment Sought.

Challenging the validity of a decree by which her husband obtained a divorce from his first wife, Grace M. Campbell, 1359 Maryland avenue northeast, yesterday asked District Supreme Court to annul her marriage. She claimed her husband did not live in Virginia when he obtained papers separating himself from his first wife.

DIED.

KEEFE—On Sunday, January 21, 1934, at her residence, 1408 Spring road northwest, TERESA, beloved wife of the late Edward J. Keefe. Funeral from the above residence, Wednesday, January 24, at 8:30 a. m., thence to Sacred Heart Church where requiem mass will be said at 9 a. m. for the repose of her soul. Interment Mount Olivet Cemetery. Relatives and friends are invited.

McDONALD—On Monday, January 22, 1934, GERALD E., beloved husband of Annie McDonald (nee Matthews) and father of Charles W., Gerald D., Helen E., Anna C. and Mary M. McDonald. Funeral from his late residence, 3313 O street northwest, on Thursday January 25, at 8:30 a. m., thence to Holy Trinity Church, where mass will be offered at 9:10 a. m. for the repose of his soul. Relatives and friends are invited. Interment at Mount Olivet Cemetery. Services by W. W. Chambers Co.

SHUFELDT—On Sunday, January 21, 1934, at 9 a. m., at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, ROBERT WILSON SHUFELDT, major, Medical Corps, U. S. A., retired, son of the late Rear Admiral Robert Wilson Shufeldt, U. S. N., and beloved husband of Althild Dagny Shufeldt, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. Funeral services at Fort Myer Chapel on Tuesday, January 23, at 2 p. m. Relatives and friends invited. Interment at Arlington National Cemetery, with full military honors. Please omit flowers. (Services by W. W. Chambers Co.)

WILKINSON—On Saturday, January 20, 1934, at Mount Alto Hospital, JAMES C. WILKINSON. Funeral from the W. W. Chambers Co. Southeast funeral home, 517 Eleventh street southeast, on Tuesday, January 23, at 8:30 a. m.; thence to St. Peter's Church, where mass will be offered at 9 a. m. for the repose of his soul. Relatives and friends invited. Interment at Arlington National Cemetery. (Services by W. W. Chambers Co.)

Senate Group Seeks to Limit Life of Dollar Revaluation

he and Senator King (Democrat), Utah, discussed silver legislation with the President. Both said Mr. Roosevelt had been "encouraging."

A Silver Amendment.

Later in the day a report spread that Herman Oliphant, general counsel to the Secretary of the Treasury, was at work on an amendment to the gold revaluation bill dealing with silver. This could not be confirmed officially.

Before the Senate committee closed its hearings yesterday, Owen D. Young, industrialist, vice chairman of the New York Reserve Bank and former chairman of a German reparations commission, pleaded with the Senate group to revise the bill to make it an emergency measure instead of permanent legislation, and to expand the authority over the stabilization fund to include the Federal Reserve system.

Young urged the committee to go slow so as not to "abolish the Federal Reserve system—even unintentionally." Pointing out the possibility of a credit expansion of between $30,000,000,000 and $40,000,000,000 as a result of a ultization of the Government's profit emanating from dollar revaluation, Young warned that the bill would destroy all effective control over such an inflationary movement.

Advisers Voice Approval.

Earlier, Prof. George F. Warren and Prof. James Harvey Rogers, Presidential monetary advisers, appeared before the committee to give 100 per cent indorsement to the revaluation measure. In the list of witnesses — Government offivers, bankers, monetary experts and others—who have paraded before the committee, only Profs. Warren and Rogers and a commodity broker named Robert Harris approved the bill in its entirety.

Among the other witnesses yesterday James H. Rand, jr., chairman of the committee for the Nation, the program of which has closely preceded the Administration course, objected to giving the Secretary of the Treasury the powers conferred in the bill. He would set up a Federal monetary administration or a central bank of issue.

Walter W. Stewart, a former director of research for the Federal Reserve Board and a former adviser to the Bank of England, expressed agreement with Young, contending that the bill would "nullify, if not scrap, the Federal Reserve system," since it would "emasculate the fundamental purpose"—control over the volume of credit, of that system.

Stewart contended the measure was based on "the abstract theory of men whose integrity I do not question, but who lack an understanding of practical problems of credit administration."

Stewart attempted to impress on the committee that the "inflationary aspect of this bill arises not from the deveuation of the dollar, but from the use of the stabilization fund."

He said the belief that this bill meant stabilization might prove to be "a most dangerous illusion."

Both opponents and proponents of the measure at last seemed to be in agreement that the bill contained the germ of a great inflation. They disagreed, however, over whether this inflation could be controlled once it was started. Young, estimating the possible inflation at between $30,000,000,000 and $40,000,000,000, indicated he thought it might get out of hand.

Prof. Rogers pointed out utilization of the gold profit constituted "a direct inflationary influence of the first magnitude," further described by him as a "ninwithdrawable base for a loan and deposit expansion of at least $7,000,000,000, and more likely of $17,500,000,000." This, he said, meant "complete assurance of an early uncontrolable credit expansion and hence, of a great and continued price rise over a period of months."

But the Yale professor contended that through the mechanism of the stablization fund, the bill provided "ample control over the use of this profit so that any resulting inflation can be restricted."

The appearance of Prof. Warren aroused the greatest interest of the day, chiefly because of the mysterious character of his activities since becoming the chief monetary adviser to the Administration. Senators attempted to pierce this veil of mystery, but did not succeed so well, although the Cornell teacher answered all their questions.

He disavowed authorship of the bill, but expressed full approval of it. He said he had seen the bill, prepared by Treasury experts, before it wa ssent to Congress. He expressed confidence that prices could be raised by reducing the gold content of the dollar with resultant benefits to debtors, farmers and home owners.

Increased business activity and higher wages would follow, he maintained. Much of his time before the committee was spent in an explanation of his theory of raising prices by gold manipulation.

Prof. Warren maintained that the value of the dollar was not of much concern to the creditor if he can not collect. A cheaper dollar, he pointed out, made possible the payment of debts. As for insurance policy holders, he argued they fared better being paid in cheapened dollars than not being paid at all—and the latter last spring was a real possibility, he added.

Two Major Influences.

He felt no concern over any loss of confidence in the Nation's currency nor did he think uncontroled inflation a probable result of the bill. Wild inflation, he said, would occur only after a revolution or a war. Insolvency of the Government was always a precedent to such a development, he asserted.

Prof. Rogers, who objected to photographers taking his picture and warned the press, even before he started to testify, against misquoting him, contended that aside from increasing the world's monetary gold stock, raising the price of gold exterted two major economic influences—depression of the dollar in foreign exchange markets and creating a profit which, when used, constituted "direct inflationary influence of first magnitude."

$1,000,000,000 to $1,500,000,000, extending probably from one to two years.

Attending the White House conference, besides Mr. Morgenthau, and Gov. Black, were George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Reserve Bank; W. R. Burgess and J. E. Crane, deputy governors of the same branch; Tom Smith, of St. Louis, special Treasury adviser on banking, and Earle Baillie, of New York, Mr. Morgenthau's fiscal adviser.

Mr. Morgenthau said no announcement could be made until Wednesday, at the earliest, declining to comment lest he "tip my hand." But the President already has disclosed the financing would be orthodox, and there was little doubt the resources of the Federal Reserve were counted on, if needed, to backstop the market.

Gov. Black's Statement.

Gov. Black's statement, which did not touch directly on this point, was regarded as an attempt to dispell any question of teamwork between the Treasury and the Reserve Board, which did not swallow whole the President's gold seizure. It follows:

"A conference of the governors of the Reserve banks was held on Saturday. At this conference Secretary Morgenthau presented the immediate program of the Government's financing. The governors gave full consideration to this program and assurance of full cooperation in the success of this program was given by the governors."

In forecasting $10,000,000,000 of refinancing within the next six months, President Roosevelt figured on $6,000,000,000 of new money as well as the approximately $4,000,000,000 falling due in that period. Much of the current financing has been by 90-day bills, which can be lengthened under the gold devaluation measure.

Bill Offering Oversubscribed.

Bids on such an offering of bills, amouning to $125,000,000, were accepted yesterday by the Treasury. Mr. Morgenthau announced that $303,560,000 was applied for at an average rate of about .67 per cent on a bank discount basis.

Meanwhile, reports of silver and gold receipts—part of the President's financial program—also were made public at the Treasury. Although last Wednesday had been set as the deadline for turning in all gold coin or certificates, holders were still getting full reimbursement in other currency.

Total receipts of gold—either as coin or certificates—were $24,571,859.16 from December 28 to January 19, inclusive. A few instances of anonymous remittance were reported. Only 2,181 ounces of newly mined silver—which would be about $1,500 if coined—have been received at the mints since the silver order December 21.

Chance Named To Census Job

Former Postmaster to Aid in National Realty Survey.

M. O. Chance, former Washington postmaster, received his second temporary appointment with the present Administration yesterday as administrative assistant to Dr. L. D. Upson, chief statistician of the Census Bureau, in charge of the real estate taxation census.

Mr. Chance was appointed to supervise an inventory of the stocks of money on hand in the Treasury at the end of the Hoover Administration last March. His appointment is expected to expire in three months.

Mr. Chance also will direct the collection of returns of the special tax study, one of five projects the Census Bureau is undertaking with CWA funds.

The real estate taxation census is to be divided into two classifications, the first calling for detailed study of tax delinquency in 65 cities and 48 States, the second requiring an examination of 174,600 units of government in 3,071 counties for tax delinquency, defaults on obligations, issuance of scrip, nature and number of governmental services rendered, duplication of activities and jurisdiction.

3 Indian Towns Razed by Quake

Calcutta, India, Jan. 22 (AP).—Delayed reports reaching here today said the three chief towns of Nepal—Patan, Bhadgaun and Katmandu—were nearly destroyed in an earthquake last week and that several thousand persons may have been killed in that kingdom alone.

A telegram sent Thursday from Raxaul, a frontier town, which arrived today, and a letter received by a Nepal official here provided sketchy information of the tragedy.

Bailey and Bates End Prison Fast

Abandonment Announced by Justice Department.

Harvey J. Bailey and Albert W. Bates, serving life terms in the Leavenworth Penitentiary for the Urschel kidnaping, having called off their hunger strike, the Department of Justice announced yesterday.

Bates was fed forcibly January 19 after refusing food since January 7. Bailey began his self-imposed fast January 15.

Since the beginning of their strike, prison officials continued to place foods before them at meal time. Both were under surveillance by the penitentiary's medical officer and it was the intention of authorities to feed them by force as soon as their condition indicated a need for food.

Both prisoners have been denied communication with each other or with other inmates in the hope they would reveal the ransom money cache, the one unsolved angle of the Urschel case.

Mines Dynamited In Coal Strike Area

Attempt to Blast Trestle Near Scranton.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 22 (AP). Three dynamitings, attributed by police to the strike of United Anthracite Miners of Pennsylvania today ushered in the second week of the walk-out.

Two of the bombings occurred in the Wilkes-Barre area, Luzerne County, and the third in Peckville, near Scranton.

The latter caused slight damage in what police said was an attempt to blow up a trestle at the Ontario mine of the Penn Anthracite Mining Co.

Student Of An Era.

The late Ulrich Bonnell Phillips, professor at Yale University, was the foremost authority on the history of the South under the plantation system. A native of Georgia, he made his life work the study of conditions under which his fellow Southerners had lived until 1865, an era of which the full importance is yet to be realized.

Professor Phillips served with distinction on the faculties of the Universities of Georgia, Tulane, Wisconsin, Michigan and Yale. He had won a number of prizes for historical research and a number of honorary degrees, among them one from Columbia recently for "distinction in scholarship and service." Aside from a dozen volumes, Dr. Phillips had written numerous magazine articles which constitute indispensable source material for every student of the economic, political and social history of the slavery system. Virtually every work by younger historians cites him as the outstanding authority on the South of antebellum days.

In his quest, Dr. Phillips went about the South, rummaging through the attics in the "big houses" of old plantations and perusing private papers of old slave-owning families. He possessed a fine collection of old manuscripts bearing upon the period. He went to Africa and spent a year among the tribesmen there, to become better acquainted with the background of the Negroes about whom he was writing. Through his thorough scholarship and sympathetic understanding of the material with which he worked, this Southern historian made an invaluable contribution to the study of one of the most interesting phases of our national development.

Gen. Araki Retires.

Dispatches from Tokyo interpret the resignation of Gen. Sadao Araki, Japanese Minister of War, as at least in part due to the growing strength of liberal elements in that country. In view of the fact that Gen. Araki is now convalescent from serious illness and physically unable to maintain personal control of his important office, this interpretation may be far-fetched. But there is no doubt that the retiring cabinet officer has played a leading role in concentrating power in the hands of the military clique in Japan, and that his resignation has come to be regarded by many of his countrymen as a necessary preliminary to restoration of civilian control in foreign policy.

The resignation of Gen. Araki at this moment, however, would be logical even if his health were robust and his policies acceptable to all the Japanese people. He was at the war office controls during the conquest of Manchuria and Jehol, an exceedingly tense period when it was easy to subordinate all other considerations to the exigencies of military needs. Now that at least relative quiet exists in Manchukuo, about to be created a separate kingdom by Japan, it is natural that the dynamic Minister of War should wish to relinquish a post which he has made one of vast responsibility. After all, Gen. Araki will still be able to exercise great influence in Japanese politics, even if he steps from the limelight which bathes his present post.

Shifts in the Japanese cabinet are closely watched abroad because of the unfortunate tension which Asiatic unrest has brought into world politics. And if the retirement of Gen. Araki coincides with a lessening of the militarist spirit in Japan, the development will be hailed with sympathetic understanding in this country. Recent attempts by Japanese officers to cast the United States in the role of an enemy have been both embarrassing and disturbing. Concrete steps to eliminate any basis for such misunderstanding would be welcomed by all far-sighted people in both countries. On our side of the Pacific, for instance, an even closer scrutiny of the huge naval expansion provided by the pending Vinson Navy bill should result from any move toward a revival of liberalism in Japan.

Open Forum.

Senator King's open forum on District affairs is a welcome innovation. It will give the Senate District Committee an opportunity to hear what various groups and individuals think about local problems before any proposed legislation is framed. Some of the difficulties encountered when representatives from 48 States sit as a city council for Washington should thus be mitigated.

If this round-table discussion leads to more active interest in District affairs it will be doubly appreciated. Many local problems usually remain unsolved at the end of a session, not so much because Congress is unable to agree, but because local measures are consistently sidetracked for important national bills. Leaders are not inclined to delay adjournment when only the welfare of the District is at stake.

Important District bills have frequently died in legislative jams at the end of lame-duck sessions. But Congress is no longer hampered by any fixed dates for adjournment. It now has ample time to consider local as well as national measures. If definite arrangements are made for consideration of District matters as the session proceeds, there is no reason why the calendar of important legislation pertaining to the Capital City should not be cleared before the next adjournment is taken.

Outlines Of A Program.

The policies of others may be shrouded in confusion and uncertainty, but the country has come to expect clarity and directness of Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor. Her first annual report to Congress reflects not only those qualities, but also the underlying philosophy which has guided Miss Perkins through her career. At a time when there is a feeling that too many policies are impulsive and opportunist, it is refreshing to find one who thinks in terms of programs and distant objectives.

When she came into office last March, Miss Perkins called a conference of organized labor leaders (hostile, at the time, to her), representatives of civic organizations, and others, and asked that they help her formulate a definite program for the wage earner under the new administration. Miss Perkins would be first to recognize that the necessity for drastic measures to head the country toward recovery brought precipitate realization of a number of the objectives, where under ordinary conditions a struggle of years might have been necessary. For instance, the conference asked for direct Federal relief to the unemployed. That came in full and overflowing measure because it was so obviously necessary.

Conservatively, Miss Perkins regards the gains that have been made as on a "temporary emergency basis." To preserve them, she urges enactment into law of these six principles enunciated in March: Shorter hours; higher standards of wages and "particularly a machinery for regulating the minimum level of wages;" abolition of child labor; use of Government purchasing power to maintain high industrial standards (in other words, no purchases from "chiselers" or sweatshops); establishment of boards for hearing and making findings on complaints and in industrial disputes, and general recognition of "the desirability of competent wage earners' representation, selected through organization, in all matters affecting industry, labor conditions and civic development."

For the future, Miss Perkins has a nine-point program which includes such features as low-cost housing, greater safety for workers, extension of conference and mediation methods and State and Federal cooperation in labor matters. But its most significant points are recommendations that the country embrace old-age security and unemployment insurance.

The drive to eliminate the "poorhouse" has become fairly general. Enlightened opinion has come to regard it as perhaps a well-intentioned, but nevertheless heartless, form a charity. Yet the poorhouse is only one phase of the problem. Where one old person unable to provide for himself gets into the county almshouse, ten others are, in effect, public charges or competitors in already overstocked labor markets. Miss Perkins advocates Federal assistance in the old-age security field if it is needed. The determination of that question lies in the future; there is no necessity to settle it until its outlines become more clear.

The question of unemployment insurance, for the moment, is also largely academic, since it would be manifestly impossible to set up an unemployment insurance scheme on any sort of actuarial basis when there is such a terrific volume of unemployment and when business is hardly able to bear additional burdens. But, at the same time, enormous spending for relief and made-work programs will perhaps eventually swing even opponents of unemployment insurance to a consideration of whether it is not much cheaper to have the insurance than the dead-weight burden upon the Government.

Miss Perkins is now content to enunciate principles which should guide. Reserves should be set up in the States, she contends. "The fund should be collected from fair but not excessive premiums and should be safeguarded so that it will be adequate for the heavy drains of a possible widespread period of unemployment." The cost should be borne by the employer, or by the employe and employer, or, where it is desired, by employer, employe and the State government, but, says Miss Perkins, "the cost should be assessed as one of the industrial hazards for which industry itself must provide."

The real fight on unemployment insurance is not likely to be whether we shall have it or not—events seem to be sweeping us toward an acceptance of its desirability as soon as conditions are riper for it. The real issue will be on the question of where the cost should be assessed.

The District Gas Tax.

It is significant that virtually every move to increase the District gasoline tax is initiated by representatives of Virginia or Maryland. Service stations across the District line are handicapped by the relatively low motor-fuel tax here. Along with other dealers operating near State boundaries in many parts of the country, they are confronted by a real problem. But it is rather presumptuous to seek a change in the District's tax rates for the convenience of neighboring counties.

For its own purposes, Washington doesn't need a higher gasoline tax. The Budget Bureau estimates the unexpended balance in the gasoline tax fund at the end of the fiscal year 1935 at $553,000. In asking Congress to increase the levy on gasoline from 2 to 4 cents a gallon, Representative Smith, of Alexandria, takes note of this situation. His bill would abolish the separate gasoline tax fund—which is now available only for highways and bridges—so that revenue from this special group of taxpayers could be used for general purposes. In theory that proposal has perhaps something to commend it, but is taxation theory uppermost in the mind of the gentleman from Alexandria?

Efforts to eliminate the differential between gasoline taxes here and in the neighboring States might be more properly confined to Richmond and Annapolis. In 1930 about 40 per cent of Virginia's total taxes were derived from gasoline and automobile license fees. Maryland exacted 33.5 per cent of her taxes from motorists. The share of these States' revenue supplied by special levies on automobile owners has probably increased since that time. For the country as a whole 29 cents out of every dollar spent for gasoline represents tax. Levies on gasoline—running as high as 12 cents per gallon in Decatur, Ala.—have been carried to heights which Washington has no desire, or need, to emulate.

Rising Driftwood.

President Roosevelt's condemnation of the use of political influence for personal advantage was admirable and already has had salutary effect. So much so that it would clearly be a mistake not to push the principle involved along a broader front.

The human tendency on the part of national committeemen to reap, in fees and otherwise, reward for their service to the party is matched by a similar tendency among Government employes, no less present, and no less to be guarded against. Those who have received rewards in the form of jobs on the Federal pay rolls are often under some pressure to use their connections improperly for partisan purposes, so that they may perpetuate themselves on the pay roll and their party in power. That tendency is particularly strong when there is an abundance of money to spend, a plethora of jobs to be given, and a strong desire to justify the policies of the Administration so that they may be continued and expanded.

Administration leaders have a tremendous responsibility just now in insuring the highest political morality on the part of their subordinates. No Administration ever had a greater amount of money to spend, or so many jobs to give. And no Administration ever had such an elaborate publicity organization. If public funds are even indirectly used for partisan purposes—if, indeed, they are not used scrupulously for the general good—the Administration will in time forfeit much of its present popularity.

Disturbing driftwood is coming to the surface. Some of the publicity narrowly skirts violation of the law forbidding Government departments from engaging in propaganda in behalf of legislative measures. Moreover, evidence accumulates that the spoils system has been extended to the Civil Works Administration. It was expected that the CWA, hastily set up and lavishly endowed, would have its troubles; that there would be waste and perhaps even petty graft. But there is no reason why an agency designed to give direct relief in an emergency should be converted into an instrument for advancing party advantage. The beneficiaries of the CWA should be needy and unfortunate individuals and not political bosses.

Yet, in Massachusetts and Texas the CWA is reported to be figuring in political campaigns. The charge is being made freely in Texas that the CWA is used for patronage purposes. Two administrators have been indicted in California. In Pennsylvania the CWA has been called "the politicians' paradise" and county chairmen have assembled 100 affidavits to prove that favoritism dictated giving of jobs. Charges have been made that in Kentucky nepotism has affected administration. In Iowa, a United States attorney is laying charges of graft in the Public Works Administration before a grand jury.

Information which is reaching Washington indicates that more grand juries will have to devote their attention to alleged betrayal of trusts in disbursing Civil Works money. It becomes increasingly apparent that more than the modest gesture which President Roosevelt recently made will be necessary to effect a clean-up.

Probing the Causes of War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Human nature or mind is destined to be contrary, seeking truth where it knows it will not find, appealing to idiots in search of wisdom. If humanity really wanted to know, say 20 years ago, some of us could not only tell that war was coming, but that it was inevitable; yea, a necessity. It is just as true now, but they would rather speculate than go about probing its predisposing causes and remove them. What is true of wars is true of crime, racketeering, &c. Take, for example, what is called racketeering as practiced until recently in the Western metropolis. Authorities think they have probed it and are stopping it. They might stop it, but we can say that they have not probed the cause, which was, as I see it—philosophical necessity:

Now, if such a simple thing as "racketeering" as a phenomenon, is not scientifically probed as to its remote as well as proximate causes, how in the world dare we imagine we can adequately uncover the causes of war or animosity between nations which are far more intricate or involved? What the League of Nations needs is an impartial specialist on this all-important international problem. The mere prestige of being a prominent American, or a prominent Englishman or Frenchman is no proof of qualification to membership either in the League of Nations or the World Court. And these are the agencies to which our pedantic peace societies are going to appeal to. If I can show you how our condemnation of "racketeers" is no solution of the problem, I must also be able to show, by the same token, that mere condemnation of certain political systems opposed to our ideals is not sufficient to insure peace. We have to find out why the votaries of those other systems tenaciously adhere to their principles. To do this, requires magnanimity, chivalry, appreciation of the merits of each type of culture in its place, and above all, the Messiahship of a "superman" who, understanding all, can reconcile their differences.

C. PHILIPS.

Admitting Foreign Refugees.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From press reports it seems that Mr. McDonald, who was appointed to assist in finding homes for German refugees, has been conferring with the Department of Labor for the purpose of obtaining permission for some of these refugees to enter the United States; and it seems that he has been partly successful, for the Department of Labor has allowed several hundred of these refugees temporarily to enter this country, notwithstanding that it will be hard to get rid of them after they are once here.

It is difficult to understand why we should be expected to look after any of these refugees. We are in no way responsible for the conditions existing in Germany. Moreover, a willingness on our part to accept refugees constitutes an invitation for other countries to send them here.

Our immigration law was enacted upon the theory that this country was no longer to be a haven for the oppressed peoples of the world, but rather that it was to be preserved for our own people. To make this law impartial, the immigration quotas of foreign countries were based upon the number of their nationals in this country, excepting with respect to Oriental immigration, which was totally prohibited. This law has worked satisfactorily.

We simply can not absorb all the oppressed peoples of the world. If we should allow the oppressed Japanese and Chinese laborers or the "untouchables" of India to come, our Pacific coast would cease to be a white man's country within a few years. If we attempt to take all political refugees from Europe there will be no end to immigration.

F. WILSON.

The Mall Trees.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In humble recognition of esthetic values, I am glad to note the protests of many similarly minded against the proposed vandalism that would remove the beautiful trees from the Mall.

Trees are like people and also like civilizations; it is easy to uproot them, but a long and arduous task to grow them to the beauty of maturity and usefulness. The capitalistic system is wrecking individuals of the toiling masses and there is grave danger that our so-called civilization may be similarly destroyed by the "plunder-bunders"—or "blunder-bunders."

And what have the wreckers to offer in return? As a poor substitute for the trees they would give us a straight highway along which the myriads of automobiles, rapidly going nowhere at all, could save the time for which their drivers have no valid use whatsoever. The efficiency of straight lines when there is no need for such efficiency, can not atone for the lack of beautiful curves—and trees.

If the vandals accuse us of sentimentalism, we can retort that even Napoleon Bonaparte — assuredly "hard-boiled" — is said to have turned aside his famous Simplon road in order to save a tree mentioned by Caesar.

Race Discrimination.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several colored educators interested in styles of basket ball play went out to College Park's Ritchie Field House in December and saw the University of Michigan in play. On December 30 these gentlemen went out to see Indiana play the Terrapins. All of the colored gentlemen and ladies who were distinctly colored were refunded their money and told it was the policy not to admit colored people—the less distinguishable colored people were admitted.

This was a terrible shock to the sensibilities of these ladies and gentlemen.

Nearly all of the Big Ten universities have or have had on their teams colored athletes whose reputations as athletes and gentlemen have added laurels to these institutions. Among these one easily recognizes the names, Metcalf, Ward, Hubbard, Bell, Owens and Tolan. These are but a few. They are perfect gentlemen, Americans all. Teams from the West come to Maryland and colored citizens of Maryland are denied the right to pay to enter.

As a matter of fact, the question is raised as to why colored citizens should be denied the right to attend classes in the University of the Free State that now is boasting of its tercentenary.

The insulting policy would be an insignificant issue but for the fact that it is retrogressive and positively at odds with the salient features of the New Deal. This sort of racial discrimination by a leading educational institution keeps alive the chief weapon by which vested interests have maintained our iniquitous economic system, and is fundamentally a cause for much of the hatreds that have bred our late great wars.

I did hope that enough intelligence would govern at the University of the Great Free State to prevent a policy that was enunciated on the night of December 30. Although Maryland University is very conservative as shown by its R. O. T. C. suspensions and support last year, I wonder if the mothers of the sons who are now there realize that hatreds being bred by racial antipathy are the main obstacles making peace by prevention of wars between nations impossible. Is it strange that we can not teach character traits to youngsters in school or make character in a real sense an objective in education when the most fundamental of all traits in the modern world is tolerance?

If You Want the Dog to Retrieve Birds, Pat Him on the Head When He Does

By Robert Quillen.

"Now we know we won't lose our jobs if we arrest the wrong guy."

That setnence should be preserved with other immortal sayings that illuminate America's history.

In few words it tells the story of successful crime and civic corruption.

It was spoken by a New York policeman, in grateful reference to Mayor La Guardia's promise that politics would no longer interfere with police work. Police and detectives had spent the night rounding up notorious criminals, happy in the assurance that no "big shot" could defy or punish them because of his alliance with city officials.

The success and immunity of lawbreakers is seldom if ever due to the incompetence of police officers. The unofficial powers that rule a city determine where and how the law shall be enforced, and policemen who wish to hold their jobs do no independent crusading.

This is not true of great cities alone. In small towns, as in big ones, there are sacred cows to whom the law doesn't apply.

One small city in the "Bible belt" a college town where everybody goes to church on Sunday—nourished a notorious lawbreaker for more than 20 years, till death at last spoiled his perfect record of immunity.

His combination gambling den, bawdy house and speakeasy operated brazenly in the heart of town, but the police seemed innocently unaware of it.

Few towns big enough to be worth exploiting are free of similar characters. They are known to the police, as other criminals are, but nobody disturbs them.

Why are the police so negligent? Partly because juries will not convict; partly because tricky lawyers and worthless courts mock the law; but chiefly because they are ordinary men with a living to make and families to support, and experience has taught them on which side their bread is buttered.

Where higher officials and public opinion back them up they make lawbreakers scarce; but a watch dog soon quits growling if his master kicks him for it.

THE CUP RACE AND PROSPERITY.

The news that England and America can dig up enough millionaires to put over a race for the America's Cup this year comes as another good break for the Democrats.

• • • •

A year ago there wasn't a millionaire in either country who would admit he had enough money to meet the overhead on a rowboat.

• • • •

A yacht was just a Forgotten Luxury.

• • • •

Any man owning anything over 31 feet long kept it screened in drydock, and even the possession of a yachting cap gave him that Guiltiest Feeling.

• • • •

There is no better indication that the worst is over than the news that some of our best known millionaires will finance a couple of cup defenders this summer and let themselves be seen all over the country via the newsreels in ice cream pants against a background of solid mahogany decks and the cliffs of Newport.

• • • •

It is the most significant episode in the recovery movement. Those rich men don't get into the mood for extravagant marine sports until they think the red ink baths are over.

• • • •

And psychologically an international cup race will be a grand thing for the New Deal. President Roosevelt is a red-hot yachtsman. He will be among those present at the cup races, and it will make everybody feel better to see the newspaper photographs captioned "President Joins Billion-Dollar Fleet off Newport."

• • • •

All in all, there are few better advertisements for approaching prosperity than an international yacht race. It is the sort of event that suggests a return of silk shirts, stock dividends, million-share days, the $3 table d'hote dinner, 12-cylinder roadsters and a market tip with every telephone call.

• • • •

Bring on the boats, boys. An international yacht race makes us feel more confident about general conditions than the NRA, the Blue Eagle and all the Roosevelt family's radio talks.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

If Winter Comes.

In the early summer of 1921 I received from the publishers an advance copy of a new novel called "If Winter Comes," by the British writer, A. S. M. Hutchinson. Although he was not then well known, he had published several excellent novels, which seemed to me to display originality, humor, and other welcome qualities. His first book, "Once Aboard the Lugger——" is still his masterpiece of humor, and I will recommend it to anyone who likes to read an exciting story abounding in fun. I had also enjoyed "The Happy Warrior," which has a remarkably fine specimen of the small boy.

I was enchanted by the new book, "If Winter Comes," and in a few months my enchantment was shared by some 300,000 readers. For it is not only a rattling good story, which holds the reader's interest; not only has it admirable characters, like the two housemaids, High Jinks and Low Jinks; the really remarkable feature of the book is its portrayal of a hero who has to a high degree one of the rarest of human virtues—the ability to understand and sympathize with those who hold views directly opposite to his own. This is what St. Paul meant by charity—as described in the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians — intellectual sympathy, by which we have a sympathetic understanding of the minds and hearts of other people. When the hero was a little boy at school, the other boys could not understand why he did not share their hatred for the teacher. "But don't you see, if he is the teacher, he has got to talk and act the way he does?" No, they did not see. The most tremendous scene in the book is where he foregoes the chance for revenge on his most deadly enemy. Some readers might say it would be impossible for men to rise to such heights; but with God all things are possible. And this man lived in daily communion with the Unseen.

West Virginia House Passes Home Rule Act

Municipalities Over 2,000 May Draft, Revise Own Charters.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Without a dissenting vote, the municipal home rule bill for cities and towns of more than 2,000 inhabitants was approved today by the West Virginia House of Delegates and sent to the Senate.

It provides machinery for cities to draft new charters or revise old ones without resort to legislative action.

A home and farm relief bill declaring a moratorium upon forced sales of property under trust deeds and liens until April 1, 1935, also received unanimous approval of the House. The measure, sponsored by Delegate Otie Carden (Democrat), Wyoming County, is patterned closely after the Minnesota mortgage moratorium law, recently upheld by the U. S. Supreme Court.

The House passed finally a bill authorizing a transfer of unexpended balances in county road and bridge funds to the county general fund.

An installment plan for payment of unfunded debts of local subdivisions of government is provided in bills prepared for introduction in the House today by Speaker Ralph M. Hiner.

One directs that, in the event a mandamus writ issues to enforce a levy to satisfy a judgment which "would produce a disturbance in the administration of the financial affairs" of the unit, the circuit court may order payment of the debt in 10 annual installments.

The other bills provide for the funding of floating indebtedness.

Disbarred University Pastor Outlines His Faith for Foes

Rev. Mr. Stewart Clears Up "Misunderstanding" in First Answer.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). To clarify his position on doctrinal matters, the Rev. Donald H. Stewart, young Presbyterian minister, who recently was disbarred from official church status on the University of Virginia campus, has prepared his first statement of the controversy. It is entitled "A Preface to Understanding."

The Rev. Mr. Stewart is student pastor at the university and also assistant pastor of the local church.

Thomas L. Rosser, jr., a member of the Presbyterian committee on student work at the university, heads a movement to keep Mr. Stewart in the university. Officials of the university, including Deans Ivey Lewis and John L. Manahan, have written him that the loss of the Rev. Mr. Stewart to the campus of the university would mean a setback not only to the church, but to "the whole position of religion" there.

Sees Views Misrepresented.

Mr. Stewart's statement follows:

"Since statements in the church papers, in the secular press, and in the rumors of conversation have been made, some that essentially misrepresent my views, others that invite misunderstanding through a failure to present my positive views, by a lack of all apparent effort to be as scrupulously fair and accurate to my position as to their own, and still others that plainly arise from a lack of direct information as to my actual position, for these reasons it has seemed best to me to make this short statement which I hope will help to lead us all to a common understanding.

"I believe in one God who is the Personal and Supreme Fact of Life, in whom we live and move and have our being.

"I believe in the Deity of Christ, finding in Him the Fact of God made flesh, that God was in Christ reconciling man unto Himself, so that in Christ, I have to do, in a way that I can understand, with the Living God presented to me as an objective fact of history.

"I believe in the Holy Spirit, the indwelling presence of the fact of God, which makes Him truly my contemporary, available and empowering for everyday Christian living, as God in my inner experience.

"I believe in the fact of sin, as man's deliberate choice of his own selfish will in the service of that which is contrary to the will of God and that for his redemption, or regeneration from this slavery of his will, man stands in need of the releasing and life-giving power of the Spirit of God.

Declaration of Belief.

"I believe in the vicarious atonement; in the forgiveness of my sins through the sacrificial self-giving of Christ for me, seen in its intensest moment at Cavalry in a vicarious act of atonement wherein He received upon Himself the full consequences of human sin, and whereby my full restoration to fellowship with a loving and holy God is opened up to me on God's costly initiative only, and made certain and operative within me by the accepting response evoked within my will, by the character and nature of the God whom the Christ of the Cross persuades me to believe is thus actively seeking me.

"I believe the Scriptures to be inspired of God, an infallible and authoritative rule of faith and life. Being written by men who were 'moved' or 'carried along' by the Spirit of the Eternal, there breathes in them the Spirit of the Living God. This experience and encounter of the grip of God, on the part of the writers, can be shared and reproduced in all who expose themselves unreservedly to the impact of the living fact that speaks in the pages of Scriptures.

"I believe in the Holy Catholic Church as the witnessing communion, in one living society, of all those who have in the past, who do now in the present, and who are yet in the future, to experience the regenerating and redirecting power of God, and consequently the meaning and anchorage that the encounter of the fact of God in Christ bestows on human life.

"I believe in the resurrection of Christ and of all the dead.

"I believe in Life Everlasting."

Extortion Charge Draws Indictment

Kidnap Threats Alleged in Richmond Case.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—William Benjamin Taylor, 24, of Seaford, Va., was indicted by a Federal grand jury here today on a charge of attempted extortion from Frederic W. Scott, Richmond broker.

It was charged that Taylor attempted to solve the financial problems of his family by threatening to kidnap one of Mr. Scott's grandchildren, unless the broker deposited $1,800 to Taylor's credit in a Richmond bank.

The accused man was employed as chauffeur by Mr. Scott's sister. He is held in jail in Richmond.

Broadway PWA Loan Revoked

Town Officials Are Puzzled by Withdrawal of $40,000.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Town officials of Broadway are mytified by the revocation of a $40,000 PWA loan for construction of a water system, and are awaiting word from Washington.

Mayor Joseph Harpine said he thought the loan had been approved in Washington and that all which remained was approval by Broadway voters.

The town had looked forward to an early start on the project.

15 Study First Aid.

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Fifteen men employed on CWA projects in Shenandoah County are taking instruction in first aid here under Dr. F. Wilson Gearing. They are:

J. W. Andrik, Paul Baker, Joseph F. Burke, Walter Coffman, C. M. Funkhouser, Carl L. Hollar, Claude Marston, John J. Miller, B. H. Racey, William Reedy, Elmer Rice, J. H. Richards, Paul Silcoot, Charles Smith and Charles Stoneburner.

Loot Just Under $25, Thief Avoids Vote Loss

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Theodore Keesecker, 29, of Dargan, escaped the loss of citizenship by $3.90 here. Under the new State law, where the value of stolen articles is under $25, magistrates are permitted to try cases on a misdemeanor charge. Over that amount is a felony charge, and prisoners must be tried in Circuit Court, with conviction taking away their citizenship.

Keesecker was found guilty of stealing a rifle and other loot valued at $21.10, and was sentenced to 60 days in jail.

Licenses Set New Low.

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Revenue from hunting and fishing licenses in Mineral County was the lowest since 1925, according to Miss Audrey Kiser, deputy clerk of the Mineral County court. Revenues for 1933 amounted to $5,663 compared to $6,229, for 1932.

Teacher Gets Federal Post.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—M. Weldon Thompson, of the high school faculty, has resigned to accept a position with the Transient Bureau of the Federal Relief Administration, with headquarters in Richmond. Thomas H. Phelps will succeed him.

The Grand Coup

The Grand Coup in Bridge, which involves the ruffing of high cards in one hand with superfluous trumps in the other, is in its essence simply a trump reducing play, the purpose of which is not to be forced, at the end, to ruff unnecessarily, thus placing the lead in the wrong hand and forcing the Declarer to lead up to a minor tenace in trumps in the hand of an opponent at the right.

Mr. T. D. Owen-Turner of Vancouver, B. C., recently sent me an interesting example of a hand played as a Double Grand Coup. In other words, the Declarer was twice forced to reduce his trump holding so that he might hold the same number as his opponent on the right at the eleventh trick and at the same time have the lead in the Dummy so that the opponents' trumps might be captured.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♠	Pass	3◇	Pass
3♠	Pass	4♣	Pass
4NT	Pass	5NT	Pass
7♣	Pass	7♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

In explanation of the bidding Mr. Owen-Turner remarks that it appears as though the contract should be seven notrump, but South was afraid to chance a six-bid for fear of a pass by North and felt sure that if North's two suits were four-carders, he would bid seven spades or seven notrump, whereas if they were five-carders, the seven notrump bid from South might possibly shut out the right contract.

The Opening lead was a small club, which was won by South with the Knave. He thereupon laid down the spade King, and when the Queen was dropped from the West hand, it clearly indicated that East had held four trumps to the 10 originally and hence that the only way of making the Grand Slam contract was by means of a coup.

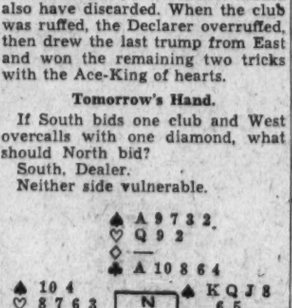

In order to secure the necessary number of entries to complete the trump shortening, South was compelled to attempt an "unnecessary" finesse in the diamond suit. His lead to trick 3 was the 10 of diamonds, and he must have prayed rather fervently not only for the success of the "unnecessary" finesse, but also that West be not tempted to play the Queen. As a matter of fact, West did not play the Queen, and the Knave was finessed. When this held, the prospect of success looked brighter. Of course, if West had played the Queen, the chance for the Grand Coup and the fulfillment of the contract would have vanished.

At this point the spade 9 was led, and East, of course, covered; otherwise the nine would have been permitted to hold and then the success of the contract would only have involved the mere picking up of East's trumps. The Knave of spades won the trick, and the Dummy was reentered by the lead of the diamond King, which was overtaken by the Ace. A small diamond was now led from Dummy, and Declarer ruffed with the spade deuce. The club King was then led, overtaken with the Ace, and the last diamond in Dummy led and ruffed with the spade 3. At this point the Declarer had completed the process of trump shortening. He now held the Ace-six of spades over East's seven-five. A small heart was led from the Declarer's hand, which was won with the Queen in Dummy. The club Queen followed, and East, relizing the futility of his attempt to further defend the hand, ruffed with the five. Had he attempted instead to discard a heart, the Declarer would also have discarded. When the club was ruffed, the Declarer overruffed, then drew the last trump from East and won the remaining two tricks with the Ace-King of hearts.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If South bids one club and West overcalls with one diamond, what should North bid?

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Devotion to Her Family Is Ruling Interest of Mme. May, Wife of Belgian Envoy

Hollywood Actresses Engage In Free-for-All Style Race

Hollywood, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—It's desert time in Hollywood now, and if you want to see one of the most lavish displays of advance fashions imaginable, just spend a week-end at Palm Springs.

Each actress tries to outdo her sister actresses, and the result is marvelous to say the least.

Claudette Colbert has been "making them sit up and take notice" for the last few days. One of her most attractive costumes is a pastel tweed suit which she wears for morning walks. With it she wears a dark blue linen blouse and scarf and all her accessories, including oxfords, are also in tones of dark blue.

Sylvia Sidney's Triumph.

Sylvia Sidney won her share of admiring glances when she appeared in a clever cape suit of Navy and white flannel for daytime events, and a gown of dark brown net during the evening. The net gown was perfectly plain, except for a series of cascading ruffles.

It took Joan Marsh, however, to do the distinctive stunt of the week-end by appearing in a frock of printed black and white satin and a cape of uncurled black ostrich feathers.

The woman who spends all her money on dresses this spring and skimps on accessories is going to be sorry, and is going to feel decidedly out of place in a crowd. Be careful of the shoes, purses and gloves, particularly, and shop carefully.

ZaSu Pitts in New Role.

Can you imagine ZaSu Pitts in a lovely black velvet sheath gown with a yoke and bouffant sleeves of silver cloth shot with a threat of jade green? No? Well, neither can I; but she wears one in her next film and rather changes the minds of people who have so thoroughly "typed" her for so many years.

Norma Shearer recently purchased a suit that is the envy of every woman who sees it. Ultra-modern to the "nth" degree, it is made of luxurious black velvet with knee-length coat that flares widely from the waist, with deep cowl collar of silver fox and one huge band of silver fox sweeping down from the waist to the edge of the coat.

From Adrian comes the following:

Skirts for formal daytime wear will be floor length, entirely new flared coats reach only to the knee, and evening gowns in the most modern vogue will be of velvet with silver lame trim. He designed one such recently for Norma Shearer, and it takes the lines of masculine full dress coats. Quite swanky.

Congresswoman Good Friend to War Veterans

Mrs. Rogers Was Inspired to Help Disabled by Visit to Front.

By Frances Mangum.

It was 1917.

Bombs were bursting in midair, the whiz of bullets sounded perilously close, the groans of wounded soldiers tore at her heartstrings as Representative Edith Rogers of Massachusetts made her way into the front lines.

She was one of the few women during the World War who were actually taken through the secret tunnels and into the dugouts. She saw at close range the horrible tragedy of war.

On a walk through the labyrinthine underground passageways of the Capitol yesterday she told this reporter of the incidents which had stimulated her interest in veterans and their families, and which has resulted in her unceasing efforts to aid them by political measures.

A Close-Up of Horror.

"No one could see the wounded and dying as I saw them and not be moved to do all in his or her power to help. Even before 1917 I wanted to do my bit. Before we entered the war, I had sent things like socks and comforters to the French soldiers. But it wasn't until I actually went over there and saw what the real ravages of war were that I felt I'd give my life to help!"

Mrs. Rogers was dressed in an attractive purple frock which brought out the lights and shadows of her iron-gray hair. Her small hat fitting closely to her head could not restrain the clusters of curls which framed her face. Utterly feminine was the picture she made, even to the gardenia fastened at her shoulder.

When she spoke of the soldiers at the front her eyes wore a deep look of sympathy which bespoke her untiring efforts on their behalf.

"After the war I did as much work as I could at Walter Reed. President Harding appointed me to carry on some private investigations. I did this through several administrations.

Fellowship of War.

"People sometimes can't realize how lovable the veterans are. During my work in and around hospitals I have come across some of the most heroic natures it has ever come my way to meet.

"I remember the instance of a veteran who had just undergone a terribly serious operation. The doctors all said the case was hopeless. At an such cases, a screen had been drawn up around his bed, which cut off a view of the rest of the ward. As I came down the hall he heard my footsteps and recognizing them he called to me.

"I had to bend over his cot to catch his words—his voice was almost gone. He asked me to please help his 'buddy' who was awfully sick in the next bed.

"In the tubercular ward the boys all banded together once to ask me to look after the mother of one of the veterans who had just died. They were afraid she'd have trouble getting the compensation."

Advocate in Congress.

When called upon to run for Congress, Mrs. Rogers at first hesitated as she was afraid it might interfere with the work she was doing to help the soldiers.

"As it is, though," she said, "I've found I've been able to do more for them in Congress than I ever would as a private citizen. You see I work terrifically hard on every bill for their benefit.

"Yes," she admitted, "one might call the veterans, and their families my first interest, but there are numbers of other issues that mean a lot to me, too.

"And of course I'm interested in women's work, too. I want to see that they get their share of the CWA.

"Since I've been in Congress I've had plenty of opportunity to see how really full the world is of 'a number of things!'"

April Breezes A Style Motif In Spring Hats

Coats and Dresses Also Produce Illusion of Motion.

New York, Jan. 22 (A.P.).—Coats have fallen in line with the breezy air of the new spring silhouette, and have their own "wind-blown" effects.

Helen Cookman, a leading coat designer, has created a collection distinguished by their feeling of motion. The same quality—that effect of being blown by an April breeze—marks the newest frocks and hats.

In evening gowns this "wind-blown" movement is backward, but in daytime dresses and coats it is gained by a forward movement, usually in the skirt, and sometimes the coat collar.

An off-the-face cut, a side swirl, or a forward dipping flange, convey the wind-blown effect in hats.

Beautiful materials and simple lines also mark this coat designer's work. Her new coats are fitted at the waist, and have the shoulders and arm top slightly padded, giving a normal, but squared effect.

Her collection ranges from tailored coats—she has great faith in them this season—to very soft, ultra-feminine coats—one of brown hard worsted, softened with a velvet bow at the chin, and sleeves mostly of velvet. Her soft coats often are collarless, and have a bow at the neck. This spring, her tailored coats are of four types. A prim one, with high neck closing; a conservative six-button type; a sporty coat, with four pockets, and one in hard worsted, with velvet collar and cuffs.

Local Writers Will Publish Own Magazine

A Literary Review Called "Centaur" Makes Bow This Week.

A group of young Washington art enthusiasts have a pet, their "Centaur." For a good many months they have sharpened his horns, brushed his sleek fur, trimmed his hoofs, and now, filled with the exhuberance that comes to the newly-born, he is galloping gayly into book stores and through the post-offices, ready to bring to his readers his centaurian messages.

"'The Centaur' is really a little literary review," explained John Dillon, one of the editors. "About two-thirds of the first issue will be poetry. There also will be some articles, and book reviews.

"We have some excellent poetry. What we want to do is to publish the best writings of persons in Washington. We have discovered a few geniuses—at least, we think they might be, and are on the lookout for more."

Editing by Acclamation.

He fished out a rough copy of one of the contributions. "Here's one that all the editors managed to agree about."

Henrietta Wirt, who occupies a third of the editorial chair, explained: "Sometimes we edit in chorus, and it's usually the loudest voice that wins out. Do we fight? Often!"

"Sometimes we fight with our contributors," said Diana Kearny Powell, third editor, "it's odd, but the people who hand in the least printable material are the most unwilling to give it to us. They say they have written lots of things, and that we can have this one, or that one, if we like.

Genesis of a Magazine.

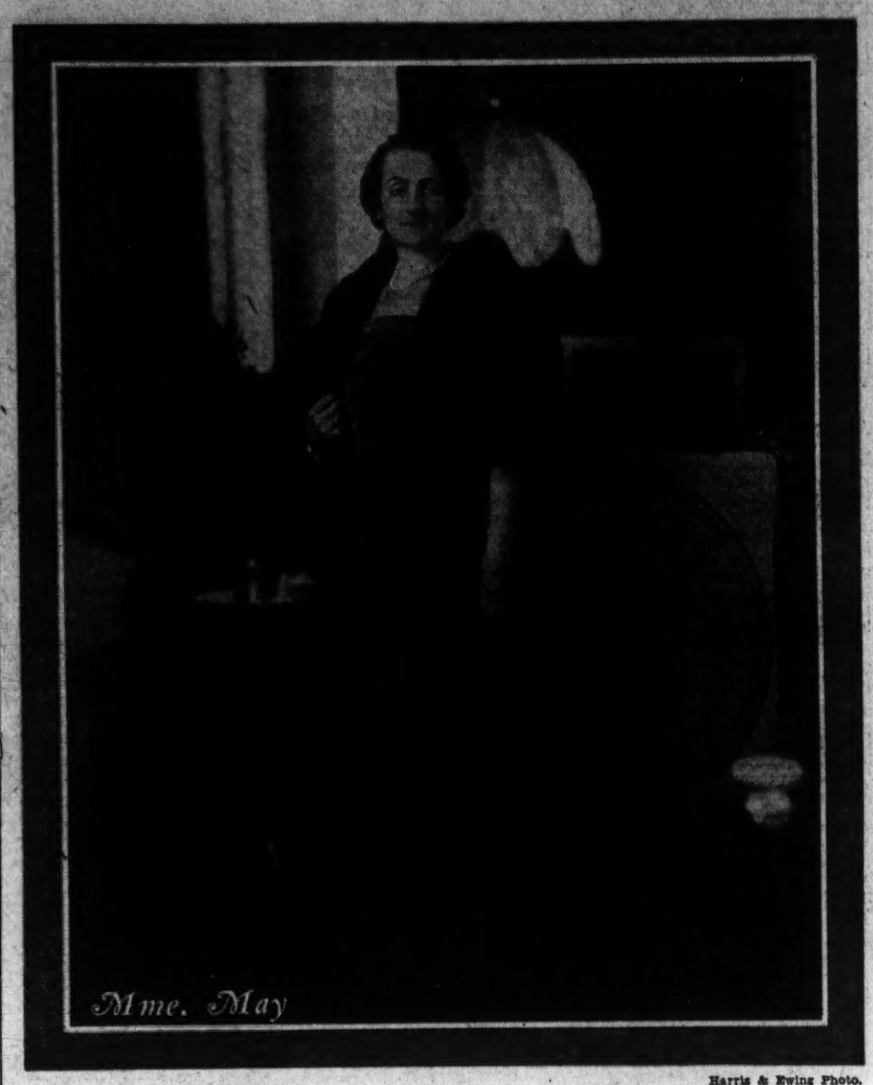

"The idea of publishing a magazine came about a long time ago. We used to get together and read our poems aloud, and we found that our friends were writing really good things. So why not publish them? We've had many obstacles in getting the magazine out, but we are all interested, and that's what counts."

The first issue of The Centaur will contain a foreword by Dean Wilbur, of George Washington University. A woodcut, modernistically designed, of a centaur rearing on its hind legs, will appear on the front cover. It is the work of Rowland Lyon. The printing is done by Christine Kempton, who uses a little foot press set up in her home.

Approximately 250 copies have rolled off the little foot press to appear this week. The magazine will be published every two months.

Colleen Moore's Traveling Suit.

Buying Power of Housewife Increases

Now Within 25 Per Cent of 1932 Level, Recent Survey Reveals.

7,000,000 Women in Five Cities Questioned to Obtain Data.

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—The purchasing power of the American housewife has been restored to within 25 per cent of 1932 levels, a survey in which 7,000,000 women in New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Milwaukee were interviewed, indicated today.

Women spending 82 per cent of all money going into retail channels in these four cities are also showing a preference for higher quality merchandise, according to J. David Houser Associates, who conducted the survey.

Other trends disclosed in the interviews were a demand for moderate priced merchandise and a decided preference for products which are advertised persistently in magazines and newspapers.

New York Values Highest.

Prices chosen by housewives as "bargain values" were slightly higher in New York than the other cities, but Philadelphia led in actual volume demand.

New York buyers were found willing to pay the highest prices for wearing apparel and general household goods. Lowest prices for clothing were asked in Philadelphia, while Pittsburgh buyers valued household goods at the lowest levels. Lowest values in furniture prevailed in Milwaukee.

Price ranges between the high and low prices offered were narrower in Pittsburgh for individual items than in Philadelphia and Milwaukee. New York was found to have a wide variance of opinion on a reasonable price for the different articles.

Questioned as to their desire to buy wearing apparel, 49 per cent of the women interviewed in Philadelphia declared themselves potential buyers. In New York the percentage was 46, while Milwaukee and Pittsburgh reported 44 and 42 per cent respectively.

Nationally-advertised articles were given a large preference in all sections.

In New York, men's overcoats, dresses, underwear and Oriental rugs were most in demand. Pittsburgh favored men's overcoats, modern furniture, women's shoes and damask draperies, while Philadelphia buyers desired overcoats, dresses, underwear and shoes. Demand was heaviest in Milwaukee for overcoats, dresses, shoes and underwear.

Firemen's Prize Makes Unending Children's Gift

Women's Auxiliary Offers Permanent Good Turn at Hospital.

Hundreds of little girls and boys at the Children's Hospital are turning grateful smiles upon the members of the Firemen's Ladies' Auxiliary these days. The children are praising the kind women who bring them pretty new clothes and make the long days shorter with gifts of toys.

It all began last September when at the Washington Labor Day parade the firemen of this city proved themselves to be artists as well as men of valor. For on that day, amid flying colors, blaring bands and cheering throngs, the firemen's float rolled into first place.

Together with the attendant honors the firemen received the $25 prize given by The Washington Post and generously turned it over to the ladies' auxiliary.

One Gift and Another.

"We really didn't know what to do with the money," Mrs. Mildred C. Bell, chairman of publicity for the auxiliary, said yesterday.

"We felt that we should do something to help other people with it, and so, after much debate, we decided to give the money to help buy the new heating plant at the Children's Hospital.

"Then when we went over and saw those little children we felt that we couldn't go away without doing something else to help them. We decided to organize a sewing circle and make new clothes for them. At first we took up a collection and bought the materials ourselves. But when we presented our first collection, Miss Gibson, superintendent of the hospital, said they had plenty of material if we would only do the work. Of course we were only too glad to do that for them.

Bi-Monthly Sewing Bees.

"Now we meet twice a month just to sew for the children. And it is surprising how much we accomplish. At one time we made 25 little dresses, and the next time 16 dozen towels.

"We sew for an entire day, and the hostess at whose home we meet serves luncheon. Each of us pays 25 cents for the luncheon, and whatever is left after the expense of the meal goes to buy toys for the children. We played Santa Claus to many children at the hospital Christmas, and now we are busy collecting funds to buy Easter eggs.

"We are hoping to do other kinds of welfare work, too. In fact, it looks as if that $25 we won is going to be one of the biggest presents anyone ever gave."

Gown Trains Add Extreme Length

Dress trains, this year, have one thing in common with buttercups and violets. With spring in the offing, they have taken a new interest in life and are growing larger by the minute. In the case of trains, these tails on formal gowns will reach from one side of the ballroom to the other if some designer doesn't apply the brakes soon Augustabernard seems to recognize no limits in the swishing appendages that she attaches to her evening models. She has taken into account, however, those women who like trains for ultra formal occasions where there is little dancing but who do not want to be bothered with the cumbersome things when they are swaying in a tango or hopping about in a rhumba. For these women, Augustabernard has made a gown whose half-mile-long train may be fastened at the waist in back so that it hangs in a rippling cascade.

The gown itself is in a new, unusual color called gun metal. The material is satin, which catches the light in dramatic fashion and makes the wearer look as if she had been moulded into a black statue with undertones of bronze. Emerald green satin has been used for narrow straps across the shoulders and for the lining of the gun-metal train.

Patou has gone Augustabernard one better. He not only has given astounding length to one of his new trains but has actually pleated the affair so that when the wearer walks she gives the effect of dragging a huge fan behind her. Black crepe is the material used for the gown with the fan train. Patou also has used chiffon for similar dresses.

Diplomatic Life Interesting But Rigorous for Children

Maintaining Contact With Friends and Relatives Abroad Makes a Welcome Duty; Daughter to Join Couple Here This Month.

Relatively few women are called upon to occupy the high and important position of wife to a diplomat. But those who do find there the same problems, the same responsibilities and compensations, on another scale, which go to make up the life of the most of womankind.

This is the second article in a series of interviews with ladies of the doplomatic corps in Washington, in which they reveal something of their outlook on life.

By Elizabeth Young.

Because she believes family life is the basis of normal, happy existence for women, Mme. May, Parisian-born wife of Beligum's Ambassador to the United States, would not recommend her own life entirely as a model for her three young daughters.

"Full and interesting though the years have been, I have sometimes thought it hard always to be abroad, far from those we love," she told a representative of The Post Woman's Page, yesterday.

She had risen cordially from a writing desk to greet her interviewer, and then moved to the center of the damask-walled, flower-filled room on the second floor of the Belgian Embassy at 1780 Massachusetts avenue, to indicate comfortable chairs. Much of her time, aside from her many absorbing social duties and formal entertaining, is devoted to correspondence with those loved ones from whom her career as diplomatic hostess separates her.

"With so many of my family and friends abroad, there are always an enormous number of letters to write and answer. It requires a great deal of time.

A Wish for Her Children.

"I would wish for my children that they could have a more peaceful life. The family is the basis of existence for women; all the rest is just accessories, however brilliant and pleasant they may be.

"And yet, I think our fate is pretty well decided for each of us. We have a certain choice, within definite limits. We may go a little to the right, a little to the left, but our path lies straight before us."

Ambassador and Mme. May returned to Washington from Belgium two months ago, leaving their daughters in Belgium. Francoise, the eldest, is expected to join her parents here this month. She has been continuing her studies and is much interested in art and Italian literature. The two younger girls are in school in Brussels. Mme. May feels it very necessary for them to finish their studies in their native land, in spite of their happy years at the National Cathedral School in Washington.

Alberta Elizabeth, the second daughter, named after the King and Queen of the Belgians, was born just at the outbreak of the World War. Ghislaine, the youngest, is 16.

Ardent Girl Scout.

Mme. May told of her daughters' interest in scouting. Francoise, who had taken an active part in the Girl Guides' movement in Belgium, immediately enlisted in American Girl Scouts' work on coming to Washington with her parents two years ago.

"She was given a troop of her own which grew to such an extent that it soon had to be divided into two," Mme. May said. "She was keen on the work from the very beginning, and toiled hard at it, not as an amateur game but as a real job. I have seen her give up party after party in order not to miss a meeting. Both her troops were supposed to have been among the best drilled and best managed in Washington.

"The younger girls are likewise keen on scouting, although they are not yet old enough to assume troop leadership. Alberta Elizabeth was recently promoted in the Girl Guides. She has been made lieutenant of her troop in Belgium."

From a platinum chain about Mme. May's throat depended an exquisite miniature of a beautiful boy. It gleamed like a gem against the darkness of her navy blue wool dress.

"My first born," she said. "He died when aged 13. It was a great tragedy. See how the dust gathers under the glass."

Suddenly one glimpsed the meaning of the shadow in her gentle dark eyes.

Read on tomorrow's Woman's Page an interview with Mme. de Lima e Silva, wife of the Ambassador from Brazil.

Mrs. Roosevelt In Brief Stop On Home Flight

Greets Women Informally at Charlotte, N. C., During Wait.

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 22 (A.P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, flying back to Washington after a brief visit to Warm Springs, Ga., passed through here at 1 p. m. today on a regular Eastern Air Transport plane. The plane was 55 minutes behind schedule, having been held for mail in Atlanta and having met headwinds.

Mrs. Roosevelt alighted from the plane, spoke informal thanks for words of greeting from a number of women who pressed around her, and a few minutes later the flight was under way again.

She declined to be photographed.

Gadget Makers Set Fish Trap With Mirrors

It's Among "Inventions" Placed on Exhibition in California.

Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 22 (U.P.). California's leading gadget makers added a few daubs of paint to a tapeworm trap, inserted the last few screws into a churn operated by grandma's rocker, and announced themselves ready for the California inventors' congress opening here Thursday.

The tapeworm trap was so simple that many members of the congress wondered why they hadn't thought of it, too. The proud inventor showed the device—a capsule attached to a string. The tapeworm sufferer must fast for several days to make the invention succeed. After the enforced fast, the capsule is lowered into the sufferer's stomach. The tapeworm—hungry by this time—snaps at the bait and is trapped. The string is used to haul up the worm.

Fishermen found a mirrored fish hook. Its sponsor said that the mirror made a fish believe that another fish was going to snap at the dangling bait. To beat the other fellow, so the inventor claimed, any sensible fish would immediately grab the bait and all the fisherman had to do after that was lift the hooked and somewhat deluded fish from the water.

Other surprising inventions were ready for presentation.

Pineapple Strawberry Whip.

1 package strawberry-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 cup pineapple juice and cold water
1 cup canned shredded pineapple, drained

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add pineapple juice and cold water. Chill until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Fold in pineapple. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serves eight.

Sonnet.

By Katherine Smith.

If I could gather notes of music sung
On unknown lips, or sense the words that slip
Unheard from Genuis' undiscovered lip,
Or pass the shade of sleep and walk among
Undreamed of dreams, whose shadowed footsteps beat
Like rain on flagstones; if my mouth, long dry,
Could taste the moisture of a sweeter sky
Than this, long promised by the gods, then feet
Of mine would rest, and hands no longer care
To find new implements to fashion strong,
Sure lines of beauty, ears avoid a song
And eyes grow dulled. I'd know the bright dispair
Of satisfaction; sick with sacred bread
I would know God—in knowing, would be dead.

The Hall Extends a Cheerful Greeting Through Artful Furniture Arrangement

Directed by Amos Parrish.

New York, Jan. 22.—It's been a long time, we'll wager, since an umbrella stand has been the first thing to greet you when you've stepped into the entrance hall of a house or apartment. That article, despite its unquestioned practicality, is somehow symbolic of the less pleasant side of life. And modern halls are planned to give you cheerful welcome even when you come in dripping.

The umbrella stand may still be in the home. But if it is, it's hidden in the hall closet where rows of coat hangers receive the outer garments which used to be hung on the rack next to the umbrella container.

Often this closet has been transformed into a dressing room for guests. Well-lighted and with a dressing table containing powder, puffs and hairpins.

Hall Is a Room.

But the hall itself is treated as a room. And is no more suitable for being decorated with coats and umbrellas than is the living room.

It's from the hall that a visitor gets his first impression of the home. And hall furniture is usually chosen to reflect the same type of room decoration as the living room.

It may be the eighteenth century, early American, modern or any of the other favorite decorative periods. Whatever it is there will not be much of it, for after all the hall is a passageway and must be kept clear. But it will be grouped to make an interesting and cheerful picture.

Just about the most satisfactory decoration of a hall is a plan something similar to that shown in the sketch.

There is a mirror, well-lighted, where a last quick (or long) look may be taken before departure. There is a table (or a console or chest of drawers). And this may hold a card tray if formal calls are the custom, and a plant or two.

Extra Drawer Space.

Lots of people prefer the chest of drawers to any other hall piece. They find the drawer space handy for holding all sorts of extras, including the children's galoshes, mittens, the dog's leash or any of those things which are usually wanted in a hurry.

At each side of the chest or table is a chair where one may sit while waiting for the others to make ready. Or instead one of the many attractive seats made for halls may be used.

In the grouping shown, the furniture is of Queen Anne inspiration, with a Queen Anne lowboy holding a pair of tole jars and a Queen Anne chair at each side.

Furniture of the type described is available in Washington in the better class shops and department stores.

Girl Who Survived Paralysis To Give White House Recital

Cleveland Soprano, 18, Receives Invitation From President.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Miss Nan Johnson, 18, is going to take the full three octaves of her soprano voice to Washington some time in March or April and sing for President Roosevelt. The letter from the White House came today.

Just what was said in the letter, Miss Johnson isn't telling, but it came from Mrs. Roosevelt. The important thing seems to be that the President will be listening.

Miss Johnson, it happens, had a touch of infantile paralysis when she was 6. It was rather a tough situation, especially when she felt like singing all the time. After 12 years, she is able to walk with the aid of braces.

Edgar F. Allen, president of the International Society for Crippled Children, heard the girl sing some months ago. Allen knows a great deal about people who walk with braces, and he had a little talk with Miss Johnson.

"I think," Allen said, "that President Roosevelt would like to hear you sing."

Not a great deal happened after that. Miss Johnson went up and down the three octaves. Allen went back to the society headquarters in Elyria, Ohio. President Roosevelt was moderately busy in Washington. But today came the letter.

New Aluminum Acquires Swank In Spun Design

Imitation of Dull Silver With Ornate Pattern Makes Debut.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

The new spun aluminum ware is leading the fashion parade in household goods. Just as there are styles for new dresses and hats, so in service sets there are pieces, and patterns "in" one moment "out" the next. Right now there's this new aluminum ware looking for all the world like dull silver spun in a circular design. The circular lines are so fine that they're hardly perceptible.

Its brightness and lightness make it particularly appropriate for this season of year, when, although cold winds swoop down upon us, and grey skies glower threatening, we have that feeling that spring is on the way. We do not hesitate to search the shops for pretty print frocks to enliven our wardrobe, and neither should we neglect this opportunity to add a bit of "dash" to our serving equipment.

Whorl of Delicacies.

The spun aluminuum comes in a variety of forms. Of course there's the hors d'oeuvres dish. But it's different! Instead of the conventional little compartments set aside for sundry delicacies, it is made in three circular grooves so that the tidbits can be placed around and around in a triple circle.

There's a beer set as light in weight as a feather pillow. Glasses of aluminum, half covered with woven reed, border the tray. In the center an inclosure is marked by strips of straw. This is the sanctus sanctorum, the space set aside for the beer bottles.

Or, if it doesn't happen to be beer we're serving, there's an ice bucket which comes with a protective reed handle, and a large wooden ladle.

And there's a "utility bowl" which can be used for about anything, but looks sublimely right when it's filled to overflowing with crispy, golden pretzels.

Sheffield Desk Candle.

A desk candle made in England as an exact reproduction of an original Sheffield is one of the most interesting pieces in the silver department of a local shop.

A small tray holds a spool standing on four silver legs. Wound around the spool is a long, coarse thread of red wax with one end sticking a few inches upward. At either end of the spool are little handles to turn when the exposed end of the candle burns down. And there's also a clever little snuffer.

Traveling is just so much tedium to a great many persons who are compelled to cover the same route week after week. Any means of whiling away the time is usually welcome to them.

It is these persons who should appreciate the "traveling game" featured in a Connectictut avenue shop. It comes in an attractive black leather case with a bright red lining. Inclosed is a board, arranged on one side for chess or checkers and on the other for backgammon, and a set of checkers, chess men, and backgammon pieces. There's also a set of dice marked in the usual way and another with sides resembling cards. Squeezed into a far corner, tucked almost out of sight, is a set of dominoes. This altogether delightful little compact set of games formerly sold for $13.50. Now its half price.

Wave-Preserving Brush.

For the life and health of the hair, brushing is a first essential. But, if we've had a brand new wave—we fear "brushing it out."

It's doubtful whether we would anyway. But if we use one of the new brushes featured this week in a downtown store we are running no risk of driving the wave away. We're actually taking measures to keep the wave in.

The brushes are designed so that the bristles are set in regular groups with even spaces in between. The result is to brush the wave into the hair. Besides, the bristles are long and stiff enough to reach down to the scalp, to stimulate it thoroughly and restore lost vitality.

Rhinestone Evening Bag.

A black evening bag, studded with large rhinestones, is one of the most striking creations we've seen this season. It's small, flat and soft, and solidly made to hold compact, lipstick and rouge.

The designer who conceived the idea for it might have dreamed of black heavens, sparkling with a thousand stars.

The man or woman who buys an eversharp pencil in this day and time should be sure to find one of the newest models. A local shop has some which do everything but write alone.

Slits in the side contain (honest-to-goodness!)—both a knife blade and a file! The mechanism of the pencil is all close to the point. A small compartment holds the extra leads, and not only holds them, mind you, but feeds them as well. As soon as one point is worn to a nub the robot-like mechanism gets busy and sends along a new lead.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

A band of masked men seize Sir Humphrey Rossiter, Home Secretary of England, as he motors toward London from a visit with friends in Norfolk County. Rossiter had refused all pleas to spare the life of Cecil Brandt, who is to be hanged the following morning for murdering a friend of his wife. Sir Humphrey is the only man in England who can spare Brandt.

Sir Humphrey's captors place him on a gallows and tell him he will die unless he agrees to grant Brandt a commutation to life imprisonment. As the trap is about to be sprung a messenger arrives with word that Mrs. Brandt is at Sir Humphrey's home in London and will tell her hidden story of the slaying. Sir Humphrey is released by the band, and on arriving home finds Mrs. Brandt. She tells him that her husband killed Gervase Benham in a fit of jealousy. Finding his suspicions unfounded, Brandt has demanded that his wife maintain silence to shield herself. She departs on receiving Sir Humphrey's promise that he will spare Brandt's life.

Sir Humphrey picks up his telephone to call Wandsworth Prison. Then all goes black before his eyes as he collapses in a faint. When he regains consciousness, after many hours, it is broad daylight. He asks about Brandt—and learns that the man he had sought to save had been hanged. He visits Mrs. Brandt.

"It was not really kindness," she insisted, and he could not fail to notice that she was an altered woman since that night when she had sat at the other side of his writing table and told her story. "It was not really kindness," she repeated. "It was just a passionate desire to get this thing over. There are two men dead—one very unjustly—and you and I who are living have suffered agonies as great as anything they could have suffered. I am very sorry for poor Gervase Benham and I am very sorry for Cecil, but the world belongs to the living, Humphrey. It belongs to us. We cheat ourselves and we cheat God when we wrap this cloak of misery around us because of the past, the past which no one can alter."

"Of course, you understand," he said, "what happened? Dr. Standish came to see you?"

"I understood perfectly," she assured him. "It was a strange tragedy. But perhaps I can make you feel a little better about it. I have something to tell you."

"Yes?"

Her Story Again

He watched her, fascinated. Life had returned to her. There was even color in her cheeks. The beautiful sheen of her hair had never seemed so pronounced, her eyes, blue enough to appear almost violet, were soft and brilliant.

"I'll tell you what I think would be best," she said. "Here we are—two people who should know each other, because we have been and always will be, friends. We may as well look the facts in the face. If one could mention the word humor in connection with our present plight, it would be a strange thought for the world to know that one of the only men I have ever cared for was the man who in Cecil's last days held the power of life or death in his hands. That, I know, was what made it so terrible for you."

She no longer spoke in a dreary monotone as she had done six weeks ago in the library. She might almost have been speaking of other people. She was intensely vital.

"Now I want you to listen carefully," she went on. "That afternoon Gervase Benham absolutely had to see me about the casting of our new play. I told him to come round to the flat. I must say that I was glad Cecil was supposed to be out of town until Monday morning, because he was, as every one knew, insanely jealous about any one connected with the theater.

She Recounts Visit.

"I had a bad headache and was lying down on the couch before the fire. The maid came and told me that Gervase had called. I nodded and said that I would be down in a few minutes. She asked me then if I wished her to remain in to make tea.

"Well, it was her Sunday out, I didn't want any tea and I knew Gervase preferred whisky and soda, so I told her that she could go. Forbes, the butler, and his wife had already left directly after luncheon, and my own maid always had Sunday afternoons and evenings off.

"The girl went away, and I imagine she left the flat in a few minutes. I felt simply too lazy to get up, so I knocked with my heel upon the carpet, hoping Gervase would understand that he could come up. You know, we don't think so much of these things in my profession, and my bedroom was very large and furnished almost as a sitting room. As a matter of fact, though, Gervase had never been in it. I explained that I was very tired, and commenced to discuss the matter he came to see me about, he standing upon the heartrug—and you know what happened.

Watched the House

"Cecil, who, it seems, had been watching the house, burst in. He wouldn't listen to a word from either of us. There are some details I have wiped out from my mind, because unless I destroyed the very germs of the memory I should lose control of myself. He killed Gervase there and then, brutally. After it was all over he was cooler than I have ever seen him.

"I am not going to have him found in your room," he said to me.

"What are you going to do about it, then?" I asked.

"'I am going to take him down to my study,' he replied, 'and—listen to me: If ever you tell a single soul that it was in your room I killed him, I will come back from the grave and treat you the same way.' That is the sort of man Cecil was. He carried Gervase into the study quite easily, arranged him cunningly in a natural attitude, telephoned for the police and confessed that a man had come to see him whom he very much disliked, that they had quarreled, and that he had killed him. Don't shiver, Humphrey. You virtually knew all this. Now I am going to add something."

"There is something else I very much want to know," Sir Humphrey admitted.

Promises to Tell All.

"You are going to know it," she promised him. "I was allowed to see him just before the end. I am going over this quickly. He had only one thing to say to me—'If ever you tell where I killed Gervase Benham,' he threatened, 'you will disobey my dying wish, and if they try to keep me in foul penal servitude I will break out, whomever I have to murder, and I will come back to you.'"

"God!" Sir Humphrey muttered. "You mean he wanted to die, then?"

"He preferred death to penal servitude. Now you know. He didn't want his reprieve. He didn't want to live. For some reason or other he was afraid to live. I think he was insane."

Sir Humphrey drew a long breath. Katherine's words had been like an inspiration. To him also seemed to have come some return of vigor, a keener appetite for life.

"You have a great career," she went on, "and you must go on with it, for your own sake and for mine, because it would make me miserable to know that disaster had come to you on my account."

Chapter IV.

Sir Humphrey made a little movement toward her and she saw the grateful light in his eyes. There was all the spirit of response in her swift smile.

"Dear Humphrey," she said, "just now we are too overwrought. We must be ourselves again before we yield to emotions like these. * * * Now I am going to ring for your favorite afternoon whisky and soda, and you are going to sit down and be quite natural and talk. Tell me your plans for the future and forget the past. Why not smoke? I have some wonderful cigarettes."

He lit one.

"The first since my illness," he confided, "and I thought myself an inveterate smoker. Katherine, for the present, I shall accept your point of view. You are, as I always knew you were, one of the most wonderful women in the world. I am not going to be behind you in this time of crisis. I will push the horror away, but before we dismiss it I must ask you one question."

"Ask me anything you will," she begged.

It seemed as he sat there that the lines deepened in his face. Once again he was sensing those moments of terror. His voice became almost metallic.

"Have you any idea," he asked, "what happened to me on the way up from Norfolk that night?"

"What happened to you?" she repeated fearfully. "What do you mean?"

Her magificent fortitude had gone. She was an actress, but there had come a time when she could not act. She was frightened.

Truth Like Melodrama.

"What I am going to tell you will sound like melodrama," he said gravely, "but it is the truth. I fell into the hands of a band of men who honestly, I believe, meant putting me out of the way in horrible fashion unless I promised to sign a reprieve for Cecil."

"Don't tell me any more about it," she cried. "Hadn't I been through it all before? I don't want to hear. I refused at first but I telephoned—I promised to go to you—I swore that I would get the reprieve, that you would give it to me when I told the truth."

"Then you saved my life," he acknowledged. "I very nearly lost my reason, but you saved my life."

"Forget it," she begged feverishly. "Do forget it. I broke my word to Cecil for that reason, and for that reason only. Your life was too precious a thing."

He sat a little more upright in his chair.

"Who were those people?" he asked, and his eyes were hard and there was a touch of the official in his tone.

The entrance of the waiter, the business of serving him with whisky and soda and serving her own cocktail gave her a few minutes' respite. When the waiter had finally gone she was still a shaken woman, but she had recovered a measure of her poise.

Affection Recounted.

"Humphrey," she said, and this time she came near to him and for the moment touched his shoulder with her fingers, "you know that I have a great affection for you and always have had. Anything in the world that was possible I would do for you. Do not ask me impossibilities. I know nothing."

Suddenly she fell on her knees by his side, took his head between her hands and kissed him on either cheek.

"You old dear," she exclaimed, "I am so glad they made you Home Secretary. You would have been an awful bore as a Judge! Don't be so terribly serious, please, and don't bother your head any more about things that are done with. Just sit down and get well and start work again. All the papers tell how you have been missed. Besides, you have my interests to look after now. You have no time for any more complications."

Barefoot Children Will Be Shod Soon

Baltimore Man to Donate Shoes After Survey.

Baltimore, Jan. 22 (AP).—Renewing his philanthropic work of last year, Raymond A. Sinsky, Baltimore financier, is preparing to put shoes and stockings on 50,000 poor children of Maryland this winter.

Sinsky about a year ago distributed approximately 50,000 pairs of shoes, many to children who had been trudging barefoot through the snow to get to school.

A survey is being made of the actual needs of the poor children of Baltimore and the 23 counties. An order for the entire lot needed will be placed with a New York manufacturer who furnished the shoes last year.

About half will be distributed in Baltimore under the direction of Police Commissioner Charles D Gaither. The rest, sent to cities and large towns of the State, will be distributed by welfare officials, Red Cross workers, State health officers and school officials.

Mating Control Used to Foster Wild Bird Life

Ornitholigist Tells of New Fertilization Plan at Convention.

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—"Sex rhythm" is destined to play an important part in the restoration of wild bird life, the American Game Association was told at its opening session today by Dr. A. A. Allen, professor of ornithology at Cornell University, in his address on his experiments with ruffed grouse.

It was Dr. Allen who first reared ruffed grouse in captivity.

"Birds are not sex conscious," Dr. Allen said. "They do not discriminate between male and female. The strong dominate the weak irrespective of sex.

"Contrary to belief, the breeding cycle of the male is of short duration, and synchronization of the cycles of the male and female is the all-important factor for perpetuation of the species.

"Nature provides for this by a certain pattern of behavior for each species which brings together males and females that are in exactly the same rhythm."

By separating the males and females and using stuffed birds to test the rhythms of the males, Dr. Allen determined when the male grouse passed out of the killing stage and into the matting stage and thus avoided injury to the female, and insured a fertility of their eggs as high as 96 per cent.

Hats of Russian Type Attain Popularity in Paris Salons

Designer Restricts Late Showings Entirely to New Models.

Latest reports from Paris say that Talbot is experiencing tremendous success with her Russian hats and has not shown anything else since she launched them. These hats are shown in many materials, such as horsehair, net or cire, and the colors are turquoise blue, beige and white.

Patou's new hats have shallow crowns and small brims dipping in front and back.

Maria Guy is still selling her off-the-face hats but has introduced some new ones which are much different, with shallow crowns and details such as shirrings or small drapings. Brims are often turned up in the back. Straw and antelope in pastel shades are her novelties.

Shallow Crowns Popular.

Descat shows only panamas and felts. The tailored hats have shallow crowns; brims dipped in front on the right side and rolled up on the left side. She shows one capeline of black picot with a very small crown and huge brim.

Blanche & Simone are making sailors with shallow crowns; brims are slightly rolled up in the back. These hats are worn on the side, dipping over the eye. This house is also using cire material — cire crown with straw brims.

Suzy believes that the off-the-face mode will not last. The hat is very much seen in Paris at the moment and her French clients are demanding it, but her new models are quite different. Sailors with shallow crowns are shown, which are worn very much on one side, some of them with the brim trimmed underneath with ruches of taffeta ribbon or flat velvet flowers, soft and becoming to the face.

Veils of Horse Hair.

A few new straw capelines of simple lines are trimmed with velvet ribbon and with floral embroidery.

New summer hats inspired from the Tonkenese shape are made of Bakou, trimmed with a bow placed on the side of the crown, near the face.

Horse hair veils are shown on horse hair hats, and horse hair crowns with small rolled brims of black velvet.

The mode of daintiness has not vanished. A great deal of lace is used on the spring and summer clothes that we have seen with old-fashioned velvets, organdies and other intriguing arrangements of ribbons and scarves held in place by clips and pins.

Spuds, With or Without Their Jackets, Do as They Are Done by in Many Savory Dishes

By Ann Barrett.

Take some potatoes. Boil them in their jackets and drain them the minute they're done. Then skin them, put 'em back in the pan over a low fire and shake them hard till their outsides begin to fluff off dry and mealy. Next, into a hot, buttered bowl with them. Sprinkle them with salt and spread them quickly with softened butter. Good? No, best—according to no less an authority than Edgar Rumpelmayer, whose restaurants in New York, London and Paris are world famous for their good food.

"En chemise" is what the French call potatoes cooked this way. Which is "in their jackets" to you and me. The potato in its plainest form—but a good one to prove my point: That the spud may be lowly, but it's got feelings and a personality. Cook it carelessly and it will sog you right back. But cook it respectfully (which means especially not to let it lie in the water a minute after it's done) and it will repay you a hundredfold in flavor. In such juicy forms as creamed, au gratin, scalloped, potatoes, potato salad, German hot potato salad; in crispy, brown forms such as hashed-brown, French fried, home-fried, Franconia, Anna, Parsienne. In delicate and fluffy forms such as mashed, puffed, Duchess, twice-baked. And dozens more.

Whenever possible in these recipes, it'll pay you to cook your potatoes in their jackets (after scrubbing them thoroughly with a stiff brush, of course). This not only saves the full worth of the potato (including flavor) but saves your own time and energy.

Creamed Potatoes.

As in this recipe for creamed potatoes, for example. Boil 4 medium-sized potatoes in their skins, then cut them into small dice (to make about 4 cups). In a heavy pan (or top of double boiler) melt 3 tablespoons butter, blend in 2 tablespoons flour, and cook till mixture bubbles. Then slowly stir in 1½ cups milk, stirring fast and constantly till mixture is smooth and thick. Add 1 teaspoon salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Then add potatoes, and let stand at least 10 minutes for flavor to blend. Sprinkle with chopped parsley before serving, if you like.

For de luxe creamed potatoes, substitute ¼ cup cream for ¼ cup of milk in above recipe. For au gratin potatoes, vary the recipe above in this way: After you've made the white sauce, take it from the fire and add ¾ cup soft American cheese (shaved fine). Then add potatoes, turn into buttered baking dish, top with ¼ cup fine bread crumbs first mixed with ¼ cup grated or shaved cheese, and bake in moderately hot oven (375 to 400 F.) till brown (about 10 minutes.)

Hashed-Brown Potatoes.

Here are hashed-brown potatoes (especially popular with men, for lunch, supper, or even breakfast—served with eggs, bacon, sausage or hamburg steak). The trick of making these is to chop them fine, use enough fat and liquid to make them stick together, cook them in a heavy iron skillet, pressing them down firmly onto the bottom of this, and then not stirring them at all.

Aside from this here's what: Peel and chop 5 medium-sized potatoes that have been cooked in their skins. Then mix in 2 teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, and 2 teaspoons grated onion (if you like it). Melt 4 tablespoons bacon (or other) fat in heavy fry pan. Turn in potatoes, and press them down firmly. Next, slowly pour over ½ cup milk, cover pan and cook over moderate fire till brown on bottom. Then (with meat turner) fold this cake over onto itself like an omelet, and serve at once. Or if you like, turn it over completely and brown the other side.

Mashed Potatoes.

As for mashed potatoes, here's the most important tip: Treat 'em rough. If you spare the beat, you'll spoil the spud. Take a firm grip on a mixing spoon, and go after them as if they were all the mean things in the world you'd like to smack down forever. You'll be rewarded by the whitest, fluffiest mashed potato any family ever marveled over!

The rest of the story is this: Peel 5 medium-sized potatoes and cook them 10 minutes in boiling water to cover. Then add 1½ teaspoons salt and cook till soft. Then drain at once, and mash. (Or put through ricer. Ricer is best for getting out lumps.) Then turn into this ½ cup milk, 4 tablespoons butter and ⅛ teaspoon pepper (first heated together till butter is melted). And beat! (Potatoes differ so much, you may need to add more milk. For a de luxe touch, reduce butter ½, and substitute ¼ cup hot, heavy cream for ¼ cup of the milk.)

This is really only the beginning of my potato story. I've wrapped up the rest of it in a full-five-page bulletin "Potatoes for Every Day and Dress-up Meals." It's a sort of Ten Commandments on the way to treat potatoes and contains all the recipes mentioned here and many more besides. 6c in loose stamps, with self-addressed envelope and coupon below will bring this to you promptly.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Iron Foods.

Prof. E. B. Hart is quoted as saying, "Since the campaign to induce children to drink more milk and use more cereals and greens, there has been an increase in nutritional anemia."

The statement is probably true, although there is no way of either proving or disproving it. It does not follow that the foods named are not good for children. It means that they are not rich in iron and they are not good builders of red blood, and children who fill up on them and fail to eat enough foods richer in iron become pale and anemic in the course of time. The evidence that this is true as to milk is good enough. Babies come into the world with a good stock of stored iron. If they live on milk alone they draw on this stock until it is exhausted. Soon thereafter they become white and bleached out in appearance.

With older chilren there is a better chance that they will get all the iron they need from the other ingredients of a mixed diet. However, milk is very filling and it satisfies hunger pretty well, and the child whose stomach is distended with milk may decline foods richer in iron.

The yellow of egg is a very good iron food, much better than milk, cream, or butter, and fortunately most children get eggs as well as milk. If a child ate nothing but eggs, Prof. Hart says, he would need to eat 15 yolks a day in order to get all the iron he needs. The whites contain no iron. But no child lives on eggs alone and part of the iron not supplied by egg yellows is obtained from other foods in the mixed diet.

The deficiency of iron in cereals is referred to by Prof. Hart. This is true of the cereals that have been freed from the outer parts of the grain. A child who lives largely on polished rice will become anemic unless he gets other foods that are rich in iron. But many of the cereals contain much of the outer parts of the grain and are, therefore, rather rich in iron. Brown rice and the cereals that contain a good deal of bran, or to which bran has been added, are more than average good iron foods.

The tendency is to belittle spinach and other greens. Children who refuse and even resent spinach are said by many to be responding to an inner urge that is almost divine in its wisdom. Spinach and the other greens are rich enough in certain vitamins and in chemicals that go to make richness of the blood. The principal objection to them is that they are bulky and a child may fill up on them and not want other foods. In consequence he may not get all the iron he needs.

Prof. Hart does not condemn milk, eggs, and greens. He does tell us that we must not overbalance the diet with them. We need to eat some meat, liver, tripe, bone marrow, and whole grains along with our milk and greens.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If January 23 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:20 to 8:20 a. m., from 2:30 to 3:30 p. m., and from 8 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 4 to 5 p. m. and from 9:30 to 10:30 p. m.

If you were born on January 23 the spirit of adventure holds you in its sway. Unfortunately the only way you have to gratify your desire is largely through the medium of books and day dreaming. On the surface you are of an apparently placid disposition. Few of your friends realize how much you crave excitement and most of them regard you as being very prosaic. Good food has a great attraction for you. It is advisable for you to guard against overindulgence. This day will prove to be full of many agreeable little surprises for you. You will meet some friends you have not seen in some time.

The child born on January 23 will display, as it grows up, a very strong tendency to insist on having its own way. It may prove advisable, very early in its life, for you to make it realize it must respect and comply with the wishes of its elders. You will find reasoning will accomplish much more than severity, or punishment, in disciplining this child. It will be musically inclined, and also have a high sense of appreciation for art in all its forms. You should encourage it to take an interest in outdoor sports.

The women born on January 23 will be predisposed to be "finicky" about unimportant little things. If you were born on January 23 you are a confirmed bargain hunter. You get almost as much pleasure out of doing window shopping as you do in actually buying. You are susceptible to flattery but sensible enough not to allow it to turn your head. You have many times imagined yourself to be desperately in love, but only one love affair will really count and be lasting. Your undertakings will terminate successfully.

If you are a man, and born on January 23, anything of a speculative nature has a strong attraction for you. Be careful that this love for easy gain, without exertion on your part, does not cause you to become reckless and jeopardize the money you have worked hard and diligently to earn. You have a very soft spot in your heart for the fair sex, but only one woman will eventually dominate your heart and life. Exercise caution before committing yourself to any new financial obligations, or in confiding confidences to anyone.

People born on January 23 are prone to be very skeptical, especially when others try and do them a favor, unsolicited, they feel that there is always an ulterior motive back of it. This is a wrong attitude to assume, as many times it is simply an expression of genuine friendship and only prompted by a desire to be of service. Have more faith in mankind.

Successful people born on January 23:

Josiah Quincy, lawyer and patriot.
Richard Alsop, poet.
William Page, artist.
Silas B. Cobb, pioneer capitalist.
Thomas Todd, jurist.
Russell Hinman, editor and author.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

We learn this truth from death; that life alone
Is filled with separations. Those who die
Never again take train to say good-by
Or shut the door. Where'er our paths are thrown
They too can go and make their presence known.
We who are living wait with wistful eye,
Watching for one we love to end the sigh
Of loneliness that chills our narrow zone.

We who are living know the space is great
Which oft divides us, and the hours are long.
We of the world must often separate.
The walls which shut us out are stout and strong,
But neither time, nor space, nor duties grim
Can keep a man's beloved dead from him.

Latest Model Reducing Diet Includes Beef

Filling Meal Permitted Folk Struggling to Lose Weight.

For those who must reduce, here is good news. Reducing can be done comfortably and with ease, simply by carefully choosing the diet, experiments have proved.

In the most effective of reducing diets, lean beef, because of its high quality protein, plays an important part. Protein is one of the body essentials, since it is being used constantly to build and repair body tissues. Even in reducing, it is dangerous to reduce the supply of protein. Lean beef furnishes plenty of high quality protein, and at the same time adds only a moderate number of calories.

—And It Satisfies.

In addition to its protein content lean beef helps the reducing diet by satisfying hunger, and producing a feeling of being well fed. Because it is not so quickly digested as some foods, the satisfied feeling lingers long after the meal is over. However, in the end it is almost completely digested, so this slower process proves a decided advantage in making the diet which is low in calories satisfying and comfortable.

Vegetables and fruits, both raw and cooked, hold prominent places in the latest reducing diets. These besides furnishing valuable minerals and vitamins, add bulk to the diet, and help to produce that feeling of satisfaction.

Bread, butter, and starchy vegetables are all included in the reducing diets, but these are to be eaten with moderation.

Eat and Reduce.

Breakfast:
A serving of fruit
An egg
A slice of toast
A pat of butter
Coffee (with very little cream and sugar)

Luncheon:
A small serving of lean beef
A serving of cooked vegetable
A serving of raw vegetable
A slice of bread
A pat of butter
A glass of milk
A serving of fruit

Dinner:
A large serving of lean beef
A serving of cooked vegetable
A serving of raw vegetable
A slice of bread
A pat of butter
A glass of milk
A serving of fruit

Meat Left-Overs Fill Supper Need

For the Sunday night supper a meat salad is ideal. It is a substantial dish which is easily prepared and, besides that, it furnishes a very good way of using the meat left from the Sunday dinner roast. The following recipe for pork salad is given by Inez S. Wilson, home economist:

Pork Salad Platter.

3 cups cold roast pork, diced
3 hard-cooked eggs
½ onion, grated
1 chopped green pepper
1 cup whipped cream
3 stalks celery, diced
Stuffed olives, sliced
Mayonnaise dressing
French dressing
Paprika

Add the diced celery and chopped green pepper to the diced pork. Grate in the onion. Marinate with French dressing. Add paprika and set aside to chill. When ready to serve add whipped cream to mayonnaise and fold into the salad. Pile in a rounded mound on crisp lettuce leaves on a large platter. Garnish the salad with slices of hard-cooked egg and olives. Around the salad place a border of pineapple slices masked with mayonnaise dressing and sprinkled liberally with paprika. Celery stalks, filled with cream cheese, add attractiveness.

Accord Near On District Liquor Board

Personnel Can BeChosen Today if President Signs Bill.

Allen Foresees Sales 16 or 17 Days After Enactment.

The deadlock between Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and George E. Allen over the number of women to be appointed to the District Liquor Control Board probably will be broken today at a conference of the District Commissioners at which the board will be selected if President Roosevelt signs the bill today.

It is apparent that the Commissioners are in accord on the appointment of George W. Offutt, banker and lawyer, if he will accept. All the Commissioners hope he will accept, although they deny they have approached him.

Nine Mentioned for Board.

The board probably will select two of the members from the following candidates: Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the war President; Mr. Offutt, Isaac T. Gans, chairman of the District Parole Board; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Miss Etta Taggart, Mrs. William Beverly Mason, wife of a prominent physician, and R. A. Dickson, president of the Central Labor Union.

There is a possibility of a "dark horse" in the selection of the third member. Other candidates in the running for the third position are Charles W. Ray, president of the Brightwood Citizens Association, and J. Enos Ray, collector of the internal revenue for the Maryland district.

A conference between Commissioners Hazen and Allen failed to break the deadlock on the subject of women members. Commissioner Hazen is anxious that only one woman serve on the board, while Commissioner Allen insists on two women.

Sales Plan Completed.

The regulations under which liquor is to be sold are expected to be adopted today. Corporation Counsel William W. Bride and his principal assistant, Vernon E. West, were in Commissioner Allen's office yesterday when the rough draft of the rules was completed. They discussed the question whether "service bars" would be permitted in hotels.

Owners and managers of places where liquor is sold will be held accountable for acts of employes, Commissioner Allen said.

If the President signs the bill today, Commissioner Allen is anxious that a joint resolution be passed in Congress appropriating approximately $99,000 to cover the costs of operating the liquor board for the rest of the current fiscal year and for the fiscal year 1935. Until the appropriation is granted, the board will be unable to function.

Inspectors Reduced to Five.

The Budget Bureau, it is understood, has approved an estimate submitted by District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, except that the number of inspectors has been reduced from ten to five. It is still possible that the number requested may be granted.

Commissioner Allen believes liquor will be available here 16 or 17 days after President Roosevelt signs the bill.

Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the Committee on Civic Affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, yesterday sent a letter to Commissioner Allen, saying the committee "is relying on you to see that this exceedingly liberal bill is enforced in such a way as to protect the public, and I personally have confidence that you will make every effort to do so. I have every confidence that you will play the game squarely."

Cosmos Club Hears Soviet Discussed

Speaker Traces Progress Toward Normal.

The Soviet Union's gradual trend toward normal self-indulgence was described to the Cosmos Club last night by David Ostrinsky, economist and authority on the new Russia.

The rising generation of Russia has much in common with American youth of the pioneer days, Ostrinski said. The typical Soviet youth is an extravagant rather than an intravert. Ostrinski said recognition of Russia by the United States had done a great deal to wipe out the Soviet persecution complex.

Tuberculosis Unit Reelects Dr. White

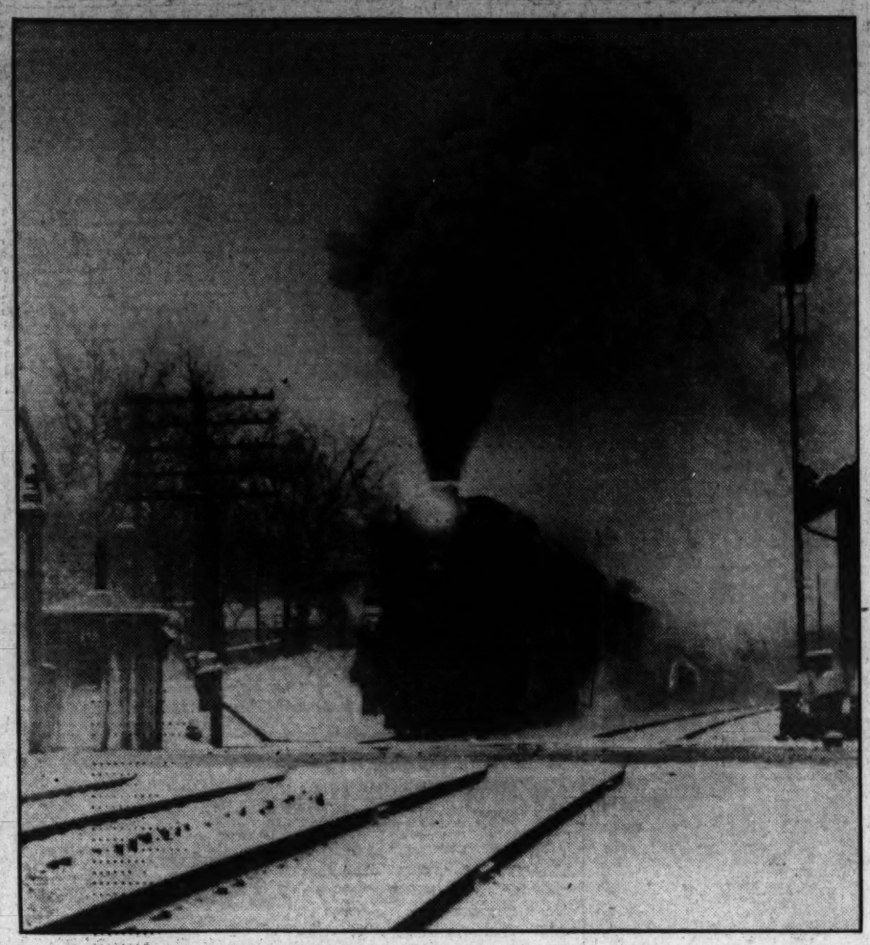

Reichelderfer Gets Place on Directorate.

Dr. William Charles White was reelected president of the District Tuberculosis Association by the board of directors yesterday. Dr. White is chairman of the National Research Committee of the National Tuberculosis Associaiton.

Other officers reelected are George S. Wilson, director of public welfare, vice president; Walter S. Pratt, treasurer, and Willard C. Smith, secretary.

Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, former president of the District Board of Commissioners, was elected director to succeed Dr. C. F. Smith, assistant surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, transferred to Norfolk.

Rust Bill to Aid Cattle Owners Scores Victory

Senate Committee Favors Lessening Liability for Stray Stock.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Jan. 22.—Another victory was scored today by Senator John W. Rust, Fairfax, in his movement to lessen the responsibility of farmers for damage caused by stray cattle.

Rust obtained a favorable report from the Senate Courts and Justice Committee on a bill to make owners pay $1, plus actual damage, for each trespass.

"The existing law is unfair," Rust said. "It requires the owner to pay $1 a head every time his cattle break through a fence, even if 100 head go astray and even if there isn't any damage to speak of."

Plans to fight imposition of additional taxes asked by Gov. Perry were announced today by Senator Cecil Connor, Leesburg.

The veteran Senator explained he favored the Governor's enlarged program for schools, but considered the tax burden already large enough.

"Why not run up a small deficit for schools?" he asked. "It would be easy to wipe out the deficit later, when conditions improved. Virginia's credit is good."

Mr. Connor recalled that a $5,000 deficit existing when former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle was in office, soon was removed.

He voiced bitter opposition to sales taxes.

"The sales tax is a consumer's tax and wrong in principle," he contended.

District Library Body Hears Moore Tonight

Charles B. Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, will address the District Library Association on "The Planning of the City of Washington" tonight at 8:15 o'clock in the Public Library.

"The Washingtoniana Collection of the Public Library" will be discussed by Miss Ethel Lacy, curator of the Washingtoniana of the Public Library.

Dr. George Heald, Health Editor, Dies

Takoma Park Physician Ill Six Months.

Dr. George Henry Heald, 73, of Takoma Park, Md., associate editor of "Life and Health" magazine, died yesterday at his residence. He had been in ill health about six months.

A native of California, Dr. Heald practiced medicine on the West Coast until 1904, when he came to Washington. He was formerly on the staff of the Helena Sanitarium, in California.

Dr. Heald is survived by his widow and one daughter, Mrs. Leonore Artress, of College Dale, Tenn. Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday.

Clothing Stolen From Car.

Clothing valued at $50 was reported stolen yesterday from the automobile of John Cowles, Long Branch, N. J., parked near Twelfth and D streets southwest.

Home Looted of $400.

Thieves escaped with loot estimated at $400 from the home of Samuel Giovanetti, 1318 Buchanan street northwest, early yesterday. The loss included jewelry and cash, police were told.

Proud?

District Has New Record for Arrests.

Washington motorists violated more traffic regulations last week than ever before in the history of Traffic Bureau records.

For a six-day period, concluding at 8 p. m. Saturday, 886 arrests were made for minor traffic infractions. Of these 127 were speeding cases. More than half the remainder were parking offenses. Friday was banner day with 190 cases.

Parking in restricted zones brought the greatest number of arrests. Overtime parking and disobeying official signs ran second. Others included similar minor infractions. Sixteen speeding cases were second offenses.

2,363 Adult and 500 Boys' Memberships Shown at Annual Dinner.

Reports on activities of the Young Men's Christian Association were made last night by officials of the organization at an annual dinner meeting at the Central Y. M. C. A.

Leonard W. DeGast, general secretary, reported 60 per cent of the 2,363 adult members were under 35 years old and that the boys membership totaled nearly 500.

Other reports were given by John L. Vandergrift, promotion chairman; W. C. Hanson, physical education chairman; Worth Shoults, boys' work chairman; George A. Lewis, educational department chairman; John W. Hardell, house committee chairman; M. O. Chance, religious work chairman, and W. M. Guthrie, camp committee chairman.

Dr. Arthur C. Christie was toastmaster.

Contract for Bridle Path Span Approved

A contract with Peter and A. J. Ellis, Inc., to construct the Saddle Club bridle path bridge in Rock Creek Park for $4,288 was approved yesterday by the office of National Capital Parks and sent to Secretary Ickes.

The bridge is one of the replacements of foot and equestrian bridges washed away by the heavy storms last August. Its design was approved by the Fine Arts Commission.

Hard Blow

Man Loses His "Support" As Wife Is Jailed.

Willie Lee lost his "support" yesterday.

His wife, Augusta, was in Police Court charged with intoxication. Judge John P. McMahon was ready to pass sentence when Lee hurried from his seat among the spectators and stepped to the witness stand.

"Judge, your honor," he pleaded, "don't send my wife to jail—she's my support."

"Do you mean to say you don't work?" the court asked.

"Oh, yes, suh, I works," Lee answered, "but she is my support."

But Judge McMahon took away Lee's "support" for 10 days.

District Utility Surveys Vary By $5,000,000

Estimate of Depreciation by Companies Only $965,889.

A difference of approximately $5,000,000 exists in the depreciation figures submitted yesterday to the Public Utilities Commission by the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light companies, and the estimates of depreciation prepared by the commission's experts.

August C. Klein, a public utilities expert, testified the depreciation for both companies is $965,829, of which $893,046 is allocated to the Washing Gas Light Co. The commission experts are expected to claim depreciation amounting to $5,800,000.

Of the major items of depreciation for the Washington company, Klein listed the following: Structures, $212,205; water gas sets, $81,305; accessory equipment, $79,640; services, excluding paving, $100,771; consumers' meters, $170,135, and general equipment, $83,585.

The discrepancy between company figures and calculations of the commission experts constitutes one of the major issues in the valuation hearings, which will be used as a basis for determining gas rates.

The only exception in which he allowed depreciation was in the figures on automobiles and trucks. He computed the depreciation on a mileage basis and pointed out the company could not afford to permit its rolling stock to appear old.

Car Driver Denies Hit-and-Run Guilt

Bishop, Freed in Death of Wife, Posts Bond.

Pleading not guilty of hit-and-run driving, Earle E. Bishop, freed by a grand jury several months ago in the fatal shooting of his wife, demanded a jury trial in Traffic Court yesterday and was released under $1,000 bond.

It was alleged Bishop failed to stop his car after it struck the machine of Joseph S. Harris, of Brentwood, Md., at Fourteenth street and Maryland avenue northeast, early Sunday.

Peter Harris, 36, of 3220 Twelfth street northeast, a passenger in the latter car, was reported in a critical condition at Casualty Hospital yesterday. He suffered spine injuries which left him paralyzed.

Police said Biship told them he did not stop because he "had to take his girl home."

Decision Waited on Loan for Direct Route to Eastern Shore.

Funds Granted Maryland Not Yet Allocated for Work.

With considerable Public Works funds allotted Maryland not yet allocated to specific projects, decisions on several projects are expected soon. The Post learned last night. Included is one of importance to Washington—the grant of $425,000 as part of the fund to install a ferry across Chesapeake Bay, from Chesapeake Beach to the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

A favorable decision would end a controversy of several years in which the project, backed by Washington's trade and civic organizations, has been fought unsuccessfully through the Interstate Commerce Commission and the United States Supreme Court by the Annapolis Claibourne Ferry Co.

Would Open Market.

The ferry would place 200,000 persons on the Eastern Shore of Maryland in direct communication with Washington, providing a market for agricultural products. Maryland politicians have backed the Annapolis ferry in its long fight against ending their monopoly.

For some time the Public Works Administration has been considering the loan, which would go to the Chesapeake Beach Railway Co. The whole project of constructing the ferry, including docks and wharves is estimated by the company to require more than $800,000. The company applied for the loan of $425,000 and agreed to put in their own capital first.

A public hearing held on the proposal several months ago was attended by a large delegation from the Eastern Shore and also from the Western Shore counties of Prince Georges, St. Marys and Charles, in favor of the project.

Politics Charged.

The ferry would place Washington only two hours from Cambridge, over a direct route of improved highway.

In a brief which the Washington Chamber of Commerce filed in the case, it was charged that the Annapolis-Claibourne Ferry was a monopoly backed by political influence in Maryland. Former Gov. Emerson C. Harrington of Maryland is president of the company, and State Treasurer John M. Dennis is one of the stockholders. Gov. Albert C. Ritchie was a former stockholder, it was stated.

It was also charged in the arguments made by the civic and trade bodies of Washington that the Annapolis-Claibourne Ferry Co. has been receiving a subsidy from Maryland, and that in one year when it received a subsidy of $23,000 it earned more than 108 per cent.

Barber Bill Asks Regulation Here

Examination of Health One of Features.

Regulation of barbering in the District by a board of examiners was proposed yesterday in a bill introduced in the House by Representative Loring Black, jr., of New York, of the House District Committee, at the request of the Barbers' Union, Local 239.

Barbers would be required to obtain licenses under the bill after they had been examined as to moral character and physical condition, particularly to determine that they are free of contagious infection or communicable disease.

Black said 40 States now have similar license laws and that its adoption by Congress would safeguard public health in the District. He also pointed out it would prevent an influx of wandering barbers into Washington.

Delayed Report Brings Charge in Fatal Crash

Page G. Johnson, colored, of Chesterbrook, Va., was held for action of the grand jury yesterday, following a coroner's inquest into the death of Lawrence Harry, 30, of 4907 Howard street northwest.

Harry died Saturday in Emergency Hospital from injuries received Christmas Eve when he was struck by Johnson's machine. The latter was charged with failing to report an accident immediately.

Mrs. Norton Seeks Full-Time Woman for Rum Board Here

Prefers One With Business Experience Possessing "Common Sense."

The sponsor of the original proposal that a woman be named on the District Alcohol Beverage Board, Representative Mary T. Norton, yesterday stated she is interested in seeing the commissioners name a woman who can devote full time to the job.

"I want to see appointed a woman who has common sense and ability whose time will not be occupied partially in other pursuits," Mrs. Norton said.

She indicated she believed a business or professional woman would be better suited for the work than a society woman.

Mrs. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, suggested the language in the bill drafted by the District Commissioners. When members of the Senate District Committee argued that the specification of a woman board member was unnecessary, she consented to its withdrawal, but it was understood the commissioners would appoint a woman, nevertheless.

Layton Appears for Arraignment

Alfred M. Layton, charged with swindling prominent men in connection with presenting the Nation a bust of Gen. John J. Pershing, greeted friends yesterday in Commissioner Turnage's office, where he was arraigned and freed on $10,000 bond.

School Relief Will Continue, Says Alderman

Lunches and Adult Classes Are Not to Suffer by CWA Cuts.

Educational relief services being established in the District will not suffer by threatened exhaustion of CWA funds, but progress will be cautious, Dr. L. R. Alderman, an assistant director of the Federal Emergency Relief, announced yesterday to persons interested in the present hot lunch program.

Teachers promised jobs in schools for adults and in nursery centers will function in the assigned work, but it is doubtful if more jobs will be forthcoming, Alderman said. He made it plain that those teachers already engaged, or promised work, would be taken care of.

Officials at the Franklin School Building had announced that plans for establishment of ten nursery schools and various educational projects for adults were at a standstill pending official advice from the CWA.

At present, 4,000 public and parochial children are being given free hot lunches. The results of a survey showed 4,001 children in the public schools alone are in need of aid, and since then it has been ruled that parochial school children also are entitled to relief.

Five Are Sued On Stock Levy

Bank of U. S. Holders Named in Action by N. Y. Officer.

Five stockholders of the defunct Bank of the United States, New York City, yesterday were sued in the District Supreme Court because of their alleged failure to pay assessments upon their stock, by Joseph A. Broderick, New York State superintendent of banks.

Those named, and the amounts sought from each are: Minnie Swimmer, Twenty-first and I streets northwest, $250; Bertha G. Holzman, 2440 Sixteenth street northwest, $3,750; Mrs. Agnes Page Bartlett, Wardman Park Hotel, $2,500; Elmer Stewart, 1346 F street northwest, executor of the estate of Joseph Stewart, $250, and Ray E. Schinder, 2357 Ashmead place northwest, administrator of the estate of Samuel D. Schinder, $250.

The bank was closed December 11, 1930, and in 1932, Broderick made assessments of 100 per cent on the stockholders. The superintendent claimed the bank owed in excess of $30,000,000. It was capitalized at $25,250,000.

Site Indecision Holding Up New Naval Hospital

House Hearing Assured Plans for $3,100,000 Project Are Ready.

Indecision on a site for the proposed new Naval Hospital in Washington is delaying construction, it was revealed in hearing data on the Navy appropriations bill, released yesterday.

Rear Admiral A. L. Parsons, chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, told the House subcommittee that no funds for construction of the hospital were asked in the 1935 estimates, although plans are practically complete.

The hospital was authorized two years ago at a cost of $3,100,000, and $100,000 was appropriated to draft plans. At that time it was intended to locate the new institution on the site of the existing hospital, and this plan was approved by the Fine Arts Commission and the Public Buildings Commission.

"The plans and specifications have substantially been completed," Admiral Parsons said, "and it is just being held up pending settlement of policy as to whether it should or should not be built, or whether, if built, it should be built there or elsewhere."

Replying to a committee question, Admiral Parsons said the present Naval Hospital is inadequate "and out of date as a modern hospital."

Stewart Collins Heads County Night Schools

Stewart Collins, of Riverdale, Md., has been appointed "teacher in charge" of the Prince Georges County night schools for the unemployed, it was announced yesterday by Nicholas Orem, superintendent.

The county now has 12 white teachers and 15 colored teachers conducting the schools in Laurel, Bowie and Mount Rainier. There are approximately 600 students enrolled and classes are held two hours a night three nights a week.

Offley Is Ordered To Naval College

Fourth to Be Sent From Coordinator's Office.

Col. Edward M. Offley, 1334 Thirty-First street northwest, assigned to the office of the Chief Coordinator, War Department, in April, 1932, yesterday was ordered transferred to duty as a student at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., effective July 1.

Col. Offley came to the War Department from Fort Riley, Kans. He served in the chief coordinator's office until October 2, 1933, and was transferred to the office of the chief of staff on the expiration of leave, December 15, 1933.

Col. Offley was the fourth officer relieved of duty here for study at the Naval college this month. Maj. Clift Andrus, Maj. Leslie MacDill and Maj. William Nalle were the others.

Layton Posts $10,000 Bail In Bust Case

Fraud Charge Hearing Waived by Promoter of Memorial.

Officers Hunt Pershing Committee Papers on Warrant.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner N. C. Turnage on a charge of "using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud," Alfred M. Layton, of the Kennedy-Warren Apartments, yesterday was released on $10,000 bond.

Besieged by photographers in the commissioner's office, Layton showed a flash of temper when he hurled his hat at a retrealtng cameraman who had snapped him in a moment of unpreparedness.

Waiving the privilege of a preliminary hearing, Layton simply posted bond for his appearance in two weeks. He was represented by J. Frank Lillard, of Hyattsville, Md., while Assistant United States Attorney Walter M. Shea represented the Government.

Squier Started Inquiry.

Layton's arrest grew out of an investigation launched when Gen. George O. Squier, chairman of the Gen. John J. Pershing Portrait-Bust Committee, complained to the then United States Attorney Leo A. Rover that irregularities had been discovered in the manner in which Layton, engaged to solicit funds for purchase of a bust, had conducted the campaign.

Investigators learned, they said, that $11,000 had been raised by Layton. The money was to be used in purchasing from Moses W. Dykaar, internationally known sculptor, a bust he had done of Gen. Pershing. The bust was to have been presented to the Government as a memorial to Gen. Pershing.

Instead of confining himself to the immediate circle of Gen. Pershing's friends, Layton circularized scores of prominent men. According to Gen. Squier, he was supposed to confine his efforts to approximately 50 men. The plan to include others developed while Gen. Squier was in Chicago as a director of the World Fair.

Can "Account" for Funds.

Layton told arresting officers who took him from his apartment early Sunday morning that he could account for all the money he had raised. He refused to amplify that statement yesterday.

While Layton was in jail yesterday, Gen. Squier swore out a writ of replevin in the District Supreme Court and deputy United States marshals searched a place at 1616 K street northwest for papers, furniture, files and bank data belonging to the Pershing committee.

Gen. Squier said the material sought was being "wrongfully detained." The marshals reported they had found some of the articles described in the writ.

The writ also asked, in the event the articles named were not found, that a money judgment of $5,000 be declared in favor of Gen. Squier against Layton. Attorney James A. Purcell filed the petition.

A grand jury investigation of the charge is expected this week.

Northeast Citizen Body To Hear Hazen Tonight

Stocks React Slightly on Quiet Trading

Dealing Proceeds Cautiously as Turnover Drops to 2,628,290 Shares.

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Markets proceeded more cautiously today in quieter trading. For stocks, declines outnumbered advances, by a small margin and the averages were down slightly.

Profit-taking cut more of a figure in the market, as was probably to have been expected in view of last week's recovering.

Dollar exchange moved narrowly, a feature being steadiness of the pound sterling.

Old Line Leaders Recede.

On the stock exchange, several Old Line leaders receded fractionally. Oils offered fresh leadership for the rally around noon, but other groups failed to make much response. Metals firmed toward the close. Rails eased.

Brokers noted the market's inclination to dullness on reactions, taking this to mean that comparatively little stock was for sale notwithstanding the recent rally. Sales totaled 2,628,290 shares.

Optimistic forecasts of steel industry prospects provided a cheerful background for the earlier trading. Later, however, Wall Street heard that the "official" estimate of the Iron & Steel Institute would show a decrease; when the figure came out it put current operations at 32.5 per cent of capacity against 34.2 per cent last week.

Selling of Steel.

There was some selling of steel shares in the last hour, but casualties were unimportant. U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Rolling Mill and Youngstown yielded mildly. American Can displayed independent strength, rising more than 2.

American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, Roan Antelope and U. S. Smelting were among the stronger metals, up fractions to better than a point.

Motors dipped under pressure of rather insistent profit-taking, but confined their losses to moderate proportions. Chemicals did likewise. The oil group was up about 1 to 3 points at one time as buying suddenly became brisk.

December Rail Earnings.

Some of the railroad earnings for December, now beginning to trickle in, are attracting notice. Southern Pacific, for example, reports December net operating income of $1,072,771 against $107,254 for the same month of 1932, and the aggregate for roads whose figures are already at hand represents a substantial improvement.

However, some Wall street quarters believed that the carriers would devote a good measure of more prosperous incomes to maintenance of expenditures which were sharply curtailed during the period of dropping traffic, and that many roads would be in no hurry about restoring regular dividends on common equities.

Banking quarters are doing their usual guessing as to the next treasury financing.

Large Future Earnings.

An offer of between $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 out of the six billions indicated for between now and midyear is anticipated by some.

One or two year Treasury notes are being most frequently mentioned as the probable vehicle.

Sterling's reluctance to depart very far from the $5 level was an interesting development in the foreign exchange market. Whether informal discussions regarding the ratio of the two currencies have started has not been disclosed, but maintenance of a narrow range for the pound over a longer period would attract attention and lead to assumptions that efforts toward an agreement were in the making.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—The stock exchange started the week with a rather cheerful tone. Gold mining, oil and transatlantic issues advanced on good support, but gilt-edged securities and other stocks eased later. The market closed quiet.

Paris—Reflecting the irregularity of the Wall street market, business on the bourse was dull, slight losses being registered in many issues. Rentes were stronger. The market closed rather sluggish.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse opened firm with coal and industrial shares higher. Quotations, however, sagged later and closed under their best.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Desirability of Government Ownership of Railroads Does Not Rest Upon Present Financial Plight of the United States Treasury.

By Ralph West Robey.

It is doubtful, it seems to me, if anyone will change his opinion on the desirability of Government ownership of the railroads as a result of the report just made by Coordinator Eastman. Those who have opposed such a move will persist in their belief that he fails to answer the standard objections to Government ownership. Others will insist that his arguments are conclusive. What this means, in a word, is that Mr. Eastman has not brought any new facts or logic to the problem. The question, by and large, is exactly where it was before he submitted the report.

This question, I think, is far more basic than one of whether the Government can afford to assume at present such a financial obligation as would be involved in taking over the railroads. In fact, I can not see that this immediate financial aspect is especially pertinent to the problem. Of course, the Government is deeply in the red and has plans for fantastic deficits in the next year or so, but this is beside the point. This is because if Government ownership is desirable, and granting the price at which the roads are taken over is at all reasonable, it should not result in a financial burden to the country.

Increased Debt Would Be Self-Supporting.

In other words, although Government acquisition would result in an increase in the public debt, this debt would be self-supporting. Not only would there be actual assets underlying the Government obligations issued for the purpose of acquiring the roads, but the earnings of the carriers would be sufficient to meet the interest charges on the securities. From the financial point of view, therefore, Government ownership should be just as desirable now as at any other time. If the plan is sound, it should be sound today just as well as in times of prosperity.

The fact that Mr. Eastman concludes that he thinks the country is "not now financially in a condition to stand the strain of an acquisition" of the railroads, therefore, seems to me to be a strong point against the practical wisdom of Government ownership not only now, but at any time. Theoretically, and under ideal conditions, there admittedly are strong arguments in favor of such ownership. As a practical program, however, one finds insuperable difficulties. It is upon these that one's final conclusion must rest.

Practical Shortcomings Now Generally Recognized.

These practical considerations are so generally recognized that there is no point in discussing them. They include such questions as the lack of initiative under government ownership, the greater waste and inefficiency which characterizes non-profit organizations, political meddling in appointments, sectional favoritism, &c. Mr. Eastman does not offer an adequate answer to these arguments. He merely says, in effect, that they need not be true. This may be granted. Of course there is no theoretical reason why we should not be able to have a governmentally appointed board that is free of politics. The fact is, however, that we have been unable to get one.

The real issue involved, then, it seems to me, is not whether the Government can afford financially to take over the roads at present, but whether we are going to be realists or idealists and dreamers. This is not, it should be emphasized, a choice between the racketeering type of management and control of before 1929 and an ideally operated Government ownership. Rather, it is a choice between a reformed private ownership and a politically managed government ownership. Granting that we propose to continue under an economic system of private capitalism, I think it desirable to try a reformed private ownership for the railroads.

Bond Market Gains Fraction In Profit Drive

Secondary Loans Holding to Narrow Range; Sales $18,417,000.

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Profit-taking in the recently strong secondary loan groups held the bond market in a rather restricted range today, but prices, as a whole, were resistant to realizing.

Although the trading activity was still above normal, the sales total of $18,417,000, par value, compared with $20,324,000 last Friday. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues advanced .1 of a point to 80.9. The average for 20 selected industrials also edged up .1 of a point to another new 1933-34 high.

Little Change in Business.

There was little change in the bright business picture. Steel production, freight car loadings, electric power output and retail sales apparently were holding up to expectations.

The revival of interest in both speculative and investment bonds was attributed by some dealers to the belief that yields, in many instances, are attractive in view of the fact that most corporations now have little fear of meeting interest and maturities.

Rail gainers of fractions to 2 or more points included some liens of Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line, Canadian Pacific, St. Paul, Rock Island, Colorado & Southern, Cuban Railway, Delaware & Hudson, Denver & Rio Grande, K.-C. Southern, M.-K.-T., Morris & Essex, Nickel Plate, Pere Marquette, Union Pacific and Western Pacific. Among reactionary issues in this division were some of Southern Railway, Frisco, Missouri Pacific, Erie, Chicago & North Western, Chesapeake Corporation, and Alleghany Corporation.

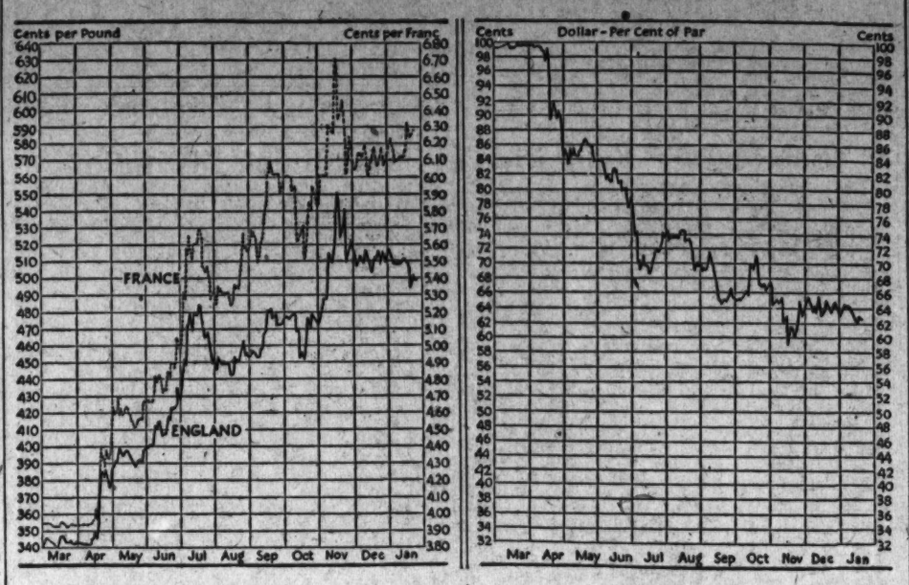

On Advancing List.

Utility and industrial advances of fractions to around 2 points were recorded by bonds of American I. G. Chemical, Consolidated Gas, International Paper, Lorillard, National Steel, Philadelphia Co., Phillips Petroleum, Remington Rand, Warner Bros., and Warren Bros.

Only about $400,000 of U. S. Government securities changed hands. The tone here was steady to firm. Foreign obligations were mixed.

Some bonds of Cuba, Buenos Aires, Batavia, Dresden City, Dutch East Indies and France moved up 1 to around 3. British loans eased, as did some of the Australians and Argentines.

S. P. Railroad Income Rises To $1,072,771

Procter and Gamble Report 6 Months' Profits of $7,107,517.

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Net operating income of the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. for December totaled $1,072,771 compared with $965,517 in the same month in 1932. Twelve months net operating income amounted to $9,057,074 compared with $3,450,917 the previous year.

Procter & Gamble Co. reports net profit of $7,107,517 for the first six months of its fiscal year ended December 31 last, equal to $1.03 a common share, compared with $4,621,700, or 64 cents a share in the same period of 1932.

Northwestern Public Service Co. has declared dividends of 87½ cents and 75 cents, respectively, on the 7 per cent and 6 per cent cumulative preferred stocks.

These payments are one-half the normal rate, but mark resumption of dividends, the last disbursements having been on June 1 last when regular quarterly dividends were paid. The disbursements are payable March 1 to holdings of record February 20.

Net profit of the Detroit Edison Co. for the year 1933 totaled $6,350,293, against $6,879,763 in 1932.

In a lengthy letter to shareholders, which covered every phase of the company's operations during the year, Alex Dow, president, said more than half of the decrease was in sales to commercial services such as stores and small consumers who take current at secondary voltages.

Net profits of $414,912.22, after all charges, for the fiscal year of 1933 was reported to stockholders of the General Tire & Rubber Co. Tuesday morning by W. O'Neill, president of the company, at the annual meeting.

This profit is equivalent to earnings of $2.67 a share on the company's common stock, after provision has been made for the regular annual dividend payments of $6 a share on the preferred stock. During the previous year, the net earnings on the common stock has been 15 cents a share.

The company closed the year with $1,144,830.80 in cash in banks and on hand and without any indebtedness of any kind in the form of bonds, notes, or bank obligations, Mr. O'Neil reported. The company's cash position was improved during the year to the extent of $835,809.43.

Net profit for the year, after all charges, was more than double that of 1932, when net earnings amounted to $202,353.79.

Curb's Prices Close Mixed in Profit-Taking

Rallying Attempts Halted by Reactions; Sales Cut to 427,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Profit taking offered resistence to the renewal of the advance on the curb exchange today and prices ended moderately irregular. Several rallying attempts were initiated during the forenoon but reactionary tendencies followed. Dealings, however, were less active on the selling.

Oils, which firmed around the noon hour coincident with the demand for petroleum shares on the big board, retained part of their gains. Gulf halved a 4-point advance and Standard Oils of Kentucky and Nebraska and Humble Oil finished a little higher.

Alcohols and metals yielded slightly, but utilities were resistant. A few specialities ranged higher. Safety Car Heating, Seeman Brothers, Columbia Gas & Electric preferred and Jones & Laughlin got up 2 to around 3 points in light transfers. Electric Bond & Share and Swift & Co. were steady, but Newmont, Hiram Walker, General Tire & Rubber and New Jersey Zinc reacted around a point each.

Transfers approximated 427,000 shares, compared with 473,000 for last Friday.

Wool Markets.

Boston, Jan. 22 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Recent improvement in sales of wool on the Boston market was associated with a more active goods market. The increased demand for goods was also given as an explanation of the heavier deliveries of wool tops on contracts placed last fall. Quotations on domestic wool were generally firm and unchanged from the close of last week.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during the week ended January 20 amounted to 171,700 pounds, compared with 277,000 pounds during the previous week.

Dried Fruits.

Goods Market.

New York, Jan. 22 (A.P.).—Dry goods primary markets opened generally firm and with a very fair amount of new business offering, chiefly for future deliveries. Unfinished cottons were hesitant due to a raw material market at the opening. Prices were unchanged. Finished goods continue strong with colored cottons in good demand. Rayon weaving yarns are selling more freely. More demand is reported from cutters for low priced worsteds and woolens, with tweeds most active. Silks were firm and quiet. Burlaps opened steady with demand light.

Rubber Closes Easy.

The Markets at a Glance

What the Stock Market Did.

	Mon.	Sat.
Advances	340	386
Declines	354	195
Unchanged	168	136
Total issues	862	717

Stocks—Trading proceeded cautiously on quiet dealing and the market sagged two-tenths of a point. Profit-taking continued to cut a figure in the market. Several old leaders declined slightly. Sales dropped to 2,628,290 shares.

Bonds—Secondary loan group held the market within a narrow range, but the list managed an average gain of one-tenth of a point. Profit-taking was in evidence. Sales volume decreased to $18,417,000.

Curb—Profit-taking halted further attempts of the market to rally, and prices closed irregular. Oils retained part of the gains. Utilities and industrials were resistant. Sales dropped slightly to 427,000 shares.

Wheat—Selling on the part of the Eastern houses was blamed for a decline in wheat values. Traders were inclined to await monetary developments at Washington. Corn and oats joined the declines. May wheat sold at 89⅝; July, at 87⅞.

Cotton—Prices had an irregular swing, with the final levels about $1 per bale lower. March contracts were reduced to 11.12. The general market closed barely steady with net declines of 9 to 12 points. January sold at 11.08.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed easy, 20 to 30 points lower. January sold at 9.49; March at 9.64 to 9.65.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged and sold at 3.25; refined sold at 4.30.

Coffee—Spot coffee demand was quiet. Santos No. 4 sold at 10¼ to 10½; Rio No. 7 at 9⅜.

Silver—Bar silver was steady and unchanged at 44⅜ cents per ounce.

Gold—Bar gold in the United States was unchanged at $34.45 per ounce. It sold in London at 132 shillings and 11 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar fell slightly on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.00¼ to the English pound, 6.27½ cents to the French franc and 38 cents to the German mark.

Eastern Slight Choice Over Unbeaten Central in Series Clash Today

Hornsby Sees Tight Race In League

No Super Club to Fear in 1934, Adds Office Head of Browns.

Wastes No Sympathy on A's; Says All Teams Need Bolstering.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 22 (AP).—A spirited American League pennant race, with no superclub to mar the fun, is envisioned by Vice President L. C. McEvoy and Manager Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Browns.

"It looks to me," said Hornsby today, "that the league has better balance than for years."

"Yes," agreed McEvoy. "We've suffered from superclubs for the last six or seven years. One or two teams just too good for the rest. I don't see any superteams this year."

3 Teams Add Strength.

"None of them look super to me, either," commented the Rajah, who came over from the National League to manage the Browns near the end of the last campaign after Bill Killifer had been deposed. "Boston, St. Louis and Detroit, especially, have added strength, but there isn't a club that couldn't stand improvement."

"How'll they finish? I'm not trying to figure that out, but the Browns won't finish last this year," said Hornsby. "I'll let the rest of them worry about where they'll finish."

And to prove he would let the other clubs do their own worrying without assistance from him, Hornsby refused to join the very large group of worriers for Connie Mack, who has sent such stars as Lefty Grove, Max Bishop and Mickey Cochrane to other clubs.

A's Batteries Uncertain.

"The Athletics," he commented, "look like a good team to me. Nothing the matter with the infield or outfield, but, of course, the batterymen are uncertain."

"If Mack's young pitchers come through," said McEvoy, "the 'wrecked' athletics will be anything but easy."

And McEvoy, who is both a business man and a baseball fan, ardently hopes he's right about there being no superteam this year, because close races mean business at the box office, and the Browns in recent years have been only about as good at the box office as on the playing field.

Allegany High Routs Penn Avenue Passers

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Flashing the same brand of basketball that has brought four successive county and State championships to the Campobello institution, Allegany High School's 1934 quintet, facing a team that was considered its chief rival for W. M. I. League honors, startled a crowd of approximately 1,400 persons by administering a 39 to 19 beating to Capt. Mel Henry and his Penn Avenue High School cagers on the Campobello court. It was Allegany's fourth successive league victory.

In the preliminary tilt, Coach Dorothy Todd's Penn Avenue girls won a close decision from A. H. S., by the score of 17 to 13. It was Allegany's first league defeat in two years.

Whitehill, Nat Hurler, Buys Michigan Home

Cedar Rapids, Mich., Jan. 22 (Spl.). One of the finest homes in the restricted Vernon Heights section of Cedar Rapids has been purchased by Earl Whitehill, Washington Nationals' pitcher, in a cash transaction completed today. The price was not revealed.

The structure, of English design, was built five years ago by Robert J. Miller, department store manager, who sold to Whitehill. The latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Whitehill, of Cedar Rapids, will occupy the home throughout the year and the pitcher's wife and daughter will spend much of the time there, Whitehill being here for only three or four of the winter months.

Whitehill, a native of this city, got his base ball start on the sandlots of the town, and has returned here regularly to spend his winters.

Shotten Reds' Coach.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 22 (U.P.). Burt Shotten, removed two weeks ago as manager of the Philadelphia Nationals, will be head coach of the Cincinnati Reds this season Larry MacPhail, vice president and general manager of the Reds, announced today.

Shotten wired his acceptance of MacPhail's terms from Winterhaven, Fla.

Trap Meeting Delayed.

The seven-match shoot between the Washington and Oriole Gun Clubs, originally scheduled for January 27, has been moved back to February 3 and will take place over the Washington Gun Club traps, near Benning.

Puerto Rico Seeks Nats' In 1935

Griffith to Consider New Island Training Site; Talks With Dern.

THE prospect that the Washington Ball Club may establish its training camp of 1935 on the little island that is Puerto Rico loomed yesterday following a conference between President Clark Griffith and Secretary of War Dern at Griffith Stadium.

That he was giving the proposal consideration was admitted by Griffith, who said that overtures had been made that he train his team at Puerto Rico for the 1934 season. A contract with the Biloxi (Miss.) Chamber of Commerce, however, binds the Nats to train this season at the little port on the Gulf of Mexico.

Secretary Dern's interest in the training plans of the Nats is founded on a desire to stimulate baseball in Puerto Rico, it was said. Griffith declared that an attractive proposal had been made which has caused him to weigh seriously the prospects of a training camp on the island.

Puerto Rico is virgin territory to big league baseball. The Giants and other clubs have trained at Havana, and the Yankees went to Bermuda in 1916 under Frank Chance. Investigation of the Puerto Rico ilimate as compared to Biloxi and Florida will be made by Washington Club officials.

5 Court Games Today In Prince George

Five games are listed this afternoon in the Prince Georges County scholastic basket ball series. One contest will be played in the senior class loop, three in the junior circuit and one in the girls' section.

In the senior class, the first-place Mount Rainier quintet will face Laurel on the latter's floor. The Mounts have won both their games to date against Hyattsville and Bowie, while the upper county five has defeated Bowie but lost to Hyattsville.

Junior circuit contests are scheduled between Mount Rainer and Laurel at Laurel, Hyattsville and Oxon Hill at Oxon Hill and Hyattsville and Upper Marlboro, also at Oxon Hill. The Hyattsville junior team was forced to play a doubleheader tomorrow following Oxon Hill's transfer from the senior to the junior loop.

The lone championship contest in the girls' series is listed between Hyattsville and Oxon Hill on the former's court.

Mount Rainier's girl sextet will travel to Gaithersburg this afternoon to engage the Gaithersburg High team in the final of a home-and-home series. The teams battled to a tie-count last week on the Mounts' court.

Sarron Meets Top-Notcher In Covelli

New York Featherweight Pinch Hitter Tonight, Has Beaten Milling.

Sarron Sees Victory as Stepping Stone to Garden Bout.

THE ill wind that wafted Frankie Covelli in as a substitute for Pete de Grasse in the main bout at Portner's tonight blows good for the promoters and public, but may blast Pete Sarron, the other half of the bout, off his feet and out of the local featherweight picture. Covelli has everything De Grasse had plus youth, punch and better ringmanship.

In the absence of Jimmy Erwin, Sarron's manager, Sarron himself has agreed to the bout, thus removing a large doubt in the minds of the Portner's promoters and ringwise public, who feared the Syrian Sizzler would not care to risk his place on top of the featherweight heap against such opposition on short notice.

Not that Sarron has everything to lose and nothing to gain. It is true that he may very likely find himself toppled off the throne in this, his particular domain, but he may also find himself popped into Madison Square Garden against N. B. A. Champion Freddy Miller if he wins.

Sarron May Get Chance.

Covelli, well known in Gotham, is scheduled to fight Miller in two weeks, and if he bows to Sarron tonight it is difficult to see how the Garden can well refrain from giving the shot to his conqueror.

Covelli's recent win record reads like a list of "Who's Who in featherweight ranks." It shows victories over De Grasse, Johnny Brennan, Varias Milling, Al Roth and a draw with Lou Feldman, ranked No. 2 in New York. He beat Milling and Roth in October and Feldman in November of last year.

Sarron's acceptance of the bout is believed to indicate that he is in the very peak of physical condition, which would confirm reports emanating from his training quarters to the effect that he is working faster and hitting harder than ever before. It is doubtful if he would accept a bout against such opposition if he were not in the very best of shape, especally since he is known to have several offers for fights within the week that he might just as well accept against less dangerous opposition.

Scipio to Tackle Manley.

In a six-round semifinal, Mike Scipio will tackle Roy Manley, dynamiting southpaw, who showed great improvement in his last start. Highly regarded in Baltimore, Scipio will need to be at his best to avoid being laid low by the lethal Manley left.

Bob Lowry steps into class against Johnny Mays in a six-round main prelim, and in two fours Mike Groves meets Elmer Lytell and Tony Uraine tackles Wild Bill Howell.

Around the Ring Selections: Sarron to beat Covelli; Manley over Scipio; Mays over Lowry; Groves to beat Lytell; Uraine to whip Howell.

Mrs. Ford Qualifier In Coral Gables Golf

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Mrs. J. H. Ford, of Washington, D. C., qualified for match play in the Women's golf tournament over the Rivera Golf Club course here today. She turned in a card of 56-58—114. Four Washington women entered match play through qualifying yesterday and Saturday, they being Mrs. J. T. Powell, Mrs. L. H. Hendrick, Mrs. H. B. Hird and Mrs. M. B. Garber.

Miss Barbara Northwood, of Winnipeg, Canada, won the qualifying medal, with a card of 42-41—83. Her card contained five 3's and a pair of 4's. She was troubled on the fifth and eleventh holes, where she scored 7's, and on the tenth, where she overshot the green and took a six.

Jones Movies at Kenwood.

Special slow motion pictures of Bobby Jones, analyzing his golf swing and shots, said to be the first ever shown here, will be presented tonight at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club in conjunction with a lecture by Al Houghton, home pro.

The screening will start at 8 o'clock, and only members and guests will be invited to attend.

Two Schools of Fistic Thought —By Pierotti

In the Name of Charity

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (Spl.).—The Messrs. Ross and Petrolle, two fine fighting men, meet again at the New York Coliseum Wednesday night for blood and sweet charity, but do not let the latter frighten you. The charity is the Hearst Christmas Fund and the show was postponed from last month, but the proceeds still are to go to the Christmas fund to make up a deficit. Fight charities have come and gone in New York, but the milk fund and the Christmas fund have survived them all. Both charity and the boxing game have been served by them, which has not always been the case with charity boxing during the palmy days.

Will you ever forget those golden days of boxing when the boys would decide to make themselves a little dough, dig up some greedy hospital or other institution to lend the name and stamp of approval, sign up a couple of high priced bums at three times the price they were worth, sell tickets without Government tax, pay off the fighters, the hoodlums, the managers, put the rest of the dough in the kick for themselves and pay off the charity with a bill for a dollar thirty-nine for postage? Those happy, carefree, larcenous days!

I forget the name of the little Hebrew boy who was being paid something like $40,000 or $50,000 for a half hour's appearance because it was for charity. When it came time to go on he grew a little temperamental because a quick count of the house on the way to the dressing room indicated that his dough wasn't all in the till as yet.

Somebody came around from the front of the house and said—"Lissen, there's 45 in the joint. Ain't that enough? Ya gonna hold out for a lousy five grand?"

"Lissen," said the nice little boy. "Who am I fighting for?"

"The Home for the Starving Mothers of Indigent Senegambian Veterans of the War of 1812."

"Well, so long as I am fighting for them couldn't they contribute the other five thousand?"

There was one charity fight in which two young men, neither of them champions, Sid Terris and Ruby Goldstein, were matched for six rounds, eighteen minutes of fighting, and paid $32,500 and $27,500 apiece for their services. When the charity wound up with the usual bill for postage and incidentals but no dough there was a fine scandal brewing which was averted when both boys kicked back part of their swag to the charity.

There was never, as I recall, a public audit of any of these charity shows. A manager would come into a promoter's office. The promoter would say—"Lissen, Moe, I could use your boy on my card on the 10th if the price was right."

"If the price was right? For you the price is always right. If I take a cent less than five thousand I am doing my boy an injustice."

"Five grand? For God's sakes, Moe, this is for charity."

"For charity? Yi, yi, why don't you say so right away? In that case the price is fifteen thousand, a percentage of the net and a piece of the charity. Supposing my boy hurts his hand fighting for charity."

Nobody seemed to care in those days where the money went, or who got it. There was so much of it around. The charity angle not only got the promoters matches they otherwise could not make but permitted them to charge outrageous prices for the tickets.

Thirty-three dollars for a pair of ringside tickets was nothing to pay. By the time you finished giving the scalpers their commissions seats would be as high as $20 each. If the charities got 5 cents out of each $20 bill they were lucky. Where did it go?

Politicians would come along with favorite charities and ambition to play Lady Bountiful at no cost to themselves. The intensely political prize fight commission could always be persuaded to lend a hand in bringing recalcitrant boxers to terms. Whereas the fighters often refused to box for the promoters, they were afraid to say no to the boxing commission for fear of incurring its displeasure. The institutional organizations always in need of money would lend their names to ventures they had not even investigated. Nobody checked on anybody. And how the money rolled in!

The Messrs. Petrolle and Ross are fighting for a fair and honest percentage. After the hall and the printing are paid for the charity will get the rest. And the customers will see one of the best prize fights held around here in the last six months. Wonder why it isn't being held in the Garden?

Price Leading Qualifiers At Miami

Home Club President Has 76; Jameson, District Man, Gets 82.

MIAMA, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP).—T. E Price, president of the home club, with a 37—39—76, led the field of 47 starters in the opening qualifying round today for the third annual Miami Biltmore Amateur invitation golf tournament.

There were four contenders for second place, Everett G. Livesay, of Columbus, Ohio; Lee Fowler, of New York; H. F. Bowbeer, of Chicago, and Arnold Minkley, of Cleveland, all with 79s. Livesay, winner lask week of the Biltmore left-handers' golf tournament, took a 38 on the front nine and 41 on the back.

Fowler, who toured the red-flagged route in 36, 1 over par, fumbled on the tougher back nine and took a 43. Trailing Livesay and Fowler was Myron D. Smith, of Milwaukee, with a 39—42—81.

Bowbeer Shoots 79.

Bowbeer carded a 39-40 for his 79, with Minkley, who shot five sixes and still broke 80, had a 41 tie for the outgoing nine and 38 over the hard holes.

E. C. Jameson, of Washington, runner-up in the left-handers, posted a 41-41—82, and Paul Leviton, of New York, had the same 18-hole scores, but carded it differently, taking 39 on the first section and 43 on the incoming nine.

Tommy Goodwin, of Monroe, N. Y., the midwinter amateur champion and winner of the Biltmore amateur in 1932, plays his qualifying round tomorrow. Other aces are also expected to play then.

Match play begins Wednesday over a daily 18, with the final 36-hole championship play Saturday. Arthur F. Lynch, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., the title holder, is not defending. He is now on the Pacific Coast, participating in open tournaments.

Virginia Frosh Beats Woodberry, 31-26

Woodberry Forest, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—The University of Virginia Frosh handed the Woodberry Forest basketers their third defeat of the season here today, 31 to 26. Until the last seconds of the third quarter when Stark rang up a long shot to give the visitors a one-point lead, the hard-fighting locals had managed to stay out in front. Abbit and Connor, of the Cavaliers, collected six points between them in the final stanza while Woodberry was being held to a single goal.

Abbit and Male were outstanding performers in the Cavalier line-up, while Patterson and Phelps played well for the losers.

Bristol Names McClellan.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—For the second year in succession, Bristol, Tenn., high school's football team next fall will be captained by a guard.

The 1934 captain, elected by 1933 lettermen, is Charles McClellan, who played an outstanding game last season at a guard position. He will succeed Herb Cross, 1933 captain and guard.

Clarendons Meet.

The Clarendon A. C. will hold a meeting tonight in the home of Coach Henry D. Smith, 345 Marion avenue, Clarendon. The following members of the team are asked to be on hand: Carman, Preston, Tacoma, Copeland, Smith, Darr, Cuppage, Surobb, Eaton, Birch, Parlee, Owens and Basinell.

Ross, Petrolle Fight to Be Sell-Out

Battle Tomorrow Between Real Scrappers to Attract 13,000.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—No title will be at stake, and the bout will be held in the Coliseum, in the far reaches of the Bronx, but when Billy Petrolle and Barney Ross get together Wednesday night, the largest indoor fight crowd of the season will be on hand.

The advance sale indicates a capacity crowd of around 13,000 which, in view of the fact that Madison Square Garden has been averaging around 4,000 for its bouts, is a tremendous throng. The rush for seats is a tribute to the fighting qualities of Petrolle and Ross. It is a deserved tribute, for both the lightweight champion from Chicago and the battle-scarred veteran from North Dakota are unique among present-day battlers in that they believe it is the duty of a fighting man to fight.

Petrolle Real Fighter.

Petrolle is the nearest thing to the old-time fighters of song and story that we have. He knows all the answers, and he can hit. When Uncle Will, as he is known to the trade, is in the corner the customers are guaranteed a fight. True, Uncle Will is getting old, and his legs and wind aren't what they used to be, but the wicked power in his sweeping left hook usually makes it unnecessary for him to travel the route. When he dusts them, they stay dusted.

There are those critics who believe that Petrolle will be knocked out by Ross. One of them is Billy Leonard. It is Leonard's opinion that Ross, fast as a flash, will stay away from Petrolle until the old fellow is weary, and then punch him out. There is another school, however, which rates Petrolle, at his own weight of 142 pounds, the master of the lightweight champion. One thing is certain, however: if Ross, with the recklessness of youth, comes in and attempts to swap punches with the old man, he'll get licked. The Chicagoan can hit right smartly himself, but his best punch is a breeze compared to Petrolle's Sunday licks.

Ross to Fight at Long Range.

Ross is not likely to be so brash, however. In all probability he will adopt the method used by Jimmy McLarnin in overcoming Petrolle. That is, he will fight from long range until Petrolle weakens. McLarnin, the first time he met Petrolle, tried to mix it with Uncle Will with the result that he hit the canvas eight or nine times in 10 rounds.

Petrolle and Ross have met once before, with the lightweight champion taking the decision. But that fight saw Petrolle come in at 135, which is a full seven pounds below his best weight.

Today Ross is but a 6-to-5 favorite, and there is a strong chance that the boys will go in the ring at even money. The Chicago youngster was almost a 2-to-1 favorite in the betting when the match was made, but Petrolle's strong showing in workouts have shortened the odds.

Campbell Plans Speed Trials Across Salt Beds

Salt Lake City, Jan. 22 (AP). The next speed trials of Sir Malcolm Campbell, holder of the world's automobile record, may be made over the salt beds in a desert west of this city, his American representative, William F. Sturm, of Indianapolis, informed the Salt Lake Chamber of Commerce today.

Sturm advised Gus P. Backman, secretary of the chamber, that he will come here soon to study the course. Whether the salt crust would support the 5-ton Campbell racing car was not determined.

Today's Games.

Eastern vs. Central.
Western vs. Roosevelt.

Games Friday.

Western vs. Central.
Eastern vs. Tech.

VOX POPULI favors Eastern over the title-defending league leader, Central. The Voice of The People is equally divided in the choice of the winner of the basement title between Western and Roosevelt. The arguments will be ironed out in Tech gymnasium at 3:30 o'clock.

Central, smitten by the same malady that cost Eastern the ball game against Tech in the series opener, namely, overconfidence, will go into the fray against the Eastern five seeking its fourth straight win and a commanding lead in the series.

Central has cruised to fairly easy wins over Western and Roosevelt, only after startling second rallies, but the Tech game was a different story.

Central Loses Early Lead.

The Mount Pleasant team rushed up an early lead in the first half of the game against the Technicians, but an uphill flight by the latter tied the score in the closing moments of play, with the result that the game required an extra 5-minute period. Then Tech, at that stage of the battle, handicapped by loss of man power through personal fouls succumbed to the expert heaving of Buddy Nau, Bill Bryant and Mandes, 30 to 25.

Featuring in the battle between these teams today are Nau versus Tom Nolan at the guards and Bits Keyser versus Tom Davis. And what a merry pair of clashes these will bring.

Selectors of the all-high basket ball teams will have their orbs glued on the center play of Bits Keyser of Central and Tom Davis of the Lincoln Parkers. Both players have been displaying tip-top form in series games to date. Davis, has proven his ability as an ace in scrimmage under the basket, while the Central star's all-around play has stamped him as one of the outstanding players of the series.

Many believe that the outcome of the game hinges on the work of these two boys. Both have the height necessary for effective jumping with Davis having a slight edge in altitude. However, opinion is divided as to who will get the tipoff today.

Nau has been showing great form to date and has been the spark in Coggin crew's attack in every game played.

Battle Looms for Cellar Berth.

The cellar tangle between Roosevelt and Western will not be devoid of suspense. The game, due to the caliber of the opposing teams, is apt to be as thrilling as the main attraction.

Pitted against the sterling, lithe Jimmy Cavanaugh, the one-man basket ball team, is Jimmy Corcoran, who holds a similar title around his neck of the woods. Cavanaugh has been sinking the ball with uncanny ease throughout the series, and at the same time feeding the ball for his teammates for added points.

Corcoran, like Cavanaugh, handicapped by height, has been showing great scoring guns in all his games and will be a distinct thorn in the side of the Ruf Riders this afternoon.

Tech will rest today.

19th Win Out of 20 For Kingsport Quintet

Kingsport, Tenn., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Kingsport High School basket ball team scored its nineteenth victory out of 20 games played this season by overwhelming Chattanooga, Tenn., High, 38 to 22.

Cifers, Wilson, Sailor and Wright were key-men in a Kingsport offense that kept the visitors groggy during the early part of the game. Kingsport was ahead, 24 to 6, at the end of the first half.

Coucci Scores Double at Tropical With Croon, 5 to 1, and Blue Cloud, 27 to 1

Claim of Foul Not Allowed In Second

Long Shot Interfered Twice With Kibitzer, Says Humphries.

Coucci Gets Croon Home 2 Lengths Ahead of Porter's Mount.

TROPICAL PARK, Jan. 22 (AP).—Silvio Coucci, the "Bronx Express," who is runner-up to the flashy Earl Porter for local riding honors, rang up his second victory of the day when he conducted the consistent Croon, owned by Mrs. K. Jesberger, to a very easy triumph in the fifth race, nameless feature of an all-claiming card here this afternoon.

Croon, out of the money but twice in her last eleven starts, led home Jack Howard's Flaghorn by two lengths. The latter showed marked improvement under Earl Porter and caught C. V. Whitney's Sainted right at the end of the 6 furlongs to earn the place by a head. The winner returned $11.80 and his time was 1:11 3-5.

Black Harmony was the choice in an open race, but the Mrs. J. H. Whitney standard bearer never was in the hunt.

Fair John, one of the more lightly regarded starters, surprised by stealing a long early lead, with Croon closest in pursuit. The latter nabbed the pacemaker around the final bend and taking command entering the stretch was well in hand with Coucci looking back in the last furlong. Flaghorn closed like a whirlwind on the outside to overtake Sainted.

Wins With Blue Cloud.

Blue Cloud, paying off at $56.90 for $2, won the second event by a head under a typical Coucci ride, but his backers were held in suspense when Lee Humphries, who was second astride Kibitzer, claimed a foul. The winner interfered with Kibitzer twice in the last quarter mile. The latter caught Blue Cloud at the eighth pole, but he had to make up a lot of ground to get there and Coucci outrode Humphries in the final strides. Everfair, the choice, was pocketed, but finished third, a length away.

Jim Crawford, claimed by J. E. Smallman from the B. B. Stable last week, scored his second straight victory when he galloped home by four lengths in the juvenile opener. The son of Bunting rushed into a safe lead in a few strides and increased his advantage over Bank Holiday through the stretch, making the fast time of 0:35. Synod closed fast, but lost the place by three lengths. Jim Crawford was held at even money.

Porter Scores on Haggerson.

Earl Porter found it a simple matter to win the third contest. The Earl had the leg up on the $5.20 favorite, Haggerson, and the gelding scored by a half dozen lengths. Hasty Belle caught the tiring Justa Sunbeam in the last few jumps to gain the place by a head. Justa Sunbeam took an early lead, but Haggerson ran her down and drew far clear.

Don Guzman, the plater that ran so fast to win his last start, was a dismal failure in the role of favorite in the fourth race. He broke slowly, went up fast to reach contention, then faded right back to last. The purse went to Carbon, which drove first home by a length to return $17. Raccoon was an easy second over Two Tricks, the early leader. Carbon caught Two Tricks around the final bend, but was kept under pressure to stall off Raccoon's stretch bid.

The sixth race found Earl Porter duplicating Coucci's feat of riding a double. Porter was up on Waterway, which led Volta Maid, the choice, to the wire by nearly two lengths. Major General was a good third. The running was made to order for Waterway. Porter kept him fairly close to the pace as Volta Maid and Major General ran themselves into defeat. Waterway came around the leaders turning for home and forged to the front when straightened out to win going away. It was Porter's thirty-fifth local winner.

Gamblers will tell you that there is something about beginners' luck that makes a newcomer in a game an easy winner—and this old saying was never better borne out than in the case of Bernard de Marigny, the man who brought the game of dice to America.

Bernard de Marigny was the son of a Creole planter in Louisiana. His father died when Bernard was 16 years old, leaving him an immense fortune. The rich young man, gambler by nature, proved to be such a problem to his guardians that they sent him to England hoping that his associations in the Old World would make him more a gentleman.

Contrary to their hopes, Marigny found no elevating influence—instead he found a fascinating game of dice. This he brought back to America upon his return. He taught his Louisiana friends how to play "craps" and, with beginners' luck, they won his entire fortune from him.

The game of "craps" got its name because of Marigny. Like other Creoles, he was called "Johnny Crapauds" by Yankees in the district as a term of contempt—"crapaud" being the word for "frog." Soon the game of dice came to be known as "Johnny Crapaud's game," later it was called simply "crapauds," and eventually just "craps," as it is known today.

Marigny, who once was one of the richest men in the South, died penniless—the victim of his own game.

Tatanne First Nomination For Derby

St. James Filly Won All 1933 Starts; Annexed Jefferson Classic.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 22 (AP).—Announcement that Tatanne, Mrs. J. Zoeller's winner of the Jefferson Derby at New Orleans last Saturday, was the first nomination for the 1934 Kentucky Derby was made tonight at Churchill Downs here. The Derby will be run Saturday, May 5.

Tatanne, a brown filly by St. James-Sardanaple, won all 12 of her races as a 2-year-old and in the Jefferson Derby finished going away, although she had to give weight to all her competitors. She carried 121 pounds, compared to 106 on Southland Duke, which came in second.

While the Zoeller filly's nomination comes as the first harbinger of spring in Kentucky, others whose names are expected to go in before the lists close February 7 include Mrs. J. H. Whitney's colt, Singing Wood, winner of the Belmont Futurity as a 2-year-old; A. B. Gordon's colt, Sir Thomas, which Singing Wood beat by a nose; the Dixiana Stud's filly, Mata Hari, winner of the Breeders Futurity and the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes; Bazaar, Calvacade, Chicstraw, Far Stac, Haddagal, High Glee and several score others of the 1934 crop of promising 3-year-old thoroughbreds.

300 at Clabby Rites; Mike Gibbons Attends

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 22 (AP).—Three hundred friends and relatives trudged through the rain to a cemetery on the outskirts of Hammond today to bury Jimmy Clabby, hero of the prize ring 20 years ago. He was found dead of starvation and exposure in an old shack last Friday.

Mike Gibbons, famous as the "St. Paul Phantom," one of Clabby's old-time opponents, and Johnny Coulon, former bantamweight champion of the world, were among the mourners. The pallbearers were old friends of the dead champion, among them Harry Kennedy, who gave Clabby his first ring engagement.

Dear Al: Tropical Park Race Track, Jan. 22.

Managed to wiggle two winners out of the program today, for which I am truly thankful. The prices were nothing to write home about but winners are winners and winners will keep my suspension on Clocker Mike. You know Mike was banished from the Bennings camp for being a jinx and will be reinstated (providing I can find him) the first day that I suffer a shutout—something that hasn't materialized this year. With the scene of action shifting to Hialeah on Thursday, I have been digging for a few farewell punches at this course. It is just possible that I have a few on the keyboard of this typewriter. Let's hope I strike the right letters. BILL.

First Race—I've been hitting the first race regularly and will send Appomattox after the main end of the purse tomorrow. Will appreciate this short route. Twidgets is improving and dangerous among these. Screen for the show.

Second ace—Prize Package breaks

Second Race — Prize Package breaks from the outside of this group but has the speed necessary to get to the front and I believe they will be eating the dust of this one at the finish. Toytime appears to be the one to beat. Stretch Call to complete the money picture.

Third Race—Chimney Top is asked to give away weight to every member of this field. Under a heads-on ride from Coucci, I believe it can be done. Kings Minstrel is a possible wake-up among this kind. Macadam for the show.

Fourth Race—I feel a long shot coming in this sprint. Don't shoot and I'll name it. Style Corner is the one. Asking a lot to make this fellow beat the likes of Happy Scott and Hokuao but the word has been passed to me.

Fifth Race — Sandwrack always could beat this caliber of horse flesh. Providing the stable is in a running mood tomorrow, I expect to get a winner here. Well Built and Playful Martha for the remainder.

Sixth Race—Miss Donovan is of the quitting brand but has worked well at a route. Led some pretty fair ones here last week for a few furlongs. Might stick it out tomorrow to the surprise of the wise ones. Barkantine and Customer f or the other awards.

Seventh Race—Bun D might find this field to his liking. He has been tipped and tipped. Don't Blush and Billie's Orphan to take care of the others.

Christy, Boesch On Mat Program

Youths to Tackle Rugged Foes Thursday.

Among the most popular rasslers performing here of late are Vic Christy and Paul Boesch, the two boy wonders of this peculiar profession. Both are striplings of 19 and have a long ways to go before reaching the top. As is the quaint old custom of the mat game, each appears to be enjoying a "build-up" here—getting bouts often and not losing any. And so both will get another chance on Thursday night's card.

And this Thursday's card calls for Christy to exchange holts and swats with Ernie Dusek. Boesch's foe will be Scotty McDougall.

Title Claimant Jim Londos returns after an eight months' absence to take on Count George Zarynoff in the feature, giving Washington fans an opportunity of making a mental comparison between him and Jim Browning, recognized mat king in several States, who had hard work disposing of Zarynoff on his last appearance here three weeks ago.

Gomez Struck Out 13.

Vernon (Lefty) Gomez was the only American League pitcher to strike out 13 men in a game last season. On June 2 he breezed 13 of the A's in eight innings, and on September 17 he whiffed the same number of Cleveland Indians, fanning every player except Pytlak and getting Trosky four times.

K. O. to Benefit Hourihan, Va. Coach Says

Will Be More Careful Boxer as Result, La Rowe Believes.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Johnny LaRowe, Virginia's coach of boxing, believes that the Cavalier heavyweight, Eugene Hourihan, will be all the better boxer as a direct result of his having been knocked out Saturday night by Charles Oatley, V. M. I. heavyweight.

Hourihan came into sudden fame in the opening match of the season when he took only 45 seconds to finish Bradford Simmons, Harvard unlimited and crew captain, who had not lost a match in three seasons.

Coach LaRowe believes that Hourihan has a future in the intercollegiate ring as a boxer and not as a slugger. And he believes that the experience of the V. M. I. match, when he fell afoul of a short right jab after he had been leading the match on points and was swinging wild for a knockout, will give Hourihan the lesson he will profit by.

LaRowe Stresses Cleverness.

During the 13 seasons he has tutored Virginia's men in the ring, Coach LaRowe has always put a great emphasis on cleverness in boxing. He doesn't believe that there is any excuse for his men to be caught with their guard down.

Hourihan is not a big man, for he weighs just over the 179-pound lower limit of the heavyweight class. He does not have great strength, but Coach LaRowe thinks he has the makings of a good unlimited if he will stick to boxing and forget to slug.

Last Saturday night was the first time that Hourihan's father, Michael Hourihan, of Bayonne, N. J., had seen his son box. When Coach LaRowe heard that he thought he saw the knockout coming. He remembers how Capt. Harold Stuart, Lewis Riess, Herbet Bryant and others first went down for the count in the presence of close relatives. He knew that the week before Simmons' father had been watching him for the first time.

"It is not superstition," says Coach LaRowe. "It is just that when the boys get in the ring with relatives watching them they get to thinking about their folks and forget about boxing. When it is too late, they find out that there is another man in the ring."

Emory-Henry to Play House of David Friday

Emory, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—One of the crack professional basket ball outfits of the Nation, the House of David's team, will invade Emory Friday night to engage Coach W. S. Jackson's equally crack collegiate team, the Emory and Henry Wasps.

The House of David team has raided professional basket ball circles and contracted one of the smoothest court aggregations on the road this year. Forty-nine games have been played and 45 victories have been scored.

The bearded team is one of the taller professional outfits in the game. The players average 6 feet 3½ inches in height and tip the scales at an average of 200 pounds.

Pedie Jackson has assembled a smart little team at Emory that is constructed around Glenn Roberts, the Pound, Va., flash, but the Wasp ace, a wizard at shooting and an excellent floorman, probably will meet the greatest test of his court career if he is guarded by Krizensky, who is considered one of the greatest defensive players in professional basket ball.

Earl McCready to Wed.

Ottawa, Que., Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Earl McCready, heavyweight wrestler, will marry Thelma Lewis, of Ottawa, here February 10, it was announced today. McCready is a graduate of Oklahoma State University. While in college he won the national intercollegiate wrestling championship.

Beautiful Hialeah, America's Newmarket, Opens Thursday

Widener's Vision of Model Race Course Cost Him $2,000,000; Opening Day Record Crowd Seen.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP).—America's winter newmarket, Hialeah Park, the most beautiful and modern race course, will throw open its gates Thursday, January 25, for a 45-day meeting, and it is expected that a record will be established for attendance on the opening day.

The transformation of Hialeah Park from just an ordinary race track to the greatest winter racing center in America is the last word in physical beauty and mechanical efficiency. The clubhouse, grand stand, paddock, secretary's office, stables present replicas of notable architectural achievements of the French race courses. The vast expanses of green lawns dotted with palms of colorful tropical flowers, of which the bougainveillea is the outstanding flower.

Spent $2,000,000.

The reconstruction work of the Miami Jockey Club has resulted in the expenditure of more than $2,000,000. The past two years the development has continued and with the recently planted foliage completed Hialeah Park stands as a great tribute to J. E. Widener and his associates who visioned and created a beauty spot, for the sport of kings.

The totalisator, the dream of Mr. Widener, is as near perfect as any device for registering wagers ever invented. Mortimer Mahoney is director-general of this most important department. Mahoney has been a long time in the game. He served his apprenticeship under John G. Cavanaugh, the master of all ring generals. Mahoney assumed leadership of Pimlico some 30 years ago when Old Hill Top sported 35 books for a top record.

"Tote" Given Workout.

The big machine was given a stiff workout yesterday and performed remarkably well. It registered the "dummy" wagers with marked accuracy, and the stamp of approval was okayed by the powers to be.

Youthful Racing Secretary Charles McLennan has earned the outstanding praise by the efficient manner in which he has executed the duties of his late father, Joseph McLennan, whose death shocked the turf world.

Purses ranging in value from $700 to $2,000 to the $10,000 Florida Derby are down for decision.

Gonzaga Tossers Defeat Wash.-Lee

Folliard and Boyle Stars as Purple Scores, 32-15.

Gonzaga Prep had little trouble subduing Washington-Lee High School yesterday on the Gonzaga floor, 32-15.

The Purple barged out in front at the start of the game and wound up the first half with a 19-8 lead. Featuring in the attack of the winners were Tom Folliard and Bill Boyle, who combined to tally 22 points.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JIM CRAWFORD, $4.00, $2.40, $2.20; BANK HOLIDAY, $3.60, $2.50; SYNOD, $2.30.

JIM CRAWFORD, mean as usual at the gate, broke well in motion, ran into lead, boy using the whip freely on the colt entering stretch. He drew away and won nicely in hand. BANK HOLIDAY, away fast, showed good speed and was next best. SYNOD was a bit slow in getting into his stride, but finished with a rush. MOONSIDE closed a good gap. ROUGH PARTY showed good early speed and is sure to improve over this effort. VERA CRUZ was outrun, but has worked fast.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:38. Off at 2:40. Winner, b. g. (7), by High Cloud—Miss Blue. Value to winner, $360; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $15. Time, 1:46 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUE CLOUD, $56.90, $30.80, $5.60; KIBITZER, $9.10, $3.30; EVERFAIR, 2.30.

BLUE CLOUD, showing startling improvement over recent races, dashed into lead, showed speed, carried KIBITZER out on stretch turn and again interfered with him in final sixteenth. KIBITZER was pounds the best and would have won but for the interference by the winner. EVERFAIR was miserably ridden. He was steered in a pocket in early running, got through on turn, but failed to close any ground. CANON LAW, on the outside around turn, dropped back, but came again at end. NINERA had speed for six furlongs.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:08½. Off at 3:10½. Winner, J. C. Clark's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAGGERSON, $5.20, $3.60, $2.70; HASTY BELLE, $12.30, $6.20; JUSTA SUNBEAM, $5.90.

HAGGERSON, much the best, raced JUSTA SUNBEAM into defeat in the first half mile, then drew away and was only galloping at end. HASTY BELLE came through on inside and finished gamely. JUSTA SUNBEAM got away flying, showed good speed, but weakened in final furlong. CANONAZO, well up all the way, ran a fair race. GOLDEN EFFORT showed a flash of early speed. WAR SAINT was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:43. Off at 3:46½. Winner, D. A. Wood's br. or blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARBON, $17.00, $6.60, $6.40; RACCOON, $12.30, $7.60; TWO TRICKS, $11.50.

CARBON got away well and, rated along in second place to the middle of the turn, where he ran into lead, drew away, but was doing his best to stall off the determined bid of RACCOON at end. The latter worked his way up, came to the outside of the field and finished gamely. TWO TRICKS ran into early lead, showed good speed, and held on well. REPRESENTATIVE went up very fast on the outside, but weakened in the last sixteenth. SCREAM made a fair effort. DON GUZMAN ran way below best form. He failed to show any speed and was badly beaten off at the end.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start poor. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:17½. Off at 4:20. Winner, Mrs. K. Jesberger's b. f. Bureau Serves 1,300 Farmers In Rockingham Cooperative, 12 Years Old, Effects Big Savings for Members.

Richmond, Jan. 22 (Spl.).—The Rockingham County Cooperative Farm Bureau recently completed 12 years of service to the farmers of the county in marketing live stock, wool and grain and purchasing for them such supplies as seed, feed and fertilizer.

This cooperative was organized in 1921 with 270 members. The membership now is between 1,300 and 1,400 farmers, who are paying $6 a year dues. This money is placed in the capital fund of the organization and is used to finance its operations so it can operate on a strictly cash basis and take all discounts. The net worth of the business is approximately $100,000 and this belongs to the members in proportion to the amount of membership dues they have paid.

Had Modest Start.

The first year the Rockingham Cooperative Farm Bureau shipped only an occasional car of live stock and purchased a few cars of supplies. The secretary-manager was employed only five days a month. The organization now is making weekly shipments of live stock and operates a central warehouse at Harrisonburg, with branches at Bridgewater, Elkton and Timberville to provide supplies at convenient places. It requires about 25 people to handle the $750,000 business the cooperative does during a year.

The live stock shipping activities of the organization are of real service to the members and a benefit to the farmers of the county. The cooperative keeps posted on daily prices of live stock on the Lancaster and Baltimore markets so members can decide whether to ship stock cooperatively or sell to a local buyer. The cooperative has stimulated local buyers to pay very close to the central market prices.

Sells Wool in Pool.

Each spring the farm bureau sells wool for all members who wish to participate in a pool. In years past, most of the wool has been pooled through the United Wool Growers Cooperative and the farmers have received the average price of the season, which frequently has been several cents above the local price at shearing time. Last spring the United offered members the alternative of putting their wool into a seasonal pool, or selling it in a cash pool for 31 cents, the buyer to pay for it delivered to the car. The farmers voted for the cash payment pool and the farm bureau handled more than five carloads for them at prices 5 to 6 cents a pound above the local market.

The cooperative purchases feeds, salt, oyster shells, tires, gasoline, oils, hardware, fencing, roofing, harness, cement, fertilizer, grass and other seeds, sugar and flour, &c., for its members.

In 1932 the farm bureau built a new headquarters warehouse in Harrisonburg 50 by 150 feet, two stories and a basement, of brick and cement. It is known through the Shenandoah Valley as "The House Cooperation Built." The cooperative also operates a small feed mill, this providing a local market for much grain.

The bureau always has had a strong board of directors. The first president was G. F. Holsinger, of McGaheysville, who resigned in 1928 to become president of the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation. He was succeeded by Vice President D. C. Acker, of Broadway.

Manager Smith Praised.

S. M. Cox, the county agricultural agent, wrote in 1928:

"Any discussion of the bureau and its wonderful record of business achievement would be incomplete without making special mention of C. V. Smith, manager since the organization started. Mr. Smith is a sound business man. His efficient management has been largely responsible for the business success of the organization. This organization has saved the farmers of Rockingham County many thousands of dollars."

Radio Waves and Ripples

THE trouble with radio listening in our house is Aunt Sadie. Aunt Sadie likes the True Story Hour. Cousin John prefers Ted Weems. And we've been trying for weeks to get an earful of Ethel Waters. Unfortunately, we haven't yet been able to convince the radio companies of the advisability, if not dire necessity, of broadcasting these programs at different periods, though all three of us have written them about it any number of times.

Cousin John can be managed. He's young and his tastes haven't crystallized. For our part, we are perfectly willing to compromise within reason, of course. But Aunt Sadie hasn't changed since hobble skirt days. There's no moving her.

To understand Aunt Sadie, one has to know something of her early life. In the first place, she's superstitious. You can't tell her that walking under a ladder isn't bad luck. She walked under one once with a young man from Hagerstown. They were both young scoffers and probably would be today, though not so young, of course, except that the ladder fell, dropping about a half-ton of scaffold and brick, mostly on the young man. They buried the young man three days later and with him went all of Aunt Sadie's growing modernism, which probably wasn't very deep rooted anyway.

AUNT SADIE has a lot of other superstitions, credos and what not, the truth of which are equally well proven by the facts of life. One day she opened an umbrella in the house in a moment of reversion to liberalism. The umbrella wouldn't shut, and the next day it rained. It rained for a week, and there was no way to go out of the house with the umbrella except through the big bay window, which couldn't be opened. And Aunt Sadie in that suit of armor one of her ancestors is supposed to have worn at the battle of Hastings couldn't be induced to step through an unopened bay window. That rather gives you an idea about Aunt Sadie's superstitions, &c.

But to get back to radio listening, which isn't going to be easy, Aunt Sadie is not the sort of woman to be dissuaded by reason or entreaty. Reason's on her side. She's deaf to entreaty. Her hearing isn't what it used to be, anyway, so when the True Story Hour comes on you can hear it way up in the third floor room where we used to give Cousin John boxing lessons until the year after he grew so fast.

We have written the True Story people to send us advance copies of their program manuscripts which we hope to induce Aunt Sadie to read. Then we shall exert all our powers of persuasion on Cousin John—except those we used to exert on the third floor, of course—to give us a half-hour with Ethel Waters.

Whitecaps.

WRC—The Rev. Walter Robert Matthews, dean of Exeter and former chaplain to King George, broadcasting from London in the "Whither Britain?" series, 3:30 p. m.; Seth Parker, entire congregation of Negro church in Virginia mountains come aboard for program of hymns, 10 p. m.

WMAL—Rochester Civic Orchestra, "Cockaigne," by Sir Edward Elgar, 3 p. m.; St. Louis Symphony Choir, 6 p. m.; Agriculture Secretary Wallace, "Are We Giving Up Foreign Markets for Cotton?" 10:45 p. m.

WJSV—Dean of Exeter broadcasting from London in the "Whither Britain?" series, 3:30 p. m.; Charles Carlile singing "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," "If You Say Yes, Cherie" and "Lonely Lane," with Mark Warnow's Orchestra, 6:30 p. m.; Philadelphia Orchestra, Lalo's "Divertimento," 9 p. m.

Mrs. Zella Johnston, of the Red Cross, wanted a baby carriage for a war veteran. She asked WJSV to put an announcement to that effect on the air. WJSV did.

Mrs. Johnston got 30 baby carriages.

She wouldn't have needed any at all if the war veteran's wife hadn't had twins.

Everything has been fixed for those who want licenses to hear WJSV's new Sun Dial program with Arthur Godfrey and who haven't anything but an automobile radio to listen with.

WJSV has issued another set of licenses which are just about half the size of the regular ones.

Phillips H. Lord isn't the sort of man to be hurried off on a cruise around the world.

Lord and the schooner Seth Parker left Portland, Me., last December. He ties up at Norfolk for a broadcast tonight, and then doubles back to Washington, where next week the Seth Parker will lie alongside the O street wharf while WRC airs another program.

At Norfolk tonight the congregation of a Negro church will come aboard to sing to Mr. Lord and his crew. Tired, seafaring men should like that.

NBC has given names to its new recorded programs and today is ready to go ahead with its plans for concentration of spot advertising. The first on WRC is the Morning Mail Bag at 8:15; then comes the Midday Merry-Go-Round at 12:30, Sundown Revue at 4:30, Musical Bulletin Board at 6:15 and Night Owl at 11 p. m.

Previously, both N. B. C. stations called their record programs Musical Interludes as though they were ashamed of them.

WMAL's new Mr. Edward Kimball, whose present chore is handling Myriad Voices—on the air again at 8:30 tonight—is taking flying lessons, which is a tip to young men with ambitions to be announcers to see that their applications are still on file.

An everlasting tribute to the good taste of one Ozzie Nelson, C. B. S. bandman, is Harriet Hilliard, presented herewith. Harriet is due to sing with Ozzie's band tonight and Thursday night.

Shore Begins Own Lynching Inquiry Today

Lane Refuses to Attend Princess Anne Grand Jury Hearings.

Princess Anne, Md., Jan. 22 (AP). With the State administration practically out of the picture, Somerset County authorities tonight prepared for their own investigation of last October's lynching.

Forty-two witnesses, including Associate Judge Robert F. Duer and 20 State policemen, have been summoned to appear before the grand jury which meets tomorrow morning.

The news that Attorney General William Preston Lane, jr., had decided not to be present, despite State's Attorney John B. Robins' invitation, was received today.

The attorney general wrote Robins there was nothing "that I can accomplish by being present. As I have previously advised you, it is my opinion that the evidence you have warrants indictments in nine cases."

The grand jury will consider not only the lynching of George Armwood, colored, but also four murder cases.

It is expected to hear evidence concerning the murder of Mrs. Margaret Brumbley, a farm woman, who was killed in her bedroom at Marion Station, New Year's Eve. Sam Jones, colored, has been arrested and is now held in Baltimore.

Earl Collins is under arrest in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Norris Taylor near Crisfield.

Front Royal Quarrel Ends in Fatal Shooting

Front Royal, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—William Flynn, 35, colored, was shot by Isaac Townley, also colored, here last night in an altercation and died four hours later.

Townley surrendered and is in jail.

Children Are Enrolled In Playground Band

Adolph Turner, director of music for the Washington playgrounds, is organizing a band to be directed by John D'Andelet, for 21 years a member of the United States Marine Band. Boys and girls who play band instruments are requested to give their names to the playgrounds supervisor. Thus far, 44 have done so.

The musical activities of the playground department are connected with the "leisure time" projects of the Civil Works Service. Regular hours are devoted to singing for children of preschool age and in another section for school children.

PUBLIC NOTICE

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, January 16, 1934. Notice is hereby given that under authority granted in Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia propose to conduct a hearing on the advisability of closing Maine Avenue between 3d and 4½ streets N. W., and Missouri avenue between 3d and 4½ streets N.W. All the interested property owners are hereby notified that pursuant to the provisions of said act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will give a public hearing in the board room on the fifth floor of the District Building on MONDAY, February 5, 1934, at 10 o'clock a. m., to determine the question as to any property rights which may be affected, or as to the equity, justice or advisability of said closings. Map showing said closings will be exhibited at said hearing and the Commissioners will consider any suggestions or protests concerning the same which may be offered by any party interested. MELVIN C. HAZEN, GEORGE E. ALLEN, JOHN C. GOTWALS, Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

PROPOSALS

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, January 23, 1934. Sealed proposals will be received at room 309, District Building until 2 o'clock p. m. January 31, 1934, and then publicly opened for constructing about 2,920 linear feet of 8 and 12-inch cast iron water main in Thirteenth street between Massachusetts avenue and Logan Circle northwest. All materials to be furnished by the District of Columbia except lumber for bracing, and cement, sand and gravel for concrete. Apply room 427 District Building for proposals, specifications and drawings.

Merry Times.

Depression was the normal thing in England when gay Charles was king. At court the gilded girls and boys kicked up a lot of joyous noise, and heedlessly they drank and fed, and painted things a brilliant red. But famine like a grisly shape went through the country hanging crape; and plague and fire in Lunnon town mowed half the population down, and funerals were all the rage in that delightful, merry age. Then men accused of trifling crimes, like shoving phoney groats or dimes, were punished in a brutal way that shocks the reader of today. The merchant princes all went broke, the toilers had their goods in soak, and no one's credit was so good that it would buy a cord of wood. No man had faith in anything, and least of all in England's king, who didn't care three hoots or five if commerce died or stayed alive. It was a starved and dismal age, and yet upon the printed page we read about that "merry reign" as though it had no grief or pain. 'Tis distance, as the poet knew, that lends enchantment to the view. Some future day, perhaps, will see men talk of Nineteen-thirty-three as that delightful, happy time, when life was gorgeous and sublime.

$100,000 Franklin Bank Stock Offered

Initial Appeal in Merger Made to Stockholders.

A campaign of Franklin National Bank to sell $100,000 stock necessary to its inclusion in the three-bank merger creating the new Mechanics-Franklin Savings Bank began yesterday.

The first appeal for subscriptions was addressed to the bank's stockholders. Another will be sent shortly to depositors. Stock also will be offered to the public.

In the letter stockholders are asked to subscribe liberally in order to reopen the bank as a component of the merger.

Lionel Barrymore Here, in Person, in February—Meet Fifi and "Buddy," Here Now!

Royal Family's Eldest Member Booked at Fox

Mlle. D'Orsay Has 'Hubby;' Mr. Rogers Has Flu, So All Is Not Even!

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The long-projected, but never-consummated, week of personal appearances in the Capital of Lionel Barrymore, distinguished star of both stage and screen, at last bids fair to become an actuality.

According to word received late Saturday by City Manager Carter Barron from the New York office of Loew's, Inc., Mr. Barrymore has been definitely articled to appear personally in Washington during the month of February.

There is scant justification for the belief that any hitch in the present arrangement is represented by the fact that no specific date for Mr. Barrymore's appearance here has as yet been named.

Since forsaking the stage and rising to his present place of eminence as a screen figure, the eldest of the Barrymores has made precious few, if any, stage appearances. The National Capital is fortunate in being included among the small group of cities in which Mr. Barrymore will appear during his brief February tour.

Long Absent From Capital.

It has been many seasons since Lionel Barrymore has been seen in person on a Washington stage. Foremost in the memories of veteran playgoers, no doubt, will recur his splendid performances in support of his brother, John, and Constance Collier in "Peter Ibbetson" and in the stellar title role of "The Copperhead."

A special skit, probably based on a scene from some recent or forthcoming Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film production, is expected to comprise the vehicle of his February's week's engagement at Loew's Fox.

Speaking of Loew's, it is interesting to note that the special Saturday morning early matinee for children, offering a program exclusively of short subjects, led in large measure by the most popular of the recent Walt Disney Silly Symphonies and Mickey Mouse cartoon comedies, attracted such an unprecedented crowd of youngsters that it was necessary to throw open the Columbia Theater to accommodate the hundreds unable to gain admittance to the Palace. This fairly matches the adult enthusiasm manifested over the midnight premiere of Mae West's "I'm No Angel," when it was necessary to house a Palace midnight overflow in the Fox. Unfortunately, an "I'm No Angel" or a superlative program of short subjects only happens once or twice a season—or maybe generation.

Fifi, the Firecracker!

And speaking of personal appearances, I know of no contemporary personality in the theater who lives, works, plays, moves and in general has her being with such irrepressible effervescence, boundless enthusiasm and explosive zest as Fifi D'Orsay, headlining this week's stage bill at the Earle.

FIFI D'ORSAY

Despite four performances already done and a fifth about to be begun, Mlle. D'Orsay was about as subdued as a firecracker when an old friendship was renewed backstage Saturday night.

"Oooh, eet ees won-dare-fool!" quoth mademoiselle, almost before we could remove our glove and unfasten our hat. "I am so hap-pee I can not tell you 'ow I feel!"

"Yes, business seems to be pretty good, there's a line half way up to F——"

"But I do not mean zat," deprecatingly. "I am mar-reed now. Ooh, mais oui! And I am so hap-pee I can not tell you. He ees a oh, so nice boy. He was studying may-de-seen, you know, but now he ees going to be an actor. Oh, yes. He hate may-de-seen; oh, he detes' eet. Yes. But acting! Ah, he like zat too much!"

Accompanied by Groom.

Whereupon we learned that, contrary to all reports, Maurice Hill, Miss D'Orsay's bridegroom of some five weeks, did not abandon the study of medicine to marry her and adopt a stage career, but had completed his course at the University of Wisconsin and put in several months as a hospital interne, preparatory to an independent practice as a physician.

He is with her in Washington, but was not present Saturday night owing to a later party engagement with his bride at the Shoreham for which he was, at the moment, back in the hotel dressing.

"You mus' meet heem some time. I will bring heem to see you. But yes. Ooh-la-la, sacre bleu, bon bons de chocolat, peau de crepe. Chevrolet coupe, he ees so nice and I am so hap-pee! Voila! But yes!"

Or words to that general effect.

But everything, after all, is not perfect in Miss D'Orsay's life. On Saturday she received a wire from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City to leave here Thursday night for immediate work in a new picture, "In Old Louisiana," in which there is a part especially to her liking. But there is another week booked in her present vaudeville tour from which she is finding [illegible] to get a release, due to Mr. Greenbaum canceled the same

Victims in Tale of Frustration

David and Christa, otherwise Douglas Montgomery and Dorothy Wilson, the tragic young lovers in "Eight Girls in a Boat," the screen feature currently on view at Loew's Fox Theater, snapped in a pensive moment Both Mr. Montgomery and Miss Wilson contribute performances of an excellence out of all proportion to the merits of a film play that falls considerably this side of being a gay entertainment—a shortcoming for which "Buddy" Rogers and his stage revue more than atone.

Chateaubriand grille, champagne sec and ze back of my 'and to heem!"

To all of this her sister Alice, as pronounced a blond as Fifi is a brunette, who accompanies her on all her tours, agreed heartily.

Interrogated briefly as to her own professional ambitions, Alice confessed that she would love to go on the stage and sing and maybe dance a bit, "but D'Orsay won't let me!"

D'Orsay, by the way, no longer affects the jet black hair that has so long characterized her personal color scheme, but has let nature take its course and reassert her own dark brown tresses.

And if you notice, she has dropped all of the French songs from her act and is now singing only English song-stories, "so I will not 'ave to weegle so much!"

Personally, this suits us quite as well, because we don't even know the French for "Eau de Cologne!"

A rising young actress by the name of Consuelo Howard looking very chic and charming in the lobby of Loew's Fox last Friday. Miss Howard, since you ask, is the daughter of L. Monta Bell, former Washington newspaperman and now well-known picture director, recently back from a year in Italy and six months in London, where, one gathers, she wishes she still might be. Consuelo made her stage debut as a tiny member of her daddy's stock company down at the old Shubert-Garrick Theater, now Hecht's radio department! The "Howard" is a newly adopted nom du theatre.

Mr. Rogers Takes a Beating.

One managed to penetrate to the backstage precincts of Loew's Fox, also, over the week-end, only to discover that Charles "Buddy" Rogers is by way of being a rather heroic young man. He is playing his eminently successful engagement on the Fox stage, under the handicap of a tenacious attack of the flu, that leaves him limp after every performance.

BUDDY ROGERS

In his dressing room after the second afternoon show Saturday, he was swaddled in flannel lounging robe and blankets awaiting the ministrations of a masseur who is waging a vigorous campaign to rub, maul, pinch and pummel the baleful baccilli all out of his system.

"It was way back during Christmas week that I made my mistake, explained the youthful Mr. Rogers, apologetically. "The flu hit me pretty hard, but the boys didn't want to lay off, it was Holiday time and I just didn't feel like giving in, so I worked the week with a temperature and have kept it up ever since. Somehow, I have never seemed to get my strength back. After each performance I am all in."

This is set down here, merely because the fact of Buddy's partial incapacity never would be mistrusted by anyone watching his performance from out front. It is the best he has ever had—an opinion with which he is inclined to agree, although with becoming modesty.

Still Likes Pictures.

"You like this sort of thing better than pictures, don't you?" was asked.

"When we have audiences like these here in Washington, yes," he replied. "But when they are not coming in and we play to empty seats, I could do very nicely with some other line of work. It's ghastly."

This, we guessed, must be an infrequent experience.

"Yes, but one that's fresh in mind. Last week in Brooklyn, we happened to catch a bad picture that nobody wanted to see, and it rained all the time, anyway, so we had a lot of fun doing the act just for our own amazement! Coming here directly from that slim week has changed our whole point of view. Just now we think we won't quit [illegible]siness quite yet awhile."
Clara, at about some more pie-board.
Yelling pi[illegible]role comes along,
were thrown

yes. Now that the band is booked pretty far ahead, I can afford to be a little choosy. There has been some mention of a new 'Leather Pusher' series, such as Reginald Denny made some years back, if you remember. I think I would like that. And I hope the public would, too. What do you think?"

So we told him.

Booked to Hot Weather.

"The band goes from here into the Casino de Paree in New York for 10 weeks," continued the lad who never deserved to have the tag, "America's Boy Friend," hung on him, "which will take us up almost to hot weather. By that time the Chicago Fair will be getting ready to open again and they want us to come back there. We had a great engagement there last year and wouldn't mind going back."

Romance? Just at present Buddy seems wholly wrapped up in his professional activities and is not wearing his heart on his sleeve. Most of the rumors concerning his matrimonial future are rumors concerning his matrimonial future. But, of course, some day there'll come a time——

It was only a few short years ago that "Buddy" Rogers, fresh from his triumph in John Monk Saunders' story of "Wings," the screen sensation of its season, attended the Paramount Sales Convention at the Carlton Hotel in this city in company with Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, his sponsor in pictures; Mr. Saunders, Charlie McCarthy and all the other high-pressure Paramount executives. He was a very young and very handsome boy then, surrounded every waking moment by admiring young, middle-aged and elderly women.

He is now six years older than he was then, but just go and take a peek at the crowd around the stage door of the Fox any time during the day when Buddy is inside!

I hope the gentleman with the bottles succeeded in slapping all the flu out of him. That's no more than the break a swell young person is entitled to.

And Buddy Rogers is a swell young person—don't let anybody try to tell you different. If you hang around that stage door, nobody will!

Gayety

"BEEF TRUST BURLESQUERS," Wiener Wheel presents the new burlesque show in two acts, starring Billie Watson and his "beef trust" chorus, with Evelyn Whitney, Ruth Rose, Betty Abbott, the Bower Sisters, Jean Carter, Buddy Abbott, Barney Elmer, Harry Evanson, Bert Morton and George Monfred. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Flying a banner which creates the impression that here is a recrudescence of the beef-trusters of an age long past, the new Gayety show is, for the most part, just another of the type that has been coming along weekly for the past several months.

True, with Billie Watson are six ladies of the ensemble whose gross tonnage is approximately one—but that harly justifies the title of the week's offering. Too, the six more than buxom ladies, &c., appear only twice, and, had it not been for an unexpected near-catastrophe, their appearance would have occasioned only mild excitement.

As for the rest of the show, it is about as usual. "Sliding" Billie Watson is the same brisk buffoon as ever—except for a few new skits tossed in for good measure.

Distinguishing the show, however, is the presence of Buddy Abbott, known in burlesque circles as the best straight in the business. Upon the evidence of his performance yesterday—especially in the skit with George Monfred, Bert Morton and Betty Abbott, with Abbott carrying on from the orchestra floor—we can heartily agree. In fact, that one scene alone is worth the price of your ticket!

On the distaff side, other than the titular sextet, Evelyn Whitney unholds the best of burlesque tradition, receiving able support from Ruth Rose, who also sings; the Bower Sisters, whose singing and dancing are among the better portions of the bill, and Jean Carter, who does the primadonnaing for the week.

"Sliding" Billie is supported, on the comedy side, by Harry Evanson, Bert Morton and George Monfred, whose Italian dialect aids in several scenes.

As for the line girls, a few more rehearsals are in order.

Autos Kill 5, Injure Several, Over Maryland

Toll of Week-End Includes East Shore Collision; Pedestrian Dies.

Baltimore, Jan. 22 (AP).—Maryland today counted five automobile fatalities over the week-end, with several persons being injured.

Bernard Blades, 22, of Bethlehem, Md., was killed Saturday night when hurled to the pavement of the Easton-Salisbury highway by the collision of the automobile driven by Vincent F. Ryan, of St. Michaels, and Emanuel Frana, of Syosset, N. Y.

Riding in the Ryan car with Blades were Edgar McClure, of Baltimore, and Stanley Jones, of St. Michaels, who were taken to the Easton Emergency Hospital. Frana was taken to the Cambridge Hospital.

Struck near Boonsboro by a car driven by Ralph Moser, of that town, Roy Miller, 30, of Hagerstown, was killed as he walked along the road. Moser said he was blinded by the lights of another car and Coroner Walter Shifler said an inquest was not necessary.

John Leaverage, 19, of Church Hill, was killed and his companions, John Plummer, 18, and Paul Everett, 20, were injured as Leaverage's car crashed into a telephone pole. The three, farmers' sons, were returning home from Centerville late Saturday night.

Several hours after he was found lying on a west Baltimore sidewalk, Franklin Jones, 55, died Sunday in a Baltimore hospital. Police said he had been struck by an automobile.

Samuel Marbry, Negro, 48, a Dundalk farm laborer, was fatally struck Saturday, according to police, by a car driven by William W. Woolston, of Freeland.

New Marketmaster Named.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Raymond Smith, assistant marketmaster, has been appointed marketmaster by the mayor and city council, succeeding the late Fred N. Wolfinger. W. Thomas Staubs was named assistant to Smith.

N. J. Merryman, 78, Dies.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Nicholas J. Merryman, 78, of near Rustburg, Campbell County, died yesterday. He was a member of the Rustburg Methodist Church and is survived by two sons, N. M. and J. F. Merryman, of Rustburg.

Garage, Cars Burn At New Windsor

$7,000 Loss From Fire in Heart of Town.

Westminster, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Damage of $7,000 resulted yesterday at New Windsor when fire of undetermined origin destroyed a two-story frame garage, owned by Charles and William Eyler.

Tools, equipment and two automobiles also were destroyed. Dense smoke hampered efforts of the owners to save the equipment when the fire was discovered shortly after 3 o'clock.

Because the garage was in the center of town and surrounded by frame dwellings, two engines were dispatched from Union Bridge and one from Westminster.
